HOW TO HELP THE POOR OF BELGIUM AND BRITAIN.

The movement inaugurated by Farmer's Provident Society to help clothe the Belgian and British poor is one which should have the earnest support of every Australian citizen.

Many have helped nobly in this matter, but the need is still an urgent one. Both new and second-hand clothing is acceptable, and now that the European Spring is approaching, a lighter class of clothing would prove most useful. Parcels should be addressed to Farmer and Company, Limited, Bulk Stores, 368 Kent-street, Sydney; and, if clearly endorsed "Clothing for Belgian and British Poor," the Railway Commissioners will allow packages to be sent Freight Free.

RIFLE CLUB RESERVE UNIFORMS.

Secretaries and Executive Committees of Rifle Clubs should take particular notice of the fact that we have on hand a large stock of heavyweight Khaki Drill of Excellent Quality, and that we are prepared to make thousands of uniforms at the following very reasonable rates, which are a considerable reduction on our ordinary prices.

Much dissatisfaction has been caused in several of the Rifle Clubs by the inferior cut and quality of many of the uniforms that have been supplied under contract, so we feel that the Riflemen who wish to look really smart and feel at home in their uniforms will welcome this opportunity of doing so.

TWO WEEKS IN SAN FRANCISCO.

THE PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION
is now open. Forty-one Nations represented at the Exposition emphasise its International Character. It is the most colossal of Expositions the world has ever seen; and its interest to the man of business and to the tourist is something that may not be duplicated for many years. Like Niagara Falls, this great Exposition, which has taken years to prepare, cannot be adequately described, but we have literature on its wonders which will be sent to you on application.

SEVEN WEEKS IN ALL.
Approximately from Sydney to San Francisco and back occupies 7 weeks—5 at sea, 2 on shore. In these 2 weeks you can see the Exposition, the Yosemite Valley, the Grand Canyon, Rocky Mtns., etc. No other line has so fast a time-table; but our return tickets are interchangeable with the other trans-Pacific Companies. Our route is via Honolulu going; Honolulu and Samoa returning.

FOR SALE BY PUBLIC TENDER.
Steamers Phoenix and Rose, together with all the Trustees' Rights, Privileges, and Facilities, at Lake Macquarie.
The Trustees of the Estate of W. W. JOHNSON (deceased) have instructed us to invite Tenders for the abovenamed steamers and trading facilities, as follows:—
LOT 1.—Steamer Phoenix (accommodation 294 passengers).
LOT 2.—Steamer Rose (accommodation 177 passengers).
LOT 3.—All Property, Buildings, Interests, Privileges, and Rights, Stores, Blacksmith's Tools, etc., engaged or used in connection with the passenger and cargo service on Lake Macquarie (as per particulars).
Tenders are invited for the whole or any lot or lots.
Tenders for the whole, as a going concern, will be preferred. With that object the Trustees are maintaining the service in its usual trading manner.
Delivery will be given to the purchaser immediately following upon the acceptance of the Tender, so that tenderers are thus assured the full advantage of the Easter traffic.
The above steamers and the Lake Macquarie Service are well known, the service being established now for many years, and the connection and goodwill form a nucleus of a very desirable business.
A copy of the report supplied by Mr. F. A. Spence, Marine Surveyor, is available for inspection by intending tenderers.
All tenders must be made on the printed forms obtainable on application to the undersigned, and a 10 per cent. deposit accompanying each tender.
Tenders will be received at the office of the undersigned up to noon on TUESDAY, MARCH 23, 1915.
The highest or any tender not necessarily accepted.
Full information and tender forms may be obtained at our offices, Australasia-chambers, 2 Martin-place, Sydney; Union Bank-chambers, Bolton-street, Newcastle; or at the premises of W. W. JOHNSON'S STORE, Wallsend.

STANDARD OIL ENGINES.
MARINE, STATIONARY, HOISTING, OPERATING ON BENZINE, DISTILLATE, OR KEROSENE.
"Standard" Oil Engines are generally admitted to be the most Reliable Oil Engines on the market. The Engines are built for Hard Work; the construction is most simple, and the Working Parts are easily Accessible.
Some four years ago we supplied Mr. A. R. Smithers, of Bermagui, with a 12-h.p. Double-cylinder "Standard" Marine Engine, and some two years since we fitted this engine to run on Kerosene. Mr. Smithers, writing to us recently, says:—"I have been using your Hydro-Carbon Gas Producer for a period of about 18 months, and have had the very best of satisfaction from same. Our Launch has done over 20,000 miles in that time, in all sorts of weather conditions, and both for economy and reliability I consider your Kerosene Attachment cannot be excelled in any respect whatever. I may also state that we have not had the slightest trouble with this attachment, no matter how rough the conditions were."
WAUGH and JOSEPHSON, Sole Agents,
Goulburn and Brisbane streets, Sydney.

CHEAPER FUEL FOR OIL ENGINES.
In response to many suggestions that we should provide a cheaper fuel for "Standard" and other Benzine Oil Engines, we have pleasure to intimate that we have made arrangements for supplying a high-grade Special Engine Distillate in any quantity, at prices which will greatly reduce the running cost of all Benzine Oil Engines.
One customer writes:—This oil is the best I have used. I have now had six cases; it beats benzine hollow. I get fully another 50 R.P.M. with a 6-h.p., heavy-duty engine, and use less oil. I recommend it whenever I can.

SKANDIA. SKANDIA. SKANDIA.
The successful CRUDE or KEROSENE OIL ENGINE.
As a comparison of the cost of running with other Engines, the SKANDIA ENGINE installed in the Schooner ALCAIRO, which supplanted a benzine engine of equal power, shows a saving of 5/ per hour on 8 hours per day, this is equal to £14 per week, and £728 for 12 months, practically double the cost of Engine.
Manufactured in from 5 to 600 b.h.p., with special advantages, suitable for every kind of marine craft and cargo winches.
Also for stationary work, pumping, electric lighting, farm machinery, hoists, mining, and industrial sets.
Fuel used costs 6d per gallon.
Intending purchasers before deciding on another engine should look further into the merits of the SKANDIA, as it will do for them what it is doing for others. A better investment never known.
Write to-day for particulars, or, better still, call and have a demonstration.

It's so easy, so simple, hundreds of people passed it last night; many were quite warm—one lady placed her umbrella against it whilst she stooped to fasten her shoe lace. A gentleman struck a match across it when lighting a cigarette—but he passed on; I'll bet he's sorry. Do please find it quick—it's a slow game being stuck up on the free act stage watching you pass thirty of the best.

1030 MILES.

BRISBANE TO SYDNEY.

ANOTHER EXCELLENT PERFORMANCE.

£190. 22-H.P. METZ. £190.

We have just completed a business tour in a standard American-built 22-h.p. METZ Car from Brisbane to Sydney by way of Southport (Q.), Murwillumbah, Mullumbimby, Byron Bay, Bangalow, Lismore, Casino, Kyogle, Grafton, Coff's Harbour, Kempsey, Taree, Gloucester, Dungog, Maitland, and Wiseman's Ferry, through to Sydney.

In all 1030 miles were covered, and to once again prove to you the economy of running a METZ, let us tell you that the petrol consumption averaged out at 32 MILES TO THE GALLON, only 1 pint of oil was added to the engine on the whole trip; the tyres were not touched (no punctures or blow-outs), and no mechanical trouble of any other kind was experienced.

Miles and miles of the road were simply atrocious. On two occasions we had to build a track with logs from the bush, as no car could possibly negotiate the ruts and boulders encountered. Many creeks had to be forded, mountain passes climbed and carefully descended, bush fires were met with, and the car detained for half an hour on account of the flames sweeping across the track and causing the hood to catch fire.

We were strongly advised to truck the METZ from Brisbane to Tweed Heads, and to ship it from Newcastle to Sydney.

It is customary for motorists to do so.

But we knew what the METZ is capable of doing on even the worst tracks, be it sand or mud, mountains or creeks, boulders, loose metal, or ruts and holes. So we did not hesitate to tackle either of the above stretches of country, and never once did the plucky little METZ falter in the hard, rough work we asked her to negotiate.

You are invited to come and inspect the car that put up this excellent performance—a performance which once again proves conclusively once and for all that no better Runabout Car exists.

IT IS BUILT IN AMERICA.

ELECTRIC LIGHT.

ELECTRIC SELF-STARTER.

We can now supply the 22-H.P. METZ with the above up-to-date equipment. Price for car complete and ready for the road—£225 Net.

BRITISH-BUILT WAVERLEYS.

12-H.P. AND 12/16-H.P.

These beautiful cars must appeal to you, and we invite your inspection. Prices ranging from £325 to £375.

They are furnished with wide 3-passenger seats, and if you are looking for a light, strong British Car you cannot afford to pass the WAVERLEY.

BUICK.

THE CAR THAT GLIDES.

Buick are leaders, and like leaders in everything else, have their share of criticism.

When sellers of other cars say Buicks are not as good as theirs, Buicks have not this, Buicks have not that, and show comparison sheets, etc., it is certain Buicks are a thorn in their side.

JUST ASK YOURSELF

Why are Buicks continuing to sell better than ever?

BUICKS HAVE BEEN HERE EIGHT YEARS

and their faults are only known to those who want you to buy something else. OWNERS KNOW OF NO FAULT.

The "Evening News" of last Saturday published an account of a trip to Melbourne and back by Mrs. H. Cohen, who drove her 18 months-old Buick.

LAST JANUARY

we delivered the first 1915 Model to Mr. Bourke of the N.C.R., and after using the car in the western districts, started overland to Brisbane "per Buick," taking the Northern Rivers route. When told

THE ROADS WERE AWFUL

Mr. Bourke smiled—however, he got there still smiling.

IT DOES NOT REQUIRE A SKILLED GARAGE MAN to negotiate such journeys, you can do it yourself.

WHAT YOU GET IN AN "OVERLAND"—

Part for part you get more in an "OVERLAND" for the price you pay than in any other car on the market. That's why the Overland outsells all cars in its class.

75,000 Overlands will be built in 1915, and we are usually sold out as shipments arrive. The same applies to all other Overland agents in all parts of the world.

The demand is greater than the supply, because the Overland is worth from £50 to £100 more than any other car selling at the Overland price. If you examine and compare the Overland with other cars you will see the extra value—you MUST see it.

TRIUMPH 1915 MODELS.

4-H.P. MOTOR CYCLES.

THE FIRST SHIPMENTS OF THESE NEW MODELS ARE EXPECTED TO ARRIVE FOR DELIVERY IN APRIL.

1915 Triumph Motor Cycles are the last word in Motor Cycle construction.

The improvements introduced far surpass in magnitude and efficiency any efforts shown in previous years.

The engine has been redesigned throughout with larger valves and improved silencer.

The Sturmey-Archer Three-speed Countershaft Gear is easy to operate.

The power transmission is direct from engine—chain-cum-belt drive.

The Carburetter is an improved Triumph, which has been specially designed for the new engine.

All other special Triumph features are retained.

The popularity of the Single Cylinder Motor Cycle was never so great as at present.

The Triumph was the pioneer of this particular type, and has proved its superiority for more than a decade.

A fact worthy of attention is that Single-cylinder Machines including a large number of "Triumphs" have been chosen by British, French, Belgian, and Russian War offices for active service in preference to any other type—convincing testimony to their reliability and efficiency under the most severe conditions.

MODEL H—THREE-SPEED MODEL	£92/10/ CASH.
MODEL D—FIXED ENGINE MODEL	£72/10/ CASH.
2¾ H.P. LIGHTWEIGHT MODEL	£65 CASH.

These 1915 Models will further enhance the high reputation which Triumphs have gained.

Every detail that tends to comfort, reliability, and efficiency in motor cycling has been embodied in these models, so that 1915 Triumph Models are pre-eminently the master Models of the [illegible].

WE ARE NOW BOOKING ORDERS FOR THESE MODELS, AND ADVISE OUR CLIENTS TO PLACE THEIR ORDERS EARLY.

PEARL BAY ESTATE has been known to the recreating public for half a century, when owned by a medical man who, while in his active years, could not be induced to sell. Since his decease two or three have bought several blocks. Now present Vendor of has spent a great sum of money in laying out roads, retaining walls, etc., and desires to realise under the hammer.

NO WORDS OF AN ADVERTISEMENT can adequately portray a full conception of the extreme beauty of views; even photograph or pamphlet pictures would fail to convey the realistic. The surfaces of land range from grassy levels to gentle up slopes, while parts are somewhat rugged. With a home perched on these last, as in so many cases at near Mosman Steamers' Wharfs, you then behold a farther extending stretch of water scenery and encircling land environments of attractiveness.

"MORETON PARK ESTATE."

THE PICK OF THE MENANGLE-CAMDEN DISTRICT, CONTIGUOUS TO DOUGLAS PARK RAILWAY STATION.

This High-class Grazing Property, which is amongst the best-known in the State, comprising in all about 2291 Acres, only 45 miles from Sydney, will be offered for Sale by Public Auction on TUESDAY, 23rd MARCH, 1915, AT 11.30 A.M., as under:—

LOT 1.—The Homestead block, in area 1464 acres, freehold, rich, undulating, park-like, grazing and agricultural land, most of it has been cultivated, and is now heavily grassed, and fit to carry 3 sheep to the acre. This block has FRONTAGES TO the NEPEAN RIVER AND HARRIS CREEK. On the land is the homestead, built of brick and stone and wood, containing 13 rooms. There are also numerous outbuildings such as stables, hay sheds, dairy, drafting yards, etc.

LOT 2.—Farm of 394 acres, known as "RICE'S FARM," extending from Menangle-road to the Nepean River, adjoining the Homestead Block.

LOT 3.—Farm of 433 acres, adjoining Camden Park Estate, with 2 cottages thereon.

The greater portion of these 2 farms is cleared for cultivation, with good timber on River Frontage.
THE POSITION OF "MORETON PARK," on the main Southern Railway, in such close proximity to the Station, at a height of 450 feet above sea level, makes it an ideal place of residence for those desiring a profitable country home close to Sydney. This property has been in the hands of the one family for considerably over half a century, and is now in the market for the first time. The number of rooms would make it an excellent Farm Boarding-house, with all its country attractions.
It will also appeal to Speculators as a subdivisional proposition.

LIFE IN LONDON AND THEREABOUT.

(CHRONICLED BY SIR HENRY LUCY.)

Parliament reassembles—Confirmation of Political Party Truce—Alien Enemies—British Surrender of Heligoland—Bismarck's Great Coup.

WESTMINSTER, Feb. 6.

Resumption of the sitting of Parliament has set the seal to renewal of the truce between political parties established at the outbreak of the war. To this end the Prime Minister contributed by assurance that the Government will introduce during continuance of the war no legislation of a party or contentious character. There are two such measures in existence, remnants of procedure previous to the launching of the thunderbolt of declaration of war. One is a bill for amending the Home Rule Act, the other the final stage of the Abolition of Plural Voting Bill. For the former Ministers have no special responsibility or particular liking. Content with the provisions of the Home Rule Bill, they were naturally inclined to leave them undisturbed on the statute book. The amending bill was a sop designed to mollify Ulster. If the Opposition are disposed to regard it as a contentious measure it will be set aside without expostulation or regret.

It is different with the Abolition of Plural Voting Bill. This is a measure dear to the heart of Liberal candidates, who have long suffered the disadvantage of seeing a constituency they wooed with every appearance of acceptance swamped by a flood of outsiders. I have personal knowledge of the fact that so recently as the week before the reassembling of Parliament the Cabinet were resolved to carry out their avowed intention of adding the bill to the statute book in time to be operative at the coming general election. Talking with a Cabinet Minister about the probable duration of Parliament, he mentioned as a reason why dissolution be deferred beyond the month of June that under the Parliament Act the Plural Voting Bill could not before that date be presented for the third and last time to the House of Lords. On further consideration, Ministers have admitted the expediency in the interests of peace of temporarily sacrificing their ewe lamb. They do this with less regret since delay is only temporary. Mr. Asquith was at pains to make it clear that the concession is strictly limited to the duration of the war. Should peace be re-established within limit of the statutory life of the present Parliament, relations of political parties in Parliament will resume their old footing, and the first fruit of altered conditions will be the enactment of the Plural Voting Bill. If not, the work will be taken in hand afresh in a succeeding Parliament.

This provocative point disposed of, the leaders of the Opposition are finally committed to the patriotic course of unreservedly supporting the Government through a time of national peril. Lord Lansdowne, back in the House of Lords in re-established health, marked his resumption of the leadership by a speech happily differing from the carping tone of Lord Curson's goodfellowship. The only note of discord came from a small group on the Ministerial side in the House of Commons, clamorous for the privileges of private members snuffed out for this session under the emergency of war. It has through the week been made incontestably clear that in their tremendous task the Government will not only be unhampered by party faction, but will be strengthened by the consciousness that they are truly the representatives of a united nation.

In the reading-room of one of the principal clubs in Pall Mall there is displayed a remarkable illustration of the state of public feeling outraged by raids on defenceless towns, and submarine attacks on harmless merchant ships, piratical practices culminating in attempt to torpedo a hospital ship crowded with wounded men. It makes the form of a notice in these terms: "In deference to the wishes of many members of the club, the committee request that members will refrain from introducing alien enemies as guests in the club."

The first (and last) time I saw Heligoland, the island fortress that plays so important a part to-day in the scheme of German naval policy, was under peculiarly interesting circumstances. We were homeward bound from Kiel in the historic voyage of the Tantallon Castle, which had conveyed a large number of Sir Donald Currie's guests to witness the ceremony of the opening of the Canal. Among them was Mr. Gladstone. In addition to his State cabin he had assigned to him one on deck which he used as a study. As the Tantallon came close to Heligoland he had not yet quitted his books, which prominently included a dictionary of the Danish language, familiarity with which he proposed to acquire during our brief trip. Before the island again became as a cloud on the horizon he left his cabin, and, leaning on the bulwark, had a long look at this rock in the lonely sea which, whilst he was still Premier, was a thread of the tiniest embroidery on the skirt of the British Empire. He did not make any remark. But one could not help thinking he was reflecting on what the patriotic party at home would have said had it been he, not Lord Salisbury, who had bartered away to Bismarck this priceless foot-hold for a mess of pottage in East Africa.

The acquisition of Heligoland was an essential part of the far-reaching preparation for the war to-day raging in Europe. It was a necessary preliminary to the creation of the Kiel Canal, which joins the Baltic to the North Sea. The whole organisation of German coast defence is built up round the impregnability of the island upon which, since Mr. Gladstone looked upon it on a June day dead these twenty years, millions of marks have been spent. Lacking Heligoland, the torpedo patrol of the German coast would no longer be possible. Nor might the German fleet snugly hide itself from the British ships the German press and professors jeer at as being "afraid to fight." Heligoland, once a favourite bathing resort for holiday-making Germans, is now an impregnable fortress, honeycombed with subterraneous passages, roofed with a bomb-proof plateau. Had Lord Salisbury lived to see this day his appreciation of the resources of the wily German Chancellor, somewhat niggardly expressed when they were contemporaneous, would have been enhanced. Bismarck did many smart things during his diplomatic career. It would be hard even for him to beat the artless capture of Heligoland.

At the time of the opening of the Kiel-Canal the then young German Emperor had "Dropped the Pilot." Bismarck had retired to his country house at Friedrichsruh, where he nursed his wrath to keep it warm. He must have chuckled when he read in the newspapers account of representative Englishmen of high estate flocking to the ceremony of the opening of a water way, designed to facilitate the secretly-harboured war designs of the Junker party. It was in its way a sort of friendly visit by the unsuspecting fly to the parlour of the far-seeing spider.

Friedrichsruh is within measurable distance of Hamburg, where the Tantallon Castle put it. It occurred to Sir Donald Currie, who had a touch of Mr. Barnum's aptitude for side shows, that here was a good opportunity of Bismarck and Gladstone meeting each other. Throughout a long career, filling the most prominent places in the statesmanship of Europe, they had occasionally come into communication upon grave State matters. But they had never seen each other face to face. A meeting when, the long task of each accomplished, they had retired from active life would certainly have been an interesting event. Sir Donald, accompanied by the late Lord Rendel, and one or two other guests, called upon the Chancellor. He was not at home, and they had no opportunity of carrying out Sir Donald's little plot. Mr. Gladstone was exceedingly angry, when a day or two later he accidentally came to hear of it.

CONCESSIONS TO SWITZERLAND.

The handsome manner in which England has facilitated the revictualling of Switzerland by fresh concessions in the matter of goods coming through Italian ports has, states a London journal, called forth the fervent thanks of the Federal authorities. It has enabled them to come to an arrangement with Italy by which large quantities of foodstuffs, metals, and other raw material will be got through without more delay, much to the benefit of Swiss industry.

A WOMAN'S LETTER.

A Quiet Season.

LONDON, Feb. 5.

Life goes on very quietly from a social point of view, and food goes up steadily in price, though we have nothing very serious to complain of considering how tight the grip of war has become. Milk is the last item to be raised in price. From Sunday it will be 4½d instead of 4d. Fish is ruled off most menus. In Roman Catholic circles a dispensation has been granted for the abstention from meat on Fridays. This is an almost unheard of concession, and I think it is due to the conditions under which fishing takes place in the North Sea, from which district most of the supply comes.

Social life is practically restricted to the quietest gatherings and small parties of near relations. The King and Queen set the example. There are no dinner parties at Buckingham Palace. Not a dance is even whispered. The world of fashion sits breathless waiting for the next turn in events. It is a strenuous time, and life is taken seriously. All the good works for the benefit of the sick and wounded go on uninterruptedly. Each week announcements are made as to the needs of this or that society. Different regiments ask for garments according to their needs.

I have not heard anything definite about the movements of the Australian Contingents now quartered near the Pyramids. I ventured to ask Sir George Reid a day or two after his arrival when we might expect them to come on to the fighting line in Flanders. He was most candid in all he was able to say. "I do not know myself," he said, "and if I did know I should not be able to tell you." He looked very bronzed and well, and his entry into Caxton Hall on the evening of Wattle Day at a quarter-past 10 was something in the nature of a star turn. This was on the occasion of the founding of a branch in London of the Australian Natives Association. This should prove a valuable meeting ground for Australians, who seem to lack something of this kind sadly. I did not gather from the speeches whether it is proposed to have a kind of clubhouse where Australians could foregather. But I think something of the kind should be undertaken. It is difficult to hear of the arrival of one's friends, as we have no lists of passengers by incoming steamers.

Dress and Fashion—Millinery.

I was hoping in this letter to include some reliable information as to the style of clothes. Alas, the dressmakers and large houses which cater for us have not yet recovered from the work of the winter sales which ended last week. The new models will not be shown till later on in the month. However, from the leading fashion papers one gathers that the reign of the tight skirt is coming to an end. Wider skirts, frills, puffs, and all manner of frivolities, are to be our portion. There will be balloon tunics and semi-Eastern fulnesses near the ankles. But will we wear them? No, I don't think so. This sort of thing may answer for the height of summer, but even then women hate amplitude of material after the neat, well-cut garments they have worn so long.

Nor will such frivolous clothes suit the time and the place. By summer we shall be perhaps at the most furious portion of this war. The opposing forces will be getting at closer grips, and the nation will be standing looking on at this deadly conflict, not in a mood for the lighthearted cut of garments which the designers of models predict. It has been one of the things most in evidence for the past eventful six months that dress has never been so simple, so suitable, so inconspicuous. Even young widows do not intrude their losses through their clothing. Every one is dressing neatly, and in a more refined manner than I have ever known.

You get this letter just as a change of season occurs. You prepare for colder weather, while in a month or two we shall be within sight of the finest spring weather. I counsel unlimited serge, blue serge for preference. Plainly made by a tailor, with long, well-cut coats. On your blouses you may launch out a bit. For morning wear nothing is better than white washing silk, or a good quality of tussore. Indeed I often think tussore is the better colour as it harmonises so well with deep navy blue. For little house gowns or dressmakers' frocks you can be a little more picturesque. Most people like this kind of gown to be made of one or other of the soft silks or satins, charmeuse Isabeau, or even foulard. These are usually made with a bodice that goes as part of the costume, though there is nothing to prevent your having more than one bodice, so that it may serve as an evening gown for small functions—bridge parties, dramatic teas, and even informal dances, when the world again dances! The skirts should flare a bit at the hem, and the tunic—for they all have tunics of some sort—should come well down. I saw a model I liked which had the tunic slit right up to the waist on both sides, finished off with rows of buttons, cut to the full length of the skirt at the back, but some four or five inches from the hem of the underskirt in front. The underskirt was of the same material but a different colour, the buttons were in the deeper tone. The bodice was cut rather like the mess jacket of an artillery officer, slightly open in front, but carried right up to the throat, and finished with rows of little buttons put on close together. This was meant for an afternoon gown. And was quite smart.

There is another kind of overdress which has some good lines and easy to carry out if you are depending upon some little dressmaker to help you. It is cut rather in the nature of an apron which slips over the head and is narrow back and front, so that the underdress shows well. It is kept near the waist-line by a belt at each side, and it is cut quite as long as its underdress. You scoop it out near the throat, so as to show the dress beneath, and it can be finished with rows of machine stitching or embroidered, as you think best. For washing dresses it has the advantage of being easy to wash and iron, and could be worn in fine, thin white muslin over a black glace underdress with smart effect. The sleeves of the gown are all en suite with the underdress. The charm of this kind of overdress lies in the good straight lines, and while you may wish to have it made up for yourself, with equal reason it makes a charming garment for a young, straight growing girl. I remember some years ago seeing a pinafore, we called it, one worn by Miss Ellen Terry in "Captain Brassbound." She had one in linen when nursing the brigands in their fastnesses somewhere in Tangier or Morocco. I immediately copied it and used them over my gowns when doing fine needlework.

There is yet another skirt I have a hankering for. It is made with panels back and front, which does not sound so very new, but the hips are fitted into a neat, close-fitting yoke, and the side portions of the skirt flare at the edge, as do all the newest models this season. It will make a neat, useful, and yet smart skirt to wear under a coat or even a cloak, and can be worn with any style of blouse you wish. Very often the full tunic skirts have a sleeveless blouse, keeping the bodice portion, like the skirt, opening over some form of lace blouse, the sleeves to correspond. This looks charming carried out in a black toilette, with a black lace blouse worn under the outer one. All the sleeves are long, and come right down to the wrist, where they are finished with kiltings of the lace or ninon, or any thin material of which the blouse is composed. Sometimes these more solid blouses suit ample figures better than having the entire blouse of lace or chiffon. High, transparent collars, and every device of elaborate chemisette is worn. We are much more feminine than we were.

Hats as yet are hardly settled. I have seen one or two pretty very small straw hats, simply edged with very narrow ruchings of ribbon. They follow the military type of toque, which has been worn all the winter, and fit closely to the head. Again, I have seen small straws trimmed with high tornades of flowers: for instance, a dark blue straw, with a narrow band and a high tornade of purple pansies, standing straight on end like an aigrette. The usual simple morning straw hat is making its appearance trimmed with a narrow band of ribbon and neat bow. I see ready to be worn great feather ruches, or rather long ostrich feathers, made to go right round a sailor-shaped hat. But at the moment you see nothing but tiny black velvet toques, as Belgian as possible, and women look as though they all belong to the same regiment of Belgian cavalry.

GREAT BRITAIN AND AMERICA.

DELICATE DAYS.

LONDON, Feb. 5.

It is hardly possible to avoid the suspicion that British and American international affairs are saved, just now, from collision and conflict only by grace of very careful handling. That the two great Anglo-Saxon peoples could be in danger of enmity, that the bonds of their so recently celebrated hundred years' peace should be wearing thin to the point of rupture is inconceivable—and we steadily reject a thought so terrible. For all that, we are bound to face the facts, and for many weeks now the facts have called for very close attention, and no small anxiety.

The ground would be satisfactorily clear, and the difficulties of the situation no more than normal, perhaps, if America were less closely linked to Britain by ties of blood and race, if the position of America as a neutral country were the ordinary position of an ordinary neutral. It is absurd to expect from any neutral the favours of a friend. It is equally absurd to look for that complete and unadulterated neutrality we sometimes hear of, that immovable poise and balance of a suspended sympathy which, faltering never a hair's breath from impartial equilibrium, is not of this world, but a rumoured, legendary attribute of the super-nations of the millennium. In the one case, if we are looking to find our friendly neutral more friendly than neutral, we shall be disappointed. We shall discover him laggardly aloof, and see our advances checked and repelled by his rigid appeal to international law. In the other case, if we demand from our neutral an unequivocal adherence to the letter of the law, we shall be faced by all manner of those hostile personal influences which seem to be at their liveliest and most effective when the law is most obviously against them.

Both aspects of the matter are observable in the situation as between America and Great Britain. On the one hand, we have America rigidly neutral—and we cannot help hoping to have found her actively friendly. On the other hand, and in respect of certain enemy trade and its bearing upon her own commercial interests, we are aggrieved to find her less neutral than she might be.

British public opinion undoubtedly expected America to be moved by the spectacle of a Europe in arms for liberty, and for all the great liberalising creeds which America is presumed to hold in honour. British public opinion expected her to be aghast at the ruthless destruction of a Belgium whose only offence was that it not merely symbolised independence, but died for it. British public opinion expected America at least to say something when her own Hague signature to the rules of war was contemptuously torn to ribbons by act after act of barbaric ferocity. This is a war against the world-oppression of a military despotism, with America standing by, merely looking on. In the view of public opinion, at any rate, it was unbelievable. But perhaps public opinion would be certain to be impatient of such a shadowy virtue as neutrality. Not public opinion, but Governments and diplomats have to face neutrality as a reasonable fact. And in these latter days even the calm, cold serenity of official procedure has been ruffled.

At the very crisis of affairs, when victory, turning slowly, is like to be assisted most of all by British power to prohibit the sea traffic of enemy goods, America hands in her Note of objection to Britain's view of contraband American goods. That is neutrality's appeal to international law. But the Dacia, a German vessel transferred to an American-German interest, and the Wilhelmina, freighted with foodstuffs for Germany, come hard upon its heels in securing proof that American business men and German-descended men are prepared to exploit both covert business and covert patriotism in the very teeth of international law. Congress itself, indeed, debates for days the wholesale purchase of interned German ships, though the first result of such purchase would be a substantial addition to Germany's war-chest. Worse still as an influence toward the dismay of Englishmen, who, disappointed at America's seeming lack of friendship hopes to see her at least strictly neutral, they are faced by a great German press campaign in America, and a whole motley of other German effort upon thousands of American Germans to make the States a rallying ground for the German cause.

The outlook suggested by this continuous stream of anti-British tendency would indeed be black if it had no other side. It has another side, and if ever the conflict between British and American interests should strain towards breaking-point, it is upon that side we shall rely for the salvation of all we hold dear.

There is, first and foremost, the weight of opinion of the American nation. We do not doubt—everything, indeed, assures us—that the bulk of the American people are sympathetic with Britain and the allied cause, which in essence is their own cause. The German poison works vigorously and insidiously, but neither it nor the more flagrant injury of business selfishness will break down the sturdy strength of America's kinship with us. For another thing, we have had ungrudging and powerful support from the American press. The great New York journals, in particular, have preached day in and day out the justice of the liberty we fight for, and the madness of the enemy we oppose. In the fellow-feeling of the bulk of American opinion however, is the base and root of our hope that these delicate days will be safely passed.

At the moment they seem to be giving place to days of solid understanding. The German press begins to confess the failure of its American propaganda, begins to attack Americans where once it was used to fawn upon them. The clumsiness and the obtuseness of German methods are doing much for us. The blunder of the threat to carry German shibboleths into the American political camps, already has loosed roaring words of indignation. The not less gross blunder which promises attack upon neutral shipping is full of bitter possibility for Germany. The aggregate of all these things should be enough. They should suffice against the sordid self-interest of a minority of American business men. They should enable the American nation to see that a Britain engaged in a life-and-death grapple with forces overwhelmingly vicious, deserves a better word from America than reminder as to subtly technical points of law. And if they cannot disturb the neutrality of America, if the nation which, to typify its own contribution to human progress, elects to front the world with a statue of liberty—if that nation chooses, nevertheless, to remain quiescent though liberty lie in the grip of a tyrant despot, and the saviours of liberty die by battalions, still we shall hope to find her neutrality wholly unsuspect and unfailingly impartial. More than that, perhaps, we may not hope for. Not less than that, Britain, fighting for its life, will assuredly demand.

WHY OWNERS RISKED THE DACIA.

"It is understood that news has been received in London to the effect that the Dacia will be sent on her voyage to Germany, as originally arranged by her owners" (writes "F.J.H." in the "Pall Mall Gazette") whether her cargo is insured or not. The explanation why the owners are prepared to face the risk lies in the fact that the profits of the adventure, if it were successful, would be enormous. There is reason to believe that the selling price in Texas of the cotton shipped in the Dacia was £75,000. If the cargo were delivered in Germany its value would be enhanced nearly two and a half times. The price agreed to be paid for it, if delivered, is no less a sum than £170,000—a profit to the shippers of £95,000, out of which the only outgoings would be the running expenses of the ship for three or four weeks. The British Government have already undertaken to reimburse the shippers of the cotton the value of it as delivered in Germany, or, alternatively, to tranship it from the Dacia after capture, and to deliver it to Germany in neutral vessels. The latter plan is obviously the cheaper; but in either case the owners of the Dacia stand to gain. Even if they write off the price paid for the ship (£32,000), they would still make a profit of over £60,000. Thus there is every inducement for them to send the Dacia to sea."

AUSTRALIANS IN EXILE.

(BY AMY E. MACK.)

It was only a tiny paragraph, just three lines or so, but it darted out of the morning paper and held me. It stood out like a spark against the dull, grey news of war and bloodshed. It brought a scent of summer into the weary winter day, for it told all who would listen that at Kew Gardens in the temperate house "Acacia dealbata" was in full bloom. A dryly botanical little paragraph it may have seemed to the casual reader, but to me it brought a message of gold, a message that could not be neglected.

It was a misty morning, the sort that seems to stretch in a dreary procession through the London winter. It lacked the excitement and mystery of a real fog; it was just grey and dank and dull, the sort of day that made one long for yellow beaches and white-tipped breakers curling in from a deep-blue sea. But that little stiff paragraph about the "Acacia dealbata" suddenly flashed into the dulness and brought the scent of wattle to my nostrils. I threw down the paper, put on my hat and coat, and set off to find an omnibus that would take me to Kew and the temperate house.

As I passed up Piccadilly and into parkland along Knightsbridge the mist was thinner, and a faint glimmer of pale sunshine lay on the grass beneath the bare-branched trees; and by the time we had rushed through Kensington, Hammersmith, and Chiswick, and reached the Thames again at Kew, the day was almost bright. The river was silvery, and the trees on the narrow islands which lie to right and left of the Kew Bridge were etched black against the grey water; but beyond, where stretched the gardens themselves, there was quite a golden gleam, and when I entered the big gates the sun was shining merrily on the green, green grass.

Just inside the gates I found an official list of the chief attractions of the gardens for the current week, and first and foremost of these was given the Acacia dealbata in the temperate house, so I set off straight towards the big glass house which shelters the plants from the warmer lands. It was pleasant to feel the warm soft atmosphere as I closed the door behind me and shut out the nipping air; but dearer than the warmth was the familiar scent of bush plants, a scent that is sharper and cleaner than any other flower odour in the world. It was not of the wattle alone, not of any one flower, but a delicious mingling the fragrance of gum and wattle, bottlebrush and epacris, and I needed no note to tell me that here were the Australian plants. There are dozens of them in that wonderful glass house at Kew, and it was almost uncanny to see the red and white spider-flowers, the pink bauera, the purple tetratheca, the nutty-scented whitebeards, all flowering merrily in their little pots. True, they did not look quite the same as they do in a Middle Harbour gully, and I would be sorry for anyone to form an impression of Australian wild flowers for them, still they did their best, the brave little things, and it wasn't a bad best at all for caged wild things.

And if for all their trying, they could not quite do our dear land justice, the wattles made up for them. "Acacia dealbata" was indeed worth coming far to see. One tall tree reared its head almost to the glass roof, and masses of gold flowers glowed against its dark feathery leaves. It is the wattle that grows so richly along the Carlingford-road and makes a golden avenue. It is the one that is most commonly seen here; it comes from the south of France to Covent Garden, and for weeks past the flower-sellers' baskets have been aglow with it. And they call it "mimosa," and do not know that it is an Australian native. Close beside it grew other wattles also in flower. There was a young Cootamundra wattle, with a few golden branches amongst its silver; there was a dear brave little plant of the sweetest of all the wattles, the pale "suaveolens," and there were two or three others, less familiar to my Sydney eyes, but all flowering gaily and making the whole corner a bright golden mass. Behind the wattles were gum saplings, tree ferns, palms, banksias, a coachwood, a callistemon, and climbing up amongst them was a beautiful hibbertia in full flower.

Close beside the wattles was the orangery, where yellow fruit was ripening on the trees, and waxy blossoms shed their heavy sweetness. I walked to the end, and gazed down, across the orange trees to the wattles and the gums beyond, and for a moment I was across the world, walking along the Carlingford-road on a crisp blue morning in early August. I found other Australian plants adding to Kew's beauty. In a house where grow the early bulbs and carnations, I saw through the glass a great gleaming mass of rose pink. "Azaleas" I said to myself, but when I opened the door I found they were pots of epacris. There were several species, the beautiful "impressa" from the mountains, the charming "pulchella" and "tubiflora" from the coast; and they had all been cultivated with such skill and care that, without losing their own beautiful characteristics, they had gained fresh loveliness, and a brilliance that is not often seen in the wild blooms. I was spellbound before them, and so were many other visitors. I longed to transport them, just as they were, to Australia, and to say to Australians, "There, look at these; never say again that our wild flowers can't be cultivated." There were many lovely blossoms in that glass-house: there were glowing cyclamens, hyacinths of pink and white and purple, tulips of deepest gold, indigo blue cinerarias and waving daffodils, but for sheer loveliness of colour and form there was nothing to compare with the rosy, glowing epacris from Australia.

PEGOUD'S EXPLOITS.

HIS WONDERFUL NERVE.

Brilliant war exploits by Pegoud, the French aviator of "looping the loop" fame (who has just been presented with the French military medal for having, single-handed, destroyed three German aeroplanes in succession), are revealed by Mr. Philip Gibbs in a message to the "Chronicle" from Paris.

"Provided with a new machine which he wished to try, Pegoud loaded it with a dozen bombs, and set off for the enemy's lines. In previous reconnaissances he had made a note of German ammunition stores assembled on a certain plot of ground. It was to this spot that he steered his way, flying very high, and taking advantage of the mist so that he should not be observed. When he was near his goal he hovered above the place, and, descending lower, dropped nine of his bombs.

"The effect was prodigious. Explosion after explosion rent the air, so that his machine was shaken by the vibrating waves. One long din of bursting shells rose up as though the earth below had been torn asunder. Pegoud flew away, elated at his success. Still he had three bombs left, and, swooping like a bird of prey, flung them over the heads of a company of German soldiers, who scattered in all directions.

"Pegoud's latest achievement was directed a few days ago against the enemy's captive airship, from which the fire of the German batteries was directed. Flying at a great height, and making a wide detour behind a veil of clouds, the airman flew straight at the sausage-shaped balloon. He was seen at once, and shots were fired at him wildly. He heard the shouts of soldiers, hoarse commands, little figures were running about like ants down there, and the balloon was hastily drawn earthwards.

"But it was too late! Pegoud swooped like a vulture in one of those magnificent volplanes which used to thrill me when I saw them over English soil. When he was less than fifty yards above the airship he flung his bomb. A dull explosion followed, making a gale of air-currents, in which the French aeroplane rocked with quivering planes. The ball of gas was rent, and like one of those squeaking pigs on hawkers' trays the German airship Drachen (the dragon) collapsed to earth. Never again will it signal to German batteries and watch their work of death!"

"A PRODIGIOUS FEAT."

M. Georges Clemenceau, writing in "L'Homme Enchaine," expresses the opinion that the raising of the new armies in England is "an effort unique in military history." It is, he declares, a prodigious feat to have raised all these men, equipped and armed them and provided them, infantry and artillery alike, with the munitions of war." M. Clemenceau adds: "French's contemptible little army has become, thanks to British energy and to the efforts of Lord Kitchener, a considerable army, capable of measuring itself with the best troops raised in two or in several years in the lands of compulsory service."

THE CITY COUNCIL AND ST. MARY'S.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Is it necessary to consider this suggested grant of land to St. Mary's Cathedral almost entirely from the sectarian standpoint, as it so obviously is by many people, whether they confess it or not? Is there not in us Australians such a thing as a sense of beauty and a civic pride that can rejoice in a beautiful thing, no matter to whom it belongs? It is a great pity that when a thing of beauty is to be created sectarianism should intervene, even though it has undoubtedly been fostered by the fiery and ill-advised speeches of the dignitaries of the Roman Catholic Church itself. One would think that the Roman Catholics, on receiving this land intended to hide it and the cathedral away from public view, and to keep it entirely for the eyes of those of their own faith; whereas it will virtually belong to Sydney, even though its actual ownership is theirs. St. Mary's completed will be very beautiful—the most beautiful building in Sydney, a church to which any city could point with pride—and it seems wrong that the extra land which is necessary to give its beauty full play should be denied because of personal antagonism, which should be subservient to the civic good. With the exception of a very few buildings, we have none in which the setting has been considered in relation to the building itself—a thing which is not forgotten by the architects and town-planners of Continental cities such as Vienna, Paris, and Berlin. It seems to me that the cutting off of a corner of Phillip Park, "the decayed circus site reduced to the condition of a scarecrow in bad circumstances," and the consequent curving of Cathedral-street, is not a very heavy price to pay for what could be made one of the beautiful spots of Sydney, to be enjoyed and loved by all citizens, no matter what their denomination. The gain to the city would surely compensate for what would be sacrificed—that is, of course, if we possess a true sense of beauty and a civic pride that takes precedence over a narrow sectarianism.

I am, etc.,
AN AUSTRALIAN JEWESS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The wise proposals of the works committee of the City Council with reference to the construction of a decent approach to St. Mary's will (I think) receive the approval of all citizens who desire to make the city beautiful. The cathedral of St. Mary is the most magnificent and best designed church south of the Line. It adds to the charm of the city, and is daily admired and visited by people of every denomination. Its many pinnacles, flying buttresses, choice carved stone work, and general treatment fitly provide a useful object-lesson, setting forth the joys and glories of Christian architecture. I have a fair knowledge of a few cathedrals in the Old World, yet am unable to call to memory a cathedral that enjoys a better site and better surroundings than St. Mary's. With Cathedral-street remodelled, the site and surroundings will represent perfection. The founders of St. Mary's were clever men. The designs for the cathedral were prepared by the late Mr. Wardell some forty years back. Wisely, he recognised that Sydney must become a great and beautiful city, and that all citizens will assist in adding to the charm of the city. A city is made beautiful by many parks and church spires. St. Mary's is not a cheap church. It has cost thousands of pounds, and big money is required to complete the same. The time has now arrived to make a decent approach to this noble fane. It appears correct to assume the large majority of citizens approve of the plans concerning the happy reconstruction of Cathedral-street and Phillip Park. It is to be desired that the City Council will without delay commence this very necessary work. When complete the small numbers of citizens who to-day appear to object to the plans will be highly pleased with results.

I am, etc., H. W. LITTLE.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

With the second volume of "George the Third and Charles James Fox" Sir George O. Trevelyan has brought his great history of the American Revolution to a close, and has incidentally produced a book of remarkable contemporary interest. Obviously, it has been written without any reference to current events, yet it is impossible not to read it without comparing the conditions of the British Empire as they are to-day, as they were then, and as they might have been to-day but for the American war. That war was England's great mistake, yet it probably proved the salvation of England as an Imperial Power. It marked the parting of the ways in colonial policy. Profiting by the lesson it taught, England henceforth allowed her dependencies to develop on their own lines, instead of forcing them into the mould approved at Downing-street or its eighteenth century equivalent. It is fortunate that the corrective to a vicious tendency came when it did. One may not unfruitfully speculate what might have happened had the result of the war been different or had George the Third been less obstinate and obtuse, and Lord North less futile. It is at least certain that the British Empire would have presented a very different appearance to-day.

The volume opens with the supersession of Chatham by Lord North, and the recall of Burgoyne. There were black years ahead for England. The civil war within the Empire was complicated by war with three several European Powers. The "little navy" school of the period had carried its point, with the consequence that England had no longer command of the sea. When we read what that involved we have reason to congratulate ourselves on our present security. The withdrawal of the Mediterranean squadron meant the almost complete extinction of British trade with Italy and the Levant. Speedy French and American frigates—the prototypes of the Emden—scoured the seas and caught numbers of British vessels. French and Spanish ships of the line beleaguered the home waters. If any British merchant was still sufficiently bold to tempt fortune and face the risk of capture he was liable on the eve of sailing to hear that all his able-bodied seamen had been carried off by the press-gang to meet the demands of "the most ubiquitous and calamitous naval war in which our country has ever been engaged." The American trade was dead; the West Indian trade moribund. Every day great merchant houses in London or Glasgow or Liverpool went bankrupt, and all because "the negligence of Lord Sandwich had left the seas almost bare of English frigates."

In these circumstances it is not surprising that the war with America aroused little enthusiasm. Powerful voices were raised both in Parliament and without against its continuance, but George III., who regarded the revolt of a colony as a personal affront to himself, refused to listen, and in North, Germaine, Rigby, Weymouth, and others of their kidney he had not statesmen, but creatures. Obviously, if the King was bent on prosecuting the war it was advisable to do it with vigour, but even this was not to be. North and his satellites continued their lackadaisical efforts and only showed energy in shirking the consequences of failure or reviling unsuccessful leaders. In this they offered a striking contrast to Chatham. "He always gave the entire credit of victory to the general in the field," says Sir George Trevelyan, "and when misfortune overtook our arms he never condescended to shield himself from public criticism by placing the fault upon an unlucky, even blameworthy, subordinate. Lord North and his colleagues inverted Lord Chatham's principles of action in all particulars." Thus on their return home the two Howes and Burgoyne, each of whom had done excellent service despite the mistaken plan of strategy imposed on them by the Cabinet, were met with recriminations and insults which disgusted the fair-minded members of the party.

The case of Sir John Burgoyne was particularly gross:—"Seldom," says Sir George Trevelyan, "was a General worse used by his official superiors." Burgoyne had performed most creditably, and his lack of success was due simply and solely to the fact that he was compelled to follow a plan of campaign evolved by a set of ignoramuses three thousand miles away. "Acting under iron-bound instructions" is the author's verdict, "with a far less than insufficient force of troops, he had displayed on several occasions the professional skill of a veteran commander, and on every occasion the heroic courage of a perfect soldier." This, however, did not save him from being bitterly attacked in the House. He defended himself in language which was to the highest degree unparliamentary, but everyone knew that he was ready to maintain at daybreak in Hyde Park what he had said over-night in the Commons. He was deprived even of the satisfaction of vindicating his reputation, for when it became evident the majority of the members was on his side the Cabinet adjourned the House. Burgoyne, disgusted at the ingratitude and treachery of the Government he had served so faithfully, resigned his military offices and went into retirement, "attended by the goodwill and sympathy of Londoners."

His experience is one typical of the next few years. There is a lamentable record of jealousy and mismanagement and stupidity in high places. With a North, a Weymouth, a Rigby in control of affairs on the one side, and a Washington, a Franklin, and an Adams guiding the destinies of America, it is not surprising that the war ended as it did. British Ministers developed an unchivalrous habit of taunting unsuccessful Generals with their failure by depreciating the American troops. What could be pleaded for British officers who had bidden British troops surrender to "a despicable enemy, an undisciplined militia?" No wonder the butts of these jibes were moved to protest that the Americans were "good and steady soldiers," and that it was unbecoming in a British Minister to traduce the honour of British regiments "by falsely disparaging their opponents as worthless irregulars and cowardly militiamen." Curiously enough, among the Americans were a great number of Irish volunteers from Ulster, which about this time was as thoroughly anti-English as it is now pro-British. "May the Kingdom of Ireland merit a stripe in the American Standard" was a toast frequently drunk in these years, and the Ireland which the drinkers had in their minds was not Catholic Connaught, but Protestant Ulster. Truly the whirligig of time brings its revenges!

There is no need to recapitulate the story of the war. Gradually the nation's desire to have done with it crystallised to action, and the eloquence of Fox and Conway carried the day. In 1782, in the face of King and Cabinet, Parliament declared that the House "would consider as enemies to his Majesty and to the country all who advised or attempted the further prosecution of offensive war upon the continent of America," and though King George would have fought America "as long as he could press a man or raise a guinea" he was forced to yield to the will of the people. So closed a war which, to quote Sir George Trevelyan, "was in the main conducted by British and Americans alike after a fashion which their descendants may remember with legitimate pride. Viscount Howe and Sir Guy Carleton, General Greene and General Washington, set a memorable example of how it behoves gallant and humane men to comport themselves under the stress of arms. The story of the manly and chivalrous spirit in which four generations ago the two great English-speaking nations fought out and ended their famous quarrel is a story that an Englishman need have no scruple about telling even at a moment when his country, with a steadfast and grounded belief in the justice of her cause, is in the throes of war. (Longmans, Green, and Co.: G. Robertson.)

THE ANTARCTIC.

Although the name of recent books devoted to polar exploration is legion, "The Home of the Blizzard," in which Sir Douglas Mawson describes his expedition to the Antarctic, suffers by comparison with none of them. Indeed, to Australians it possesses a peculiar interest, for it was pre-eminently an Australian expedition, the first of the kind which our country has despatched. Its purpose was primarily scientific. Dr. Mawson, as he then was, had no desire to reach the Pole or to poach on Captain Scott. His object was to examine what is known as the "Australian quadrant" of the Antarctic continent, and from the scientific point of view alone the geological, meteorological, and biological achievements of the expedition have amply justified its intention.

The party left Australia in the Aurora at the end of 1911. After establishing a wireless base at Macquarie Island (which has since proved its usefulness in the fruitless search for the Endeavour) they proceeded to Adelie Land where the winter was passed. One winter apparently is much like another with polar explorers. Dr. Mawson describes how they spent their time during the long gloom; what they ate, how they amused themselves, and so forth, in an interesting fashion, but this part of the book might have come from any one of the many accounts of winter in the Antarctic which have appeared. Even though they were in comfortable and well-equipped quarters, their experience was not free from danger. The cold was intense; 50 degrees below freezing point was quite a commonplace temperature. Even worse was the wind. It would blow for hours on end at the rate of 107 miles an hour. Its average rate for a whole year was no less than 40 miles an hour. When one remembers that this spells wreck to sailing vessels, and when one compares the average rate of our "Southerly Busters" one can get some idea of what these figures mean. It took the party some time before they learned how to walk in such conditions, and even when they were acclimatised, to the risk of frost bite was added that of being lost in a blizzard. One of the party once ventured outside, and was utterly lost six feet away from the tent, which he was unable to see. It was only the shouts of his companions that saved him from wandering away in the void.

The Antarctic continent is unique in many respects. It enjoys the distinction of being the most elevated body of land in the whole world. The average height of the great central plateau is 10,000 feet, and this plateau is as great as Europe and Australia put together. Individual peaks rise 5000 feet higher above this vast tableland, which is seamed by crevasses, and scoured by everlasting blizzards. No wonder that, despite the recent activities of Antarctic explorers, their efforts do not bulk large on the map by a coastline indicated here vaguely, there with greater precision; several mountains located, and an occasional line—the route followed by some pioneer—which only serves to accentuate the surrounding blank.

The part of the book which grips the reader most is that which describes the author's lonely march. When the winter was over the expedition separated into various parties, to each of which definite work in a definite direction was allotted. The "far-eastern" party consisted of Dr. Mawson, Dr. Mertz, and Lieutenant Ninnis. After they had travelled for five weeks the lastnamed, with his sledge, was lost in a bottomless crevasse. The survivors were left with food for a week and a half, while for the dogs there was nothing at all. They turned back, three hundred miles from their base. Three weeks later Mertz, who had been growing steadily weaker, crawled into his sleeping bag and died. Mawson struggled on for twenty days and a hundred miles fighting the demons of hunger, loneliness, and exhaustion. His feet gave out. Twice he fell into crevasses, and only succeeded in climbing out by superhuman efforts. And at last, by sheer good luck, he found a cairn and a bag of provisions which had been left by the search party. Two days later he reached the hut. It is a grim story of tragedy and travail, whose effect is enhanced by the utter directness and simplicity with which it is told. (Heinemann and Co.: Dymock's).

SOME NEW NOVELS.

In "The Wisdom of Father Brown," Mr. G. K. Chesterton (who when the last mail left England was slowly struggling back from the grave), returns to the exploits of the little priest whom he has celebrated in an earlier book, "The Innocence of Father Brown." We must confess that in his case innocence produced the better results. It is not that Mr. Chesterton's imaginings are wildly fantastic, for we expect that, but in the later series of stories his inventive faculty seems to have been strained and tortured to produce a framework for his pyrotechnics. Much of the book is padding, brilliant with extravagant paradoxes and Chestertonian apothegms, but nevertheless padding. Still we are glad to meet Father Brown again, the insignificant yet purposeful ecclesiastic whose wide understanding of humanity and toleration of its frailties lead him unerringly to the heart of problems that baffle everyone else. Indeed, they lead him to divine the existence of dark mysteries which no one else suspects. Some of these stories, and they are not the least effective, are based upon certain of Mr. Chesterton's well-known saws. For instance, if you wish to do something unobserved, do it not in a secret place, but in the middle of a crowd; the surest means of deception is often to tell the truth; the safest disguise when everyone is looking for you is your own face, and so on. Although many of them are not quite convincing, in three at least "The Fairy Tale of Father Brown," "The Man in the Passage," and "The Strange Crime of John Boulnois," the author has contrived an extremely ingenious and unexpected denouement. Indeed, had the book been written by anyone but Mr. Chesterton one could have enjoyed it almost without reservation. But it is not worthy of the author of "The Man who was Thursday" and "The Napoleon of Notting Hill."—(Cassell and Co.: Dymock's.)

Those who would enjoy an excellent story with a background of serious intention should read "The Valley of a Thousand Hills," by Miss F. E. Mills Young. The setting is mostly amidst the mountains and wattle plantations of Natal, whither comes Heckcraft, a young Englishman who has been compelled to try his luck in South Africa. A warm friendship springs up between him and Alieta van der Vyder, a charming Boer girl of the neighbourhood, and, despite the fact that she is engaged to young Johnson, his employer's son, the friendship ripens into love. Heckcraft appeals to a side of Alieta's nature which Johnson has no power to touch. Under his teaching she learns to appreciate the beauties of the place she dwells in, and to recognise that there are higher pleasures than motor cars and jewels can furnish. Still she is loyal to Johnson, and does not give him his conge until in addition to being an unsufferable bounder he proves himself an unprincipled rogue as well. But, besides adorning a tale, the author points a moral; she provides a recipe for a prosperous and contented South Africa and illustrates its effectiveness in the persons of her own characters. Intermarriage between Briton and Boer and immigrants of the type who will make the land of their adoption their permanent home—these are the two essentials. Some clever character sketches, some fine descriptions of Natal scenery, and a graphic account of the "Indian rebellion" under Ghandi (which incidentally raises another of South Africa's problems), are among the other attractions of an interesting book. (John Lane: Dymock.)

Miss S. Macnaghten made her reputation by writing about pleasant people in England and Scotland. However, lately her muse seems to have crossed the Atlantic, and her source of inspiration is the experience of those who go to Canada to make their fortunes or the reverse. "A Green Englishman and Other Stories," one might almost say, belongs to the literature of emigration; it is an enforcement in fiction of those lessons which governments and agencies so assiduously instil upon potential immigrants. Most of the stories deal with men or women who have tried their luck in Canada; some of them succeed, and some fail; in each case Miss Macnaghten tells us how and why. The Englishman, we observe, even though he wins through in the end, has usually a hard row to hoe. He is not quick enough to adapt himself to the new conditions of life. He may be like the Sussex bricklayer described by the author who goes west, where there is not a brick within five hundred miles, and then refuses to work at anything else than bricklaying on the ground that his father and grandfather before him had always been bricklayers. Or he may be a younger son of good family—a common type in Miss Macnaghten's stories—who finds that a classical education and proficiency in athletics are doubtful assets on the prairie. Sometimes these sink; sometimes, after a period of submergence, they rise to the surface again and swim. Miss Macnaghten gives instances of both. But the surest guarantee of success apparently is to be a Logie Dunbar, a Scots lad brought up to regard hard work, poverty and frugality as natural conditions of existence. Such a one, if the right sort of lassie comes over to marry him, may after a few years' struggle not unreasonably expect to see her queening it in a mansion and a motor. There is, of course, another side of the picture which the author shows us in "The Man who Failed" and "Empire-makers," but the prevailing note of these stories is naturally one of optimism. (Bell and Sons; Dymock's.)

"The Way of the Lover," according to Dr. Arabella Kenealey's diagnosis, is long and somewhat difficult. Phillida Ramsden has married the Harley-street specialist, and has for years lulled herself into the belief that she enjoys all that married life has to offer her. Her husband is uniformly friendly and considerate; he has settled a private hospital upon her, and continually appeals to her judgment in matters domestic and professional. In fact, he is all that the women of the twentieth century would have her husband to be. Yet when Phillida goes to the seaside and sees the children of "Bungalow Town" disporting themselves on the sands, she realises that something is lacking. A dashing baronet of the neighbourhood, renowned for his conquests, aspires to fill the gap, but the only result of his endeavours is that Phillida's newly-awakened womanhood refuses to throw away its fragrance upon such an unworthy object. In due course the right man appears on the scene, and the husband (whose many merits the author with artistic truth never permits us to forget) conveniently dies of cancer. The device of the electrical apparatus which finally reveals the affinities of the devoted pair to each other is rather absurd; but Dr. Kenealey writes with excellent sense about the general question of the working woman and the matrimonial relationship. (Hurst and Blackett: G. Robertson.)

In novels we often hear of peers assuming the role of commoners for purposes of their own, creditable or otherwise. Sometimes this actually happens even in real life, as we know from the famous Druce case. But in "James Whitaker's Dukedom" Mr. Edgar Jepson has reversed the process. His hero is a dealer in old furniture and china, uncongenially married and on the verge of financial disaster. The long arm of coincidence, that valuable ally of writers of fiction, brings him face to face with his double, the Duke of Lanchester, during a thunderstorm. The Duke is struck by lightning, and Whitaker, on a sudden impulse, dons his clothes and resolves to impersonate him. He means to taste the delights of ducal position only for a few days, but circumstances over which he has no control—that device so convenient to novelists who wish their heroes to possess a conscience—compel him to remain in possession of Lanchester Abbey longer than he intended. His path is not always an easy one. True, no one except the pretty and perspicacious daughter of the local vicar has the slightest idea that he is an imposter, and as her object in life is to become a duchess she does not betray him. But there are other unexpected difficulties. Whitaker is a somewhat austere individual, and is annoyed to find that the late duke spent much of his time in amorous dalliance with various ladies, married and unmarried, to whom the new duke has to be something more than civil if he wishes to play the part at all convincingly. At first the necessity was rather irksome, but by degrees Whitaker found that kissing is a habit which grows on one. However, he reserved his warmest salutes for the fair Elizabeth, and salved the pricks of conscience by selling the Lanchester racing stables and building model villages out of the proceeds. To describe how he extricates—or rather does not extricate—himself from the greatness he has in part achieved and has in part had thrust upon him would be unfair both to author and to reader. Mr. Jepson at the outset makes large drafts on our credulity, but if we honour them he repays us amply in entertainment. (Hutchinson's: G. Robertson.)

Mr. Arthur Wright is acquiring quite a local reputation as a writer of stories about the racecourse and the nefarious practices sometimes associated with it in Australia and elsewhere, and in "A Sport from Hollow Log Flat" he exploits the same theme. His hero is a city clerk, whose addiction to the turf loses him his position; his demoralisation is rapid and complete; he becomes a habitue of two-up schools, and a hanger-on at race meetings. Finally he descends to "spieling" for a living, and is caught in the act of attempting to work the confidence trick on a simple-seeming individual from the country. Instead of handing him over to the police, the latter, who, by the way, is the "sport" from Hollow Log Flat, sets out to reform him, takes him home, and gets him a job as a navvy. Mr. Wright is quite in his element in his descriptions of construction camps, country race meetings, and the iniquities connected therewith, and before he takes his regenerated and prosperous hero back to town to marry his ex-employer's daughter, he gives us some graphic and occasionally humourous pictures of various phases of life outback. NEW MUSIC.

Messrs. Enoch and Sons forward from London some of their latest publications. The list accidentally includes "The Admiral's Broom," a spirited ballad by Fredk. Bevan, which has been popular for two or three years past. The new songs are almost all patriotic in sentiment, and marchlike in rhythm, a fact which is fatal to any hope of descriptive variety in this column. One of the best from a popular standpoint is Frank Peskett's "Heroes and Gentlemen," which goes with a great swing, is merrily tuneful, and would make a capital march-number in a pantomime, or as a vaudeville song. "The Home Flag," by Harold Craxton, the pianist who toured Australia with Clara Butt, is a march-song of a more serious character, and by reason of its impressive harmonies really makes its mark. The great contralto herself introduced this song in England. "Two Men that Fought at Minden," by Valda Machell, is a melodious setting of lines from Rudyard Kipling's "Seven Seas." The roll of drums preludes this animated music, to which there is a refrain for chorus. "Courage," by the Countess Vanden Heuvel, is a setting of verse by Margaret Peterson, in reference to the patriotic devotion of those who bravely part with their loved ones as they leave for the front. "Courage," which is infused with pathos, yet does not lack melodic spirit, should prove a concert song thoroughly "in the movement." "Carry On," by Elsa Maxwell, is said to be much sung in England, where it is becoming almost as well known as "Tipperary." It is a decidedly attractive march-piece, with a refrain, "Are We Downhearted? No. No. No." A dramatic singer could do a great deal with it. "Carry On" would also delight pantomime audiences. "Fall In," previously set to spirited and melodious music, by F. R. H. Cowen, has now been arranged by that composer as a march for pianoforte. Martial harmonies give significance to the setting. Messrs. Enoch and Sons also include "Fall In" with their Choral Series, for which the composer has skilfully arranged it for mixed voices. This cheap series also brings forward Harold Craxton's "Home Flag" in choral form in the usual notation, and also in the sol-fa notation.

Messrs. W. H. Paling and Co. publish "The Flag that Stands for Freedom," music by R. Cox, words by J. C. Lauder. This is a descriptive song without distinctive character, except that it refers to the departure of a ship.

"Fear God and Honour the King," the scriptural injunction which formed part of Lord Kitchener's message to the First Expeditionary Army that embarked for France, is the title of a song by Laurie Kennedy. This song is decidedly spirited, martial and melodious, and deserves to catch on. The musical text hints both at "Rule Britannia" and "Three Cheers for the Red, White, and Blue."

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

An effort is being made in London to establish a closer intimacy with the French and Belgian composers of the day, and at a concert given at the Aeolian Hall at the end of January a programme of almost entirely unknown composers delighted the audience. Considering that Paris is only 8½ hours distant from the metropolis, this statement sounds somewhat weird to Australians; but English people in the mass travel abroad but little, and accept foreign composers only when it has been proved that "there is money in them." There was a beautiful sonata by Victor Vreuls (Belgian), and fine classic pieces by Jongen, Duparc, Chausson, and others. At the London Music Club Mr. Beecham in the same way introduced Mehul's little-known overture, "Le Tresor Suppose," and music by Stravinsky, whose style is compared with that of Debussy in its tendency to a miniature form. Revivals being the order of the day in London, "The Chinese Honeymoon" has been put up at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, and "Tales of Hoffmann" is announced at the Shaftesbury. In Offenbach's opera the cast largely consists of artists who played the same characters in Australia. Mr. John Coates, the original Hoffmann on this side, could not be secured, owing to his military duties, but Mr. John Harrison was engaged, also Edith Clegg as Nicklaus, Arthur Wynn as Schlemil, William Samuel as Dappertutto, and Gladys Ancrum as Giulietta. Two former Sydney artists, Nora d'Argel (Nora Long) as Olympia and Antonia, and Rosina Buckman as Antonia in the alternative cast, are engaged. Mr. Hubert Bath will again conduct on the one night. Mr. Hamish McCunn on the other. At the Lyceum, "The Three Musketeers" is to be revived, with Ethel Warwick (here last year in "Sealed Orders") as Miladi.

When "Cinderella" is produced to-night Miss Dolly Castles will reappear here after a long absence in England and America. This artist quite early in her teens made her debut at a concert given by her sister Amy at the Town Hall, and after a year in Paris under M. Bouhy returned to Australia for the principal soprano roles in Gilbert-Sullivan opera, which she played with the J. C. Williamson Company for two years. Probably the youngest prima donna who ever played those parts here, she left, after the Melbourne season at the end of 1906, and was engaged for the George Edwardes companies. In London she succeeded May de Sousa, in 1907, as Elsa in "The Girls of Gottenburg," and played the role on tour, and similarly replaced Denise Orme as Illyrine in "The Lady Dandies," at Daly's, and on tour. Her London and provincial experiences also included good engagements with Seymour Hicks ("The Gay Gordons" and "The Dashing Little Duke"), and Robert Courtneidge (Sophia in "Tom Jones"), and at Christmas, 1910, she appeared as principal boy at Drury Lane. Her part was that of Jack (a Boy Scout) in "Jack and the Beanstalk." Later on Miss Castles had a strange experience in an engagement to sing in German the leading part in "The Count of Luxembourg" and "The Dollar Princess" in Carlsbad and other centres. Whilst rehearsing for this Mr. Woods, a noted American manager, offered her remunerative terms for New York, and secured her release. The young Australian spent three years in the United States in enjoyable and continuous hard work entirely in musical comedy. She opened at the Astor Theatre in "The Woman Haters," and then appeared in "The Man with Three Wives" at the 44th-street Theatre. At Chicago she played in "The Tick-Tock Man of Oz" for 11 months, and was in New York for Charles Frohman's production of "The Marriage Market." Her last engagement there was at the 44th-street Theatre in "The Midnight Girl" with a favourite Irish tenor named MacFarlane. This artist, who has a fine voice, will probably visit Australia. Owing to an alteration in the steamer timetable, Miss Castles was called upon to leave New York at 50 minutes' notice, or cancel her Australian contract. She left the stage at 11.5 p.m., caught the midnight express with her stage make-up still on, and went through to San Francisco with the mails—a nerve-racking experience. The Bendigo soprano, whose return should prove welcome, was repaid by a family reunion in Melbourne, where she played Cinderella throughout the whole of the long run.

Mr. Raimund Pechotsch and his wife have received by cable the sad news of the death of their eldest son, a violinist widely known as "Jan Rudenyi." This event occurred at a private nursing hospital in London, from pneumonia. Young Raimund will be well remembered as a prodigy-violinist in Sydney in the middle 'Nineties, when he was a sturdy, fair-haired, and handsome little boy, with a remarkable technical facility. He studied exclusively under his father, who took him to London in 1897, when he made a brilliant debut at the Portman Rooms with the Royal Mozart Society. Amongst other important appearances he played the Max Bruch concerto with the Crystal Palace Orchestra, under August Manns. In 1901 he toured Australasia with the Belle Cole party, supported the American contralto at her song recitals in the United States, and continued his career in England. Eventually, after concert tours, which took him to Vienna, where he was presented with a diamond pin by the late Archduke Ferdinand, under the name of Jan Rudenyi, he saw his way to a highly-salaried vaudeville engagement under Sir Edward Moss. He was on the Moss and Stoll circuit for some years, appearing as an actor-violinist in a sketch, in which he was supported by Miss De Winton and Mr. Sanders, actors, who had visited Australia in romantic melodrama. Rudenyi was widely known through the phonograph, and "records" from his violin have been reproduced throughout America, Australia, and other parts of the world. He played 70 pieces, including six concertos, into the Pathephone, and drew a regular income from that source. His brother, Eric, a pianist, who studied with his father and then under Scharwenka, in Berlin, has recently enlisted with Kitchener's army.

Miss Beryl Starling, a promising young pianist, who gave a farewell concert at St. James' Hall at the end of 1912, returned here by the Nestor last Saturday, after two years at Leipzic Conservatorium. Fully three-fourths of the students at this great school of music are English, Australian, or American, and they hold their own brilliantly against the German minority. Miss Starling took private lessons during the last twelve months from Professor Teichmuller, the most famous teacher there, and two days before the war she left for London. Unfortunately, she left behind her a sum of money at the bank, a beautiful piano, and some much-loved personal possessions, including her violin and all the medals she won at competitions on this side! The cash will certainly be absorbed by the enemy, and possibly everything else. Two days after her departure bells were rung in the streets for instant mobilisation, and the citizen-soldiers came rushing out of their houses with hardly time to complete their farewells. In London Miss Starling studied under Tobias Matthay, whose school of music is famous, and his half-hour lessons were sometimes doubled in length owing to his enthusiasm. This Sydney pianist hopes to make an appearance during the present season, when she will doubtless be heard with pleasure.

News has been received here by Mr. Moses Emanuel of the death in London of his sister, Mrs. Mendelssohn, who sang under that name, and also as "Carrie Emanuel," throughout Australia and the East forty years ago. This lady was the first to introduce Wilhelm Ganz's "Sing, Sweet Bird," by which audiences at break-up concerts have suffered severely ever since. She was herself, by all accounts, an artist of brilliant attainments, and sang in 1873 under Lyster's management, both here and in New Zealand, in "Norma," "The Rose of Castille," and other works, before which she gave a series of vocal concerts at the Sydney School of Arts with Mrs. Cordner Miles, who still lives here. In 1871 Mme. Agatha States, Signor Cecchi (the tenor who trained Mme. Melba in her youth), and Signor Orlandini (baritone) arrived here, and remained on this side a considerable time. After her marriage Mrs. Mendelssohn and her husband joined Orlandini's party, and toured Batavia and the East. The Mendelssohns afterwards visited South Africa, and settled there, eventually retiring on their fortune to London. The deceased artist possessed a high soprano of great fluency, and was famous for the spontaneous character of her art in coloratura music.

THE CHURCHES.

THE TOWERS OF ST. JOHN'S.

The centenary of the erection of the five old Norman towers which are so conspicuous a feature of St. John's, Parramatta, and possess such a romantic and interesting history, is to be celebrated next Thursday. St. John's is the oldest Anglican church standing in Australia. The foundation-stone was laid as far back as 1797 by the Rev. Samuel Marsden, and on Sunday, April 10, 1803, the building was opened for worship, but the towers were not put up till the Macquarie period. The newspaper of the day speaks of St. John's as "the finest building in the colony." Mr. Frank Walker, formerly president of the Australian Historical Society, has, in an account of the history of this old building, mentioned the tradition of Mrs. Macquarie having, when leaving England, made a vow that she would erect a church in Australia similar to the one she was then looking upon, the last she saw as the coastline of old England faded from view. It was that of Reculvers, nine miles from Margate, in Kent. However that may be, the twin towers were added to the building by Macquarie a hundred years ago, the designs, according to Commissioner Bigge, having been furnished by Lieutenant Watts, of the 46th Regiment. In April, 1852, Mr. Walker says, the old church, which had done good service for nearly 60 years, was closed owing to its unsafe condition, and after renovation and rebuilding was reopened in 1855. The towers were, of course, retained, and their present day appearance is much the same as it was in Macquarie's time. The first pastor of St. John's was the Rev. Samuel Marsden, who arrived in the colony in 1794, but it was not until nearly nine years later that the building of this church, the first brick one in Australia, was completed.

THE DAMAGE TO WHITBY ABBEY.

Notwithstanding various reports to the contrary, Whitby Abbey not only still stands, but, moreover, still presents its usual appearance—so unaltered that no one looking at it from any part of the town would detect any difference unless he had been ultimately familiar with all its details.

That it has been injured is nevertheless quite true. The damage done is more manifest when seen from the inside than from the outside, and it will become worse unless something can be done at once to strengthen the damaged parts. The shots all proceeded to a south-westerly direction, but, strangely enough, it is not the north-east that has been damaged. Nearly all the mischief is at the extreme west end. Two shots, probably only fragments of shells, have struck and grazed the outside north-east corner of the north transept, but only a few small stones have been dislodged, and the two scars will soon be effaced by the weather. No structural damage has been done there.

At the extreme western end of the nave a shell has knocked down what remained of the doorway. The arch alone was intact before the bombardment. Now the arch is gone, and the ashlar of the supporting masonry on each side of the arch has been torn away on the inside so as to leave exposed the rubble of what was the interior of the wall. The extreme western end of the north aisle of the nave has likewise suffered badly. It also has been hit on the inside so as to expose the interior rubble. Fortunately, it is still standing, but in a very precarious condition.

The window arch has been so shaken and dislocated that the pendant fragments of perpendicular shafts are in great danger of falling. The small circular window above is apparently uninjured, but really it also is precariously poised. It is only here that serious damage has been done. The whole western fragment of the abbey is at present in danger of collapse. It has long been detached from the rest of the building, and has no support of flanking walls. Some iron tie-rods would probably save the windows if applied at once. The damage here is all that is visible from the town, and even here the damage is not conspicuous, except from the inside of the building. The shells which injured the west end must have been aimed a little higher than those whose fragments struck the north transept. They must have come obliquely over the top of the more eastern portions of the abbey, and have fallen against the inside or eastern side of the western fragment. To the fact that they struck this western masonry obliquely it is due that the western portion is still standing.

THE CHURCH IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Lord Gladstone presided at the annual meeting of the missions for the diocese of Bloemfontein and Kimberley and Kuruman at the Church House, London, a few weeks ago. He said that the keen wish of all the churchmen was that the Church in South Africa should be self-supporting on its own basis. The work of the missionaries and the clergy was being carried on with unceasing vigour, and it was extending and consolidating throughout the whole country. There were centres all over South Africa of keen and zealous men and women working almost alone in their difficulties. They had to cope with the fact that the whites were face to face with some seven million natives. It was for the white man to have a better perception of the black man, and he must set a high standard to the native or it would spell disaster to South Africa.

Dr. Wright, Archbishop of Sydney, left for Melbourne on Monday to preside at the meeting of the C.M.A. Commonwealth Council on Tuesday and Wednesday. He also spoke at the annual C.M.A. meeting in the Melbourne Town Hall on Tuesday evening.

The Dean and Chapter of Westminster have had before them three designs for the proposed stained-glass window to be placed in the Abbey which have been submitted for consideration by the Strathcona Memorial Committee. A selection was made, and the cost of the window is placed at £800. The late Lord Strathcona is described in the inscription as "Great Canadian, Imperialist, and Philanthropist."

At a meeting of the Liverpool (England) Cathedral Committee recently it was explained that, after taking into account recent rises in wages and the cost of materials, further contributions to the extent of £41,466 would be necessary to complete that portion of the cathedral now in course of construction. At the rate of progress attained before the war the chancel and first transept would have been ready for consecration two and a half years hence. The committee still hope that this event may be so little postponed that it will be recognised as one form in which the diocese may celebrate the conclusion of a glorious peace.

The Rev. W. J. Durrand and the Rev. Hepwell left for New Zealand by the Manuka yesterday.

Rev. Canon Alldis, until recently rector of Molong, in the diocese of Bathurst, for the past 28 years, has been licensed by the Archbishop to officiate in the diocese of Sydney. The canon will take up duty shortly at Concord.

A window in memory of the late Mrs. Stretch is to be placed in the cathedral at Newcastle.

A meeting of welcome was held by the churchwardens, parochial council, and parishioners of St. John's, Tamworth, last Wednesday week, on the advent of the new vicar, Canon Fairbrother. For the past 14 years Canon Fairbrother has resided in Inverell.

The Rev. W. I. Carr-Smith, formerly rector of St. James', Sydney, and now vicar of Grantham, Norfolk, was, according to a letter received by the last English mail, in a very poor state of health.

The Rev. Rudolph Sprott, who is working in the Solomon Islands under the auspices of the Melanesian Mission, is in Sydney on furlough.

The Rev. Carlos Stretch, son of the Bishop of Newcastle, will return from England next Thursday by the Orsova.

In connection with the Mission to Soldiers in progress in the Church of England tent at Liverpool, great interest is taken in the promised visit of the Rev. E. Wilton, B.A., and the choir of St. Andrew's Cathedral on Wednesday next, to render the "Crucifixion." On the 29th the Archbishop of Sydney will administer the rite of confirmation to the men anxious to avail themselves of the privilege before proceeding on active service.

The collections for Hospital Sunday in various churches and chapels in London amounted last year to £28,683 8s 7d, of this amount £21,832 8s came from the Church of England. Why is Sydney, asks Archdeacon Gunther, so dilatory in inaugurating Hospital Sunday? Some years ago it was started in Parramatta with considerable success.

A large congregation attended the Solemn Dirge and Requiem Mass for the late Bishop Grimes, which was celebrated at St. Patrick's Church, Church Hill, on Thursday morning, over which the Papal Delegate, Archbishop Cerretti, presided. Archbishop Kelly eulogised the work of the late bishop at Christchurch, New Zealand, where he had laboured for years, and where he had built up a magnificent cathedral.

Monsignor Cerretti, the Papal Delegate, who visited Parramatta last Thursday, was welcomed by Very Rev. T. O'Reilly, and Rev. Father Carrick, who met Monsignor Cerretti at Circular Quay. During the day he visited the Marist Brothers' School and the Convent of Mercy, and spoke warmly of the good work done in both church and schools.

The Roman Catholic Archbishop, Dr. Kelly, has arranged to bless to-morrow afternoon the new wings which have been added to the Home for Aged Poor at Randwick, which is conducted by the Little Sisters of the Poor.

Dean Price, of Christchurch (N.Z.), who accompanied the late Bishop Grimes to Sydney, left by the Manuka yesterday on his return to the Dominion. Dr. Phelan, Roman Catholic Bishop of Sale (Victoria), returned by the Malwa from a visit to Rome.

An audience of exceptional dimensions is anticipated at the Lyceum Hall to-morrow week, on the occasion of the farewell of the Rev. P. J. Stephen to the Central Methodist Mission, after seven years of active and valuable services. It is understood that a testimonial of a substantial character is to be tendered Mr. Stephens from the staff, committee, and workers of the C.M.M.

The Rev. G. Read, of the South Bathurst Methodist Church, who will at the beginning of April exchange offices with the Rev. W. Woodhouse, of Blayney, was accorded a farewell presentation by the members of his congregation this week.

The 64th anniversary meeting of the Methodist Sunday School in Glebe-road was held recently. The Allies' National hymns were sung by the children, under the leadership of Mr. W. T. Pettett; Mr. W. W. King conducted a sale of flags, and the proceeds, which, with the offering, amounted to over £20, were handed to the Belgian Fund. Mr. W. J. Maling presided, and addresses were given by the Revs. H. Wheen, J. W. Leadley, and K. Mason.

The Rev. J. G. Wheen, general secretary of the Methodist Missionary Society of Australasia, left during the week on a fortnight's visit to Tasmania.

On Sunday week last harvest festival services were held by the Rozelle Methodist Mission. Services were conducted by the Revs. W. A. Burns, D. D. Hunter, and J. J. Boyd.

Two Victorian ministers, the Rev. Norman Webster and the Rev. J. H. Dabb, have resigned from the Methodist ministry, and it is understood that they intend to enter the Presbyterian ministry.

On Wednesday next a tablet to the memory of the late Rev. T. Angwin will be unveiled in the Methodist Church at Kiama. The Revs. W. H. Beale, R. East, B. Dinning, and the local ministers will probably assist in the service, which will be conducted by the Rev. Dr. Carruthers.

The Rev. Dr. Watkin and Rev. R. Ditterich have accepted an invitation from the executive committee of the Centenary Fund of Tasmania to take part in their centenary meetings, which are to be held next month.

The Rev. John Flynn, superintendent of the Australian Inland Mission, is now in the Hastings presbytery.

Mr. Henry Johnston has been appointed assistant to the Presbyterian Church in the Upper Manning district.

The Presbyterian congregation at Abbotsford held a very successful annual meeting. One of the members, Mr. Pattinson, generously offered to pay half of what was due to the church and manse loan building fund, and the congregation at once made up the balance, thus paying off the loan.

The military chaplains' committee of the Presbyterian Church is endeavouring to arrange for chaplains to go into camp at National Park and Liverpool.

The Rev. P. A. Smith, of Warialda, is laid aside for a while through sickness, and his duty is being taken by Mr. W. Arnold.

The Rev. J. B. Steel, Presbyterian minister at Casino, has received a call to Young.

The Rev. R. F. Macnicol, who died at his son's residence, at Kirribilli last week, was sent out to New Zealand 50 years ago by the Established Church of Scotland, and had charge of St. James's Church, Auckland, for 30 years, when failing health compelled him to take a smaller charge at Epsom (N.Z.), a stroke of paralysis later involving his retirement from active duty. All through, however, the St. James's congregation refused to accept his resignation, and he died as minister of that church. He was in his 77th year.

The Rev. D. M'Naughton, who was formerly a Congregational minister in South Australia, and who recently passed through Sydney on his return from Canada, has accepted a call to the Macclesfield (South Australia) Congregational Church.

The Rev. Absalom Deans, B.A., with a large party of friends from the Rockdale Congregational Church, visited the camp at Liverpool last Saturday. An audience of over 800 men crowded the Y.M.C.A. tent, where a concert was given under the direction of Mr. Nash, the choirmaster. The Rev. A. Deans gave an address on "Soldiers of Christ," and Lieutenant-Colonel Humphries presided.

The choir of the Petersham Congregational Church has decided to render "Olivet to Calvary" on March 25. Dvorak's "Stabat Mater" on Sunday, March 28, and Stainer's "Crucifixion" as part of the evening service on that date.

At the Young Women's Christian Association began this week the year's programme of educational classes. Taking the idea of education in its broadest sense, classes are there provided not only for those who wish to study such intellectual subjects as literature and history, but for those who wish to fit themselves for earning their own living. Under the latter heading come the classes in millinery, dressmaking, manicure and hairdressing, and business method. For those who feel that they would like to brush up their school subjects, there is the review class. Others may give vent to their energy and improve their health in the physical training class; while more varied tastes will find scope in the St. John Ambulance, art classes, and Glee Club. Music and elocution are also taught, and a course of studies on the present world situation, by Mrs. Debenham, will begin on Thursday, April 15, introduced by a lecture on "The Nations at War," on Tuesday, April 13.

DAILY LETHARGY OF A SOLDIER.

Great interest has been aroused in medical circles here (reports a Reuter's special from Petrograd) by the case of a young soldier who fought in East Prussia, and is now a patient in a Petrograd hospital. The interest of the case lies in the fact that the patient falls into a deep lethargy at exactly 9 o'clock every morning, which, although he has no means of knowing the time, ends on the stroke of noon. During this time the pulse and temperature remain normal, and the breathing regular, but the body loses all sensitiveness, and becomes inert. This phenomenon began when the soldier was in the trenches, where his comrades, thinking he was shamming, tried to rouse him with needles and bayonets.

SERBIAN AND MONTENEGRIN FUND.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—On February 17, with your very kind permission, I drew attention to the necessity for allowing the Montenegrins to participate in the Slav Fund. My proposal was ably backed up by several of your correspondents, but so far no decision has been arrived at, though I understand that the suggestion will receive careful consideration when an estimate can be formed of the forthcoming response to the Belgian Fund.

In your issue of Tuesday there is a timely appeal on the subject from the Consul-General for Montenegro in London, and also a letter from the Duchess of Rutland, and other titled ladies in England. Now we have so many funds here I think it is not well or advisable to multiply them, but if the Montenegrins were allowed to participate in the moneys raised for the Servians it would meet the necessity pointed out. I am strongly an advocate for the Servians, so do not desire in any way to prejudice their case. The fund, however, has not reached decent proportions, and if it had not been for the two subsidies of £1000 each it would be small enough.

The inclusion of the Montenegrins would give it a great impetus, for English-speaking people, though they forgive largely, cannot altogether forget the terrible events of the night of June 10, 1903 (detailed in Chedomille Mijatovich's book, formerly Serbian Minister at the Court of St. James), which led to Great Britain's withdrawal of a representative at Belgrad, for a considerable time.

Walking steadily onwards, about fifteen minutes went by before, turning a corner, she came full upon the straight and less precipitous part of the road, which terminated at the beach bordering Lodman's Bay. Bess stopped dead; the outline of a ship, almost certainly the sloop she had seen from the headland a few hours earlier, was at anchor in the bay. There was a lighted lantern on the mainmast, and two others at bow and stern; this illumination was sufficient to show the rigging and ghostly outline of the vessel. In the fitful moonlight overhead it might have been a figment of the imagination.

Bess shut off the light of her lantern, for fear it should attract attention on board the sloop. She walked rapidly in the direction of the bay, keeping a wary eye on either side, lest someone should have been set to watch and guard the passage.

Now only some fifty yards separated her from the tide which was flowing in rapidly. She stopped. Two men were on the deck of the ship; they had apparently emerged from one of the cabins, and were now pacing up and down, engaged in discussion, as she judged, as they kept turning one to the other, although, of course, voices were quite inaudible at that distance, with the sound of the waves between.

She stood watching them with absorbed, fascinated interest; she saw them most clearly when they were near the centre of the sloop, the light of the lantern on the mainmast picking out that portion of the vessel with a distinctness in contrast to the sides.

One of the men was short, squarely built; he was wearing no cloak, but a leathern jerkin strapped in at the waist, with a pistol in his belt. He wore wide pantaloons, tucked into sea boots, reaching to his knees. His walk was the rolling gait of a seaman, with something of a personal swagger added to it.

Bess had no doubt that he was the redoubtable Captain Ugo Jose, prince of pirates, the most daring and unscrupulous rascal in an age when those qualities were by no means singular.

The man by his side looked tall and slim by comparison, although in reality he was only of ordinary height and breadth. He had on a long horseman's cloak, and a soft beaver hat, without ornament of any kind. Bess felt a quickening of her pulse; it was the hat she had seen over the top of the wall of Beacon Court.

She had not the slightest doubt that this was Juan Garcia, although she had always known him clean-shaven, and now he had a thick growth of hair about his lips and chin. She had not seen him for the greater part of a year; he could easily have grown a beard in that time.

Garcia, if Garcia it was, was evidently urging some point upon the attention of the captain of the sloop. Every now and then he tapped his left hand with his right, by way of emphasis.

While she watched Bess had been slowly drawing nearer to the beach, until she became conscious that her figure must be standing out more clearly than was wise or advisable, since she had left that part of the road which was in deep shadow from the steep bank on either side.

She stood still. A fresh sound struck upon her ears. A horse was somewhere close to her, pawing the ground with impatient tread.

Ah, she had been so taken up with what she could see, that she had forgotten what she could not see, namely the steed on which the rider of the night had come to his assignation.

She turned to look in the direction of the sound which now demanded her first attention. On the lefthand side of the road there was a cleft in the rocky bank, wide enough for two or three men to walk abreast; it was either natural, or cut for some purpose a long time ago, in connection with the mining.

Bess turned toward the cleft. As soon as she was out of sight of the deck of the sloop she opened her lantern-slide, and looked down the narrow path. Sure enough, about three yards away was the white horse she recognised at once as belonging to Juan Garcia. She had seen it many times in the old days, and knew it for its strength and ill-reputation. In spite of its age, it retained, as so many grey horses do to the very end, a wild spirit, which yields to but few.

A spirit of malice unusual to her seized upon Bess. Garcia had ridden on his errand, and that errand was one of a traitor. He should not get back as easily, if she could help it.

She advanced slowly towards the grey. It backed to the length of its tether, snorting, ears laid back, the whites of its eyes glistening, all the nervous energy of the beast depicted on its face. It was secured by a stout rope, which had been thrown over a spine of the rock, attached at the other end to the curb.

The horse, in backing, struck its hindquarters against the rock, and at once bounded forward, more afraid of what lay behind than the danger from which it had shrunk in front. This movement brought it very close to Bess.

She spoke to it in soothing accents. As a rule she had a wonderful charm for animals, arising from that instinctive knowledge that she loved them, but the conditions were unfavourable to her powers of seduction, neither was the horse in a mood to welcome an alliance.

Bess drew nearer; the horse stood still; she stretched out her right hand, and tried to stroke its face, but it savaged at her with wide open mouth. All the time she was listening with great intent for a step behind her. She realised that at any moment Juan Garcia might finish his visit to the sloop and come to fetch his horse.

One of the holsters in front of the saddle had a pistol in it, the other was empty. By the way the strap was dangling, she felt sure it had contained a fellow to the other pistol, until quite recently. Probably Garcia had slipped it into the pocket of his heavy cloak, after he had secured the horse.

Bess did not doubt for a moment that if he were to find her in her present situation he would shoot her at sight; for the man who had not hesitated to lift his hand to the Queen, would have small compunction about dealing with "Bess of the Beacon." Probably he knew well the part she was playing in that game of war, in which all men, and not a few women, were taking a hand.

As yet she could hear nothing but the dull roar of the sea and the angry snorting of Alba.

There was no time to be lost if she meant to accomplish her purpose. With a swift movement she lifted the noose of the rope from the jagged spine round which it was curled. Walking sideways, so as to keep one eye on the grey, she stepped forward. The rope grew taut; the horse felt the gentle pull forwards, and suddenly it realised it was free.

This was the moment of imminent danger; would it make a dash for the entrance of the chine, or would it vent its wild passions on the woman who had dared to interfere with its movements?

The breath of the girl came in painful throbs, her bosom heaving. She thrust herself sharply against the granite wall, finding a small hollow, which partially helped to conceal her figure. In her hand was the lantern. With a quick deft movement she thrust it forward, so that the light gleamed full in the eyes of the startled animal. It struck at it with its mouth, knocking it out of Bess's hand, and flinging it, twisted and broken, on the ground by her side.

The impact of the lantern turned the fury of the horse into panic; it dashed forward; Bess could hardly realise she was safe, before it had disappeared into the main road.

She stood for a few minutes gasping for breath, hardly knowing what had happened, whether she were hurt or not. The wrist of her hand which had held the lantern tingled as if all the blood in her body had concentrated on that single spot.

CHAPTER VII.

THE CAPTAIN OF THE PAOLO.

Ugo Jose had started his sea life as a deck-hand on his father's fishing-smack in the Gulf of Genoa. He was the youngest of three brothers, who together made up the crew of the small vessel. From his earliest years he had led an amphibious life, taking to it like a duck to the water, partly from hereditary instinct, partly as the result of training at the most supple period of life.

Catching the fish and marketing it at Genoa or Spezia filled up the first five years from the time Jose was considered old enough to brace a rope, handle a seine, or hoist a sail.

He was now eighteen years of age, exceptionally strong, as hard as nails, the master of sea-craft, as it is understood on board a smack. One day they had been fishing rather farther than their wont when suddenly a galley appeared out of a thick mist which had settled over the waters. Urged along by twenty-four bare-backed rowers the distance between the galley and the smack was rapidly covered.

Ugo's father had hoisted all sail directly he spied the formidable-looking armed vessel approaching, but his efforts were not of any use; the galley ran alongside, a dozen bearded ruffians armed with cutlasses and axes, sprang on the deck.

Resistance was useless. The father and three sons were transhipped to the galley; the fish in the hold, and all the movables were hoisted over the side of the larger vessel, and the smack was scuttled.

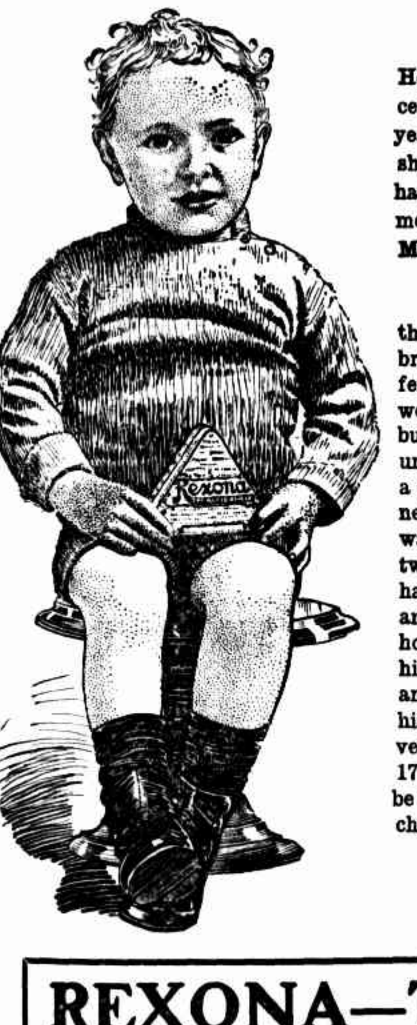
A MOTHER OF ELEVEN PRAISES REXONA.



This baby boy, the youngest of eleven, was cured by Rexona, the Rapid Healer. This picture is of the youngest child of Mrs. W. Pinnington, Port Vincent, South Australia. Mrs. Pinnington has lived in Port Vincent for 20 years, and she was so pleased with the way Rexona cured her child that she wrote thanking us and giving us permission to publish her letter. We have much pleasure in doing so, for we know it will be of interest to all mothers who wish to see their children well and well-cared for. This is what Mrs. Pinnington writes:—

"I have much pleasure in telling you of the great benefit to my baby by the use of Rexona. When about three months old he had a dreadful sore break out all over the top of his head, from a chill. I tried two or three different kinds of ointment, but none seemed to do it any good, so I thought I would try Rexona, and got a pot. It did not seem to improve his head much, but neither did it seem any worse, so I thought I would persevere, and used it until I had used three small pots, and then I got a large pot, and used only a little of that when his head was quite well. I was still anxious, as one neighbour said it was too strong for such a tiny baby. Another one said it was teeth eczema, and would return every time he cut any teeth, but he is now two years old and has all his teeth, and from the time it healed to now, he has not had the slightest sore or eruption of any kind on any part of his body, and has a head of beautiful thick curly hair. Perhaps you would like to know how I used the Ointment. When I gave baby his daily bath I did not wash his head, but when I had him dressed I bathed his head in nice warm water, and then spread the ointment on a clean piece of rag and laid it on the top of his head to quite cover the sore, and kept it in its place with an old soft towel, very open so as not to make his head hot. You see the nearest Doctor was 17 miles away, so we have to trust to ourselves very much, and I shall never be without Rexona again. I always introduce Rexona whenever I get a chance. I am so thankful for what it did for my baby boy.

(Signed),

MRS. W. PINNINGTON.

SUPREME COURT.

BANCO COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Pring and a jury of four.)

EJECTMENT ACTION

Chadwick and another v Foley Brothers, Ltd.

Mr. Shand, K.C., and Mr. Mann, instructed by Messrs. Holdsworth and Hamilton, appeared for the plaintiffs; and Mr. Kelynack and Mr. E. M. Mitchell, instructed by Messrs. Sly and Russell, for the defendants. This was an action brought by William Chadwick, building society manager, and Henry Chadwick, of Sydney, clerk, against Foley Brothers, Ltd., to recover possession of certain land claimed by plaintiffs to be portion of their property, and for which they had a certificate of title under the Real Property Act. Particulars of the case have already been given.

After the luncheon adjournment, Mr. Shand said that the parties had arrived at a settlement, which would relieve the jury of two or three days' further sitting. Plaintiffs were acting really as trustees, and the settlement, which was mutually satisfactory to the parties, had been signed by counsel, and would be filed in court.

IN EQUITY.

(Before the Chief Judge, Mr. Justice Simpson.)

BALLINA LIGHTHOUSE RESERVE.

State Attorney-General v Martin.

Mr. Bethune, instructed by the Crown Solicitor, appeared on behalf of the State Attorney-General, in an ex parte application for an injunction to restrain the defendant, John Martin, from carrying on certain works on the lighthouse reserve at Ballina, Richmond River.

Plaintiff set out in his statement of claim that about 37 acres of Crown land, situated at Ballina, had been reserved for the purpose of a lighthouse and signal station, which land was known as the "Lighthouse Reserve." About February 15 last the defendant commenced to erect, and still continued with the erection of, certain plant for mining operations adjacent to the lighthouse station on the reserve, and occupied the reserve for the purpose of an encampment for large numbers of workmen in connection with the works. The reserve consisted largely of raw sand, and the disturbance of the same was highly dangerous to the lighthouse, signal station, and the reserve generally. The defendant had been repeatedly warned by the various Government departments concerned against continuing such operations until a title had been obtained by him in accordance with the provisions of the Mining Act. Notice had recently been served upon the defendant to cease occupying the reserve for the purpose mentioned, but he had ignored the notice, and was proceeding with the works.

Plaintiff feared that unless the defendant was restrained by order of the Court serious damage would be caused to the reserve, lighthouse, and signal station. He, therefore, prayed that the defendant, his servants, and agents, be restrained by injunction from carrying on the works and continuing the occupation of the reserve, and that he be ordered to remove the plant and restore the reserve to the state in which it was before the commencement of the works by him.

His Honor granted an injunction till April 1 next, with leave to the defendant to move to have the injunction dissolved.

(Before Mr. Justice Harvey.)

COMMONWEALTH OIL CORPORATION.

APPOINTMENT OF RECEIVER AND MANAGER EXTENDED.

Mr. R. H. L. Innes, instructed by Messrs. Minter, Simpson, and Co., appeared on behalf of John Westall Pearson, representing himself and certain debenture-holders in the Commonwealth Oil Corporation, and moved to continue, until July 31 next, the order made on May 15 last appointing William Horace Fletcher receiver and manager of the debenture stock issued by the Commonwealth Oil Corporation, Ltd., and of the property of the corporation comprised in the said debentures, situated within the jurisdiction of the Court.

Mr. Collins, instructed by Mr. H. D. Braund, appeared for the respondents, the Commonwealth Oil Corporation, Ltd.; Sir John Brunner, baronet, and Arthur Bracy Langridge, to consent.

His Honor granted the application as asked.

SUIT FOR INJUNCTION.

Foy v McLeish.

The suit of John Foy v Daniel Matthew McLeish was mentioned.

The plaintiff had obtained an interim injunction restraining the defendant from further proceeding upon a judgment obtained by the latter at common law against Foy for the sum of £5401 14s 3d, on the terms of the plaintiff giving security for an overdraft amounting to about £1200. Such security was given, but the defendant subsequently alleged that the plaintiff had other assets, which he should have brought in as part of the security, and on his (defendant's) application an ex parte injunction was granted restraining the plaintiff from parting with such other assets pending the hearing of the suit.

On the application of Mr. S. A. Thompson, instructed by Mr. F. R. Cowper, agent for Messrs. Dibbs and Farrell, of Temora, who appeared for the plaintiff, the motion to continue the ex parte injunction was allowed to stand over till the 31st inst, the injunction to continue in the meantime.

Mr. Langer Owen, K.C., and Mr. Parker, instructed by Messrs. Garland, Seaborn, and Abbott, appeared for the defendant.

MOTION FOR A DECREE.

Stuart v Stuart and another.

Mr. Maughan (instructed by Messrs. S. J. Bull and Son), who, with Mr. Langer Owen, K.C., appeared for Grace Olive Stuart, plaintiff in the suit of Stuart v Stuart and another, and executrix of the will of James Stuart, deceased, and moved for a decree on admissions, the defendants, Adam Stuart and Walter Stuart, having failed to file a statement of defence.

Plaintiff set out in her statement of claim that her late husband, James Stuart, and the defendants, who were his brothers, had carried on business in partnership as builders and contractors in Sydney and Taylor-street, Annandale. By an indenture, dated December 15, 1911, it was agreed that the three brothers should continue to carry on the partnership under the name of Stuart and Co. on certain terms, one of which was that the partners should have equal shares in the business. After the date of the indenture the parties carried on the partnership until the death of James Stuart in June last, since when differences had arisen between plaintiff and the defendants as to their respective rights in the partnership. Plaintiff alleged that she had made repeated demands on the defendants to settle the differences by agreement or compromise, and without invoking the assistance of the Court, but the demands failed. On November 25 last the plaintiff served notice on the defendants that the partnership was to be dissolved from and after November 30.

Owing to the differences of opinion between them, it had become impossible for plaintiff, as executrix of her husband's will, and the defendants to act together in the winding-up of the partnership business, and she was desirous that it should be wound up under the direction of the Court. She, therefore, prayed that the partnership should be wound up and the assets realised and distributed under the direction of the Court; and that so far as may be necessary an account may be taken of the dealings and transactions of the partnership.

The matter was recently before the Court on an application by the defendants for a stay of all further proceedings in the suit until further notice, on the ground that clause 23 of the indenture of December 15, 1911, provided that in the determination of the partnership, other than as previously provided for in the agreement, the matter should be referred to arbitration in the event of the parties failing to agree in respect of the appointment of an accountant or as to the value of the property and assets. Defendants stated that they were ready and willing to do all things necessary to have the matters in dispute settled by arbitration, as provided by the indenture.

His Honor dismissed the application of the defendants, who thereupon, Mr. Maughan stated, decided not to file a defence.

The Chief Clerk in Equity had filed a certificate to the effect that no statement of defence had been filed on behalf of the defendants.

His Honor granted a decree as asked, the matter of the appointment of a receiver and manager of the partnership assets to be referred to the Master in the event of the parties failing to agree to the appointment of Mr. W. H. Palmer to that position.

ALLEGED INFRINGEMENT OF A PATENT.

Gardiner v Hodkinson and Co.

Argument was concluded, and his Honor reserved his decision.

NO. 1 JURY COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Sly and a jury of four.)

LITIGATION OVER A POULTRY FARM.

M'Crea v Marsden.

Mr. H. H. Mason and Mr. Weston, instructed by Mr. Harry L. Brown, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Pickburn, instructed by Messrs. Perkins, Stevenson, and Co. (agents for Mr. C. E. Byrnes, of Parramatta), for the defendants. This was an action brought by Charles Geyde M'Crea against A. E. Marsden, to recover the sum of £500 paid by him in connection with the purchase from defendant of a poultry farm at Parramatta. Plaintiff alleged that he was induced to sign the contract owing to the misrepresentation of one Heyns.

Defendant in his pleas denied that Heyns had made the contract referred to without the knowledge or consent of plaintiff, as alleged, or at all; that Heyns made no misrepresentation to the plaintiff, nor did he request plaintiff to sign the contract with him and pay £500 thereunder.

At the close of plaintiff's case Mr. Pickburn moved for a nonsuit, on the ground that as plaintiff sued for money had and received by defendant he could not succeed unless he proved that notice that the £500 was paid by mistake was given to defendant, and demand made for its return, either by plaintiff or by Mrs. M'Crea and Mrs. Heyns, in whose names the property was bought. Another ground was that, supposing the contract could be voided, it must be voided as a contract between plaintiff or his wife and Heyns, there being no privity whatever in the matter between plaintiff and defendant. If such an action would lie against defendant the result would be that he would lose £500 after conveying the property to Heyns. Plaintiff had lodged a caveat against Heyns dealing with the land, and he could recover the £500 from him.

His Honor, after hearing argument, said that whatever his opinion was he thought it better that the whole case should go before the jury.

Defendant then gave evidence that he sold the property to Heyns for £1250, and he knew nobody else in the transaction. He saw plaintiff two or three weeks after the conveyance to Heyns was signed, when M'Crea complained of Heyns. Defendant replied that he did not know plaintiff in the transaction at all, and that the only person he knew was Heyns.

The evidence and counsel's addresses were completed, but the case is still part heard.

NO. 2 JURY COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Ferguson and a jury of four.)

ALLEGED STOREKEEPING PARTNERSHIP.

D. Mitchell and Co. v Glaser and Co.

The case was continued in which Messrs. D. Mitchell and Co., sued William Urben and W. B. Dark, of Urbenville, near the Queensland border, claiming £343 13s 1d, alleged to be due for goods sold and delivered and money lent to Messrs. C. Glaser and Co., of Urbenville, in which firm, it was alleged, the two defendants were interested as partners. The defence to the action is that there was no partnership in existence, and that the goods were sold and the money lent to the late Mr. C. Glaser, who was carrying on the business at the time.

Mr. Ralston, K.C., and Mr. Delohery, instructed by Mr. Alfred Mitchell, appeared for the plaintiffs. Mr. Campbell, K.C., and Mr. Boyce, instructed by Messrs. Iceton, Faithful and Maddock, as agents for Messrs. Cope and Norton, of Casino, appeared for the defendants.

The case remains part heard.

On this matter he would reserve his decision.

(Before Mr. Justice Street.)

DAVENPORT v DAVENPORT.

His Honor delivered his reserved judgment in the suit brought by Margaret Davenport, formerly Eady, for a dissolution of her marriage with Frederick Davenport on the ground of desertion. The decision had been reserved on the question of domicile. The marriage certificate, said his Honor, showed that at the time of the marriage respondent was 20 years of age, and his birthplace was given as England. He had been in New South Wales three or four years before his marriage. Respondent's father had been dead a good many years. The question was whether it was sufficient to change respondent's domicile for respondent's mother to come to New South Wales. After consideration his Honor had concluded that this was sufficient, and, being satisfied on the issue of desertion, a decree nisi was granted, returnable in six months.

HEILDING v HEILDING.

His Honor delivered his reserved decision in the suit in which Florence Mary Jane Heilding, formerly Clarke, sought a divorce from Edward John Heilding, on the ground of desertion. COMMONWEALTH ARBITRATION COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Powers.)

WATERSIDE WORKERS' APPLICATION.

The application made by the Waterside Workers' Federation to re-open the award made in 1914, so that bulk coke could be treated as special cargo, was again before the Court. The application was directed against the Interstate Steamship Company, Ltd. (Scott Fell, and Co.).

His Honor said that the matter could not be regarded as urgent, and he had decided it should be left over until the return of the President of the Court, who was expected back in Australia next month. The matter would be allowed to stand over until May 1.

Mr. Bavin, instructed by Mr. J. B. Moffatt, appeared for the Waterside Workers' Federation; and Mr. Curlewis, instructed by Messrs. Minter, Simpson, and Co., appeared for the Interstate Steamship Company.

POSTAL EMPLOYEES' APPLICATION.

The application of the Commonwealth Postmasters' Association and the Post and Telegraph Officers' Association was again before the Court.

Mr. Wilson, secretary of the Commonwealth Post and Telegraph Association, said that a scheme for the amalgamation of certain organisations connected with the post and telegraph service was on foot, and it was undesirable that the applications should come before the Court until some finality was reached with regard to the negotiations.

His Honor allowed the matter to stand over for three weeks.

A.W.U.

REGISTRATION TO STAND.

The application made by W. Killen, pastoralist, of Bourke, was again mentioned.

His Honor said he had asked the parties to attend, as he desired to know what would be a reasonable time within which the rules could be altered.

Mr. Lamb, K.C., for the applicant, said that he understood from Dr. Brissenden that the union would not be able to deal with the rules until after the next executive meeting. That could not be held until some time in the month of May.

His Honor said that that appeared to be a reasonable time to allow for the alterations. "I have decided," continued his Honor, "not to cancel the registration of the union, as a matter of fact, but to make an order which will be cancelled unless certain conditions are complied with. After that the matter can be again mentioned."

INDUSTRIAL ARBITRATION COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Heydon.)

The Federated Ironworkers' Association of Australia (N.S.W. division) applied to his Honor yesterday to have the constitution of the Iron and Shipbuilding Trade Group (No. 14 Board) varied and enlarged, so as to give the board jurisdiction over the following:—Assistants to forgers and to plumbers, furnacemen, dressers, grinders, storemen, toolcollectors, power-hammer drivers, dogmen, and lifters.

Mr. Drake appeared for the applicants, and Mr. Wegg-Horne for the Iron Trades Engineers' Association, and Mr. Grocott for the Amalgamated Society of Engineers.

His Honor granted a portion of the application, but ordered the rest to stand over till 26th inst, for service of moulders and storemen, and settlement of the question of furnacemen and engineers.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

(Before the Chief Justice, Sir William Cullen, and juries.)

Mr. H. Harris, Crown Prosecutor.

WOUNDING WITH INTENT.

James Finn, 30, pleaded not guilty to charges of attempting to murder Phyllis Hume, and wounding with intent to do grievous bodily harm. He was convicted on the second count, and remanded for sentence.

Mr. M'Mahon appeared for accused.

It was stated that Finn quarrelled with Hume, in Stanley-street, city, on October 14, and stabbed her in the back with a penknife. He then cut his throat.

DEATH SENTENCE RECORDED.

Thomas Carrington Tansley, 24, labourer, was convicted of wounding his sister, Violet Lillian Warner, with intent to murder her, at Marrickville, on October 6. Sentence of death was recorded.

Mr. Martin, instructed by Mr. J. W. Abigail, appeared for accused.

It was urged on behalf of accused that he was insane at the time of the crime, and was not responsible for his actions. He had been worried over an illness which his mother was undergoing, and was without work at the time.

A verdict of guilty was returned, with a strong recommendation to mercy.

His Honor: Upon what grounds?

The foreman: On the grounds of temporary insanity. We are of opinion that at the time accused committed this crime he was not accountable for his actions.

His Honor: That finding is inconsistent.

Mr. Martin: I submit I am entitled to a verdict of not guilty on the grounds of insanity. I ask that the jury be directed to return a verdict of not guilty on the grounds of insanity.

The jury ultimately returned a verdict of guilty, with a recommendation to mercy.

His Honor directed that sentence of death be recorded, and intimated that the recommendation of the jury would be forwarded to the Executive Council.

DISTRICT COURT.

(Before Judge Backhouse.)

CLAIM AGAINST CAMPSIE BAKER.

Reed v Sandvoss.

This was a case in which Frederick Reed, flour merchant, of 395 Kent-street, Sydney, sued August Sandvoss, baker, of Beamish-street, Campsie, for the recovery of £131 13s 5d, alleged to be the amount due by the defendant to the plaintiff for quantities of flour supplied from October to December last.

The defendant paid £109 9s 5d into court in full satisfaction of plaintiff's claim, and pleaded never indebted for the balance on the round that the flour representing the said balance was not received by him.

Mr. Alec. Thomson, instructed by Messrs. Salwey and Primrose, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. McKean, instructed by Mr. J. Ralph, for the defendant.

His Honor found a verdict for the plaintiff for the amount claimed, including the amount paid into court.

(Before Judge Rogers.)

MOTOR ENGINEERS' CLAIM.

Richards and another v Horner.

Thomas Henry Richards and Alexander Murdoch Forbes, trading as Richards and Forbes, motor engineers, of Underwood-street, Sydney, sought to recover from G. R. Horner, butcher, of Greenwich, the sum of £30 7s 2d, alleged to be the balance due by the defendant to the plaintiffs for repairs to a motor boat.

The defence was that the plaintiffs agreed to do the work for £50, which amount and more had been paid to them; that the charges were excessive; and that the work had been so unskilfully done as to be of no use to the defendant.

Mr. Markell, instructed by Messrs. Boyce and Magney, appeared for the plaintiffs; and Mr. J. M. Sanders, instructed by Mr. P. M. Sanders, for the defendant.

His Honor found in favour of the defendant.

QUARTER SESSIONS.

(Before Judge Docker and a jury.)

Mr. Dawson, Crown Prosectuor.

Joseph Frederick Ikin and William Paul Conrad pleaded not guilty to stealing and receiving several bags of flour, the property of Samuel John Service, master baker, of Liverpool-road, Ashfield.

Mr. Neville Montagu appeared for Ikin, and Mr. J. W. Abigail for Conrad.

Ikin was convicted of stealing, and Conrad of receiving.

Upon the application of Mr. Abigail, the provisions of the First Offenders Act was extended in the case of Conrad. He was sentenced to six months' imprisonment at Goulburn Gaol, but his Honor suspended sentence upon Conrad entering into recognisances and paying £14 compensation within a week.

PLEADED GUILTY.

Walter Sanstrom pleaded guilty to charges of larceny from Frank Viney and Herbert Lawrence, and was remanded for sentence.

Alfred Ross Pearce, Sydney George Cassin, and Bertie Toon pleaded guilty to breaking and entering the dwelling of E. H. Nobbs, at Five Dock, and was remanded for sentence.

ALLEGED SPURIOUS SOVEREIGNS.

THREE MEN COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

At the Central Police Court yesterday, before Mr. Payten, S.M., further evidence was heard in connection with the charge of making and counterfeiting a number of pieces of coin, resembling and intended to resemble sovereigns, against Henry Scroggins (46), Frank Usher (31), and Samuel Sealey (31).

Usher had previously explained to the court that he was a printer, and used the metal, clips, etc, in his trade. He knew nothing at all about the manufacture of spurious sovereigns, and had never made one in his life. When asked by Sergeant Mankey whether the brass clips could be used for holding a mould, he replied that he knew nothing about moulds for sovereigns.

Sealey, in giving evidence, stated that he did not know to what use the articles produced in court were put, and he had never seen any of them used. He knew that Usher was a printer; in fact, he had given him a hand with his work at one time. He did not know anything about counterfeit sovereigns, and denied having sold any to Kelly (a former witness.)

The accused were committed for trial at the Quarter Sessions, to be held in April 6, bail being allowed.

TIME-PAYMENT DENTISTRY.

Harold Sydney Centennial M'Intosh, of 152 Tweedmouth-avenue, Rosebery, and 321 Pitt-street, Sydney, trading as "The Dental Cash Order Company," who voluntarily sequestrated his estate on January 5 last, was examined by the Registrar in Bankruptcy (Mr. F. H. Salusbury) yesterday.

In reply to his official assignee (Mr. W. H. Palmer), the bankrupt said that he had traded as the Dental Cash Order Company for the past couple of years. He was 26 years of age, and was born at Burwood. Six years ago he started as an optician in the Royal Arcade. He had had a good deal of experience in the business while at Perth (W.A.), and no qualification was necessary to practice in Sydney. He did well in the business, his turnover for one year amounting to £2500. About two years ago he gave up the optician's business to go into the dental business. His mode of business was as follows:—"A patient would come to him, either in response to an advertisement or a canvasser, and he would send the patient on to a dentist to get a quotation for the work required. When the quotation was obtained or the price fixed, the patient then signed a printed agreement with witness. He gave him or her an order on the dentist to execute the work, the amount of the fees was paid by witness, who got a commission up to 33 per cent. from the dentist, and the patient under the agreement repaid the amount to witness, plus 12½ per cent., by weekly instalments."

Under the agreement, the company had the right to repossess themselves of the teeth in the event of default being made in the payment of instalments, but they had never actually exercised that right. They had sued in the police court for detention of goods in order to enforce payment of the instalments, but had never taken teeth back. A certain form of notice of demand was used by the company as a last resort, only after the patient had been written to several times and asked for payment. Bankrupt further stated that the company made a great number of bad debts. He found that the average case was that when the patient got his or her teeth, they did not care about paying. The last balance-sheet in September last covered about eight months, and showed about £800 worth of bad debts. During the time he was in business he thought the company had had about three or four thousand patients. In the business he had as many as 20 on the staff at one time, and was paying £40 to £50 a week in salaries. The money he got in after paying expenses of the business he used in trying to get fresh business, putting new men on, advertising, and so on.

The examination was adjourned to April 15.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION.

Attention is invited to a public notice in this issue, in which employers are reminded of their obligations to send to the Minister on or before the 31st inst., the returns required to be furnished under the Workmen's Compensation Act. The Act provides for a penalty of £5 for failure to comply.

IN THE GARDEN.

BEAUTIES OF OUR PARKS.

The grouping or massing of plants for effect, especially those having distinctly and highly coloured foliage and those having conspicuous and showy flowers, was first advocated in this column several years ago. Since then the subject has been referred to at seasonable times, and the most suitable plants, together with the best methods to adopt for their successful cultivation, have been fully described. In ordinary-sized gardens small groups, when judiciously planted, add charming variety to their surroundings. But in large gardens and public parks, where unlimited supplies of manure and water are available, brilliant and extensive displays of foliage and flowers can be made. It is essential, however, that the plans employed should be skilfully arranged to produce a varied and beautiful garden landscape. During the last few seasons the grouping of suitable plants has been carried out with much success both in the Centennial Park and Hyde Park. In the former reserve just now the varieties of Amarantus salicifolius, popularly called fountain plant, are a fine sight, and are attracting much attention. The colours are as varied as the rainbow, but brilliant crimson predominates, and from a short distance produce a most pleasing contrast to the surrounding vegetation. Although the varieties of Amarantus are the most showy feature in leaf colouring in the park at the present time, there are many other plants worth inspecting. Conspicuous amongst them are the varieties of Celosia pyramidalis, with their gay plumes of inflorescence; Salvia splendens, with bright scarlet flowers; S. farinacea, with violet-blue ones; and some very fine cannas. In Hyde Park are growing some of the best groups of cannas ever seen in this State. There are many varieties under cultivation, and they are most artistically arranged for colour effect. The newer creations of this most profusely flowering class of plants produce large blooms of the most varied and brilliant colours, and on that account have not been inaptly named "the poor man's orchids." The scarlet flowering salvia is also a feature in the floral display in this reserve. The plantations of these highly-coloured foliage plants and conspicuous flowering ones in both these parks are appreciated by the public, who appear to recognise that they are being cultivated for general instruction and recreation.

YELLOW ELDERS.

Where growing under favourable conditions yellow elders have been producing a profusion of bloom for some weeks past, and are still flowering freely, and making a most attractive display. They are tall, handsome, evergreen shrubs, with elegant divided leaves and bell-shaped flowers, produced in large clusters at the apex of the branches and branchlets. Two of them, Tecoma stans and its variety Velutina, produce bright yellow flowers, and T. smithii orange yellow ones, with brown markings. In favourable positions the latter is nearly always in bloom, but, of course, it flowers more profusely in the warmer months.

Yellow elders are easily cultivated shrubs, thriving in any deeply-worked, good friable soil, but attain perfection only in the warmer districts. They produce their flowers on the current season's growth, and, therefore, should be kept in a healthy, vigorous condition, in order to have a continuous bloom over a long period. Young shrubs should be severely pruned every winter until they have developed into well-formed bushes, after which the pruning may either be severe or slight, according to the condition of the shrubs, and the height it is desired they should grow during the warmer part of the year. Yellow elders are worth a good position amongst shrubs of a similar height, and when planted near those having scarlet or purple flowers or highly coloured leaves produce a strikingly fine effect by contrast. The best time to plant these shrubs is in early autumn or spring.

NOTES.

It is the season for propagating carnations from cuttings, and any varieties that are easily increased in this way may now receive attention. The cuttings should only be taken from healthy plants that have produced the most perfect flowers, and should be about four inches long. Immediately below the lowest joint of each cutting make a horizontal cut, and the lower leaves on the stem should be removed for about one and a half inch with a sharp knife, the upper ones being shortened if necessary. The cuttings taken from the upper growths with a "heel" attached will require no preparation beyond shortening the leaves if too long. In a bed composed of sandy soil, preferably in a sheltered situation, insert the cuttings one and a half inch deep, in rows three inches apart, and one inch apart in the rows. Press the soil firmly about each cutting, and give the bed a thorough watering through a fine rose watering can. In dry weather the cuttings must be regularly watered.

Seedlings raised from seeds of the different varieties of wallflower sown in January last are now sufficiently forward to be transplanted. The single flowering varieties have become very popular on account of their perfumed flowers being freely produced in winter, and very early spring. Wallflowers thrive in well-drained, ordinary fertile soils, in almost any situation, and when grown in groups or rows should be planted from 12 to 18 inches apart according to the vigour of the variety.

The resulting seedlings raised from previously sown seeds of daisies, polyanthuses, and primroses, should now be transplanted to the positions where they are to flower. These popular winter flowering hardy plants thrive in rich soil, and whether grown in masses or in rows should be planted about six inches apart, and freely watered in dry weather.

In the warmer districts seeds of the following annuals and perennials may now be sown. If a number of seedlings are required the seeds are best sown in a prepared seed bed or beds, but where there is only room for a few plants the seeds may be sown in a seed box or boxes:—Aquilegia, (columbine), acroclinium, ageratum, alyssum, anchusa, antirrhinum (snapdragon), candytuft, Canterbury bells, carnation (marguerite), chrysanthemum (annual), clarkia, coreopsis, cornflower, dianthus, English marigold, eschscholtzia, forget-me-not, foxglove, gaillardia, gilia, godetia, helichrysum, hunnemannia, larkspur (annual and perennial), lychnis, nasturtium, nemophila, pansy, Phlox drummondii, scabious, schizanthus, silene, stock (ten week), Swan River daisy (brachycome), and sweet sultan. Such seeds as linum, lupine, mignonette, poppy (annual and perennial), and Sturt's desert pea, are best sown in the positions where the plants are to bloom, for the seedlings do not bear transplanting very well. In the colder parts of the State, where frosts are experienced in the winter, the sowing of these seeds must be deferred till July or August, according to situation.

FRUIT GARDEN.

Owing to the abnormal heat experienced during a great part of the present month some of the late ripening fruits are maturing earlier than usual. The long-keeping apples and pears should be gathered as soon as they are ripe, but only in fine weather and when perfectly dry. Each specimen should be carefully handled, and the crop stored in single layers in shelves in the well-constructed fruit room, or in a dry, cool, dark cellar, where the fruit may remain until required for use. On these operations the good keeping qualities and fine flavour of the fruit depend to a great extent. Fruit that has previously been gathered and stored should occasionally be inspected, and any that show the least signs of decay should be removed to prevent the disease spreading. If any fruit lying on the ground is affected with the larvae of the codlin moth and fruit fly it should be boiled, and then given to the pigs or dairy cattle. This will effectually destroy these fruit pests, and so considerably lessen the numbers for injuring next season's crop. Birds have spoilt much ripe fruit this season, and where their depredations have been observed on the late ripening grapes, intended for dessert, it will be advisable to protect the bunches. A simple way to do this is to enclose each bunch of grapes in a coarse muslin or paper bag. If the land was thoroughly prepared earlier in the season for evergreen fruit trees it should now be in a good condition to receive them where rain has recently fallen. Early autumn planting gives the best results when the weather and soil conditions are favourable. Young trees of the citrus family, such as oranges and lemons, and loquats, and guavas, that have developed a good root system, may be transplanted from the nursery rows, to the positions where they are to bear fruit, any time next month. The preparation of the land on which it is intended to grow deciduous fruit trees, which are best planted in June, July, and August, should be taken in hand forthwith. Those who contemplate planting fruit trees for the first time should make a note of those varieties that do best and bear the most prolific crops in the locality.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

L. K.—Unless the tiger lily bulbs are overcrowded, they should not be disturbed. Where they are growing too thickly, however, the bulbs should be carefully lifted and separated, after the foliage has withered, and replanted immediately.

REAL ESTATE.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

One of the most encouraging auctions held this week was that conducted by Messrs. Raine and Horne. Mr. Rabett, who occupied the rostrum, had a crowded audience, and he had a fairly attractive list of properties to submit, with a result that he did well. He first of all offered a number of properties at Alexandria, in the estate of the late Mr. George Edward Wood. Most of these eight properties were sold under the hammer, and the balance immediately after the sale. The Star Hotel, in Botany-road, was sold for £5600; a terrace of four brick cottages in Wyndham-street was knocked down at £800; and a pair of cottages in the same street brought £635. Two small properties on Botany-road realised £500. The freehold reversionary interest in a cottage on Botany-road was sold for £200; the same interest in two pairs of cottages in Wyndham-street realised a similar amount. A shop and two cottages on Botany-road were disposed of for £600.

At the same sale there was considerable bidding for a city leasehold, 30 years to run, at the corner of George and Park streets, on which is erected a hotel and Murdoch's clothing shop. The bidding was carried on to £8900, at which figure the property was passed in a little below the reserve. There is now a possibility of a private sale taking place. Mr. Rabett then sold a double-fronted brick cottage in Cathedral-street, Woolloomooloo, for £740; two houses, Charles and Forbes streets, Woolloomooloo, he passed in at £480; and he also passed in for private treaty a cottage in Robey-street, Mascot, at £250. The firm sold privately this week 278ft of land fronting M'Evoy-street, Waterloo, at £5 17s 6d per foot; and 119ft to Bourke-street, Waterloo, at £5 per foot. At Middle Harbour the firm disposed of 30 acres of land at £50 per acre. They also sold two freehold reversions at Waterloo for £1050, and four lots in the Northbridge estate at 30s per foot.

Messrs. Richardson and Wrench's weekly sale yesterday was also largely attended. Mr. Gregg submitted a list of 11 different properties. He sold two, a cottage in Elizabeth-street South for £500, and a block of land at the corner of Elizabeth and Cooper streets, city, for £810. He had good bidding for five other properties offered. For two shops at Oxford-street, Paddington, £1650 was refused; £1250 was declined for four cottages at Newtown; a shop and dwelling at Petersham was passed in at £625; and £3 5s per foot was declined for a block of land in Mount-street, Coogee. There was no bid for three other properties offered, and Mr. Gregg then submitted a small subdivision at Heathcote, consisting of 17 allotments. A good corner block was sold for £55, and one or two others brought £45 and £46 per block each. For the other allotments there was very little bidding.

Messrs. Stanton and Son this week disposed of a cottage in Waratah-street, Enfield, for £525, a cottage in Ramsay-street, Haberfield, at £1425, two lots in Wharf-road, Concord, at £2 10s per foot, and a brick cottage in Jeffrey-street, Canterbury, for £650.

Messrs. Hardie and Gorman included in their sales for the week portion of the Jackson Estate at North Harbour, near Manly, at £3 7s 6d per foot, and seven lots of the Carlingford Station Estate, Carlingford, for £529.

Arthur Rickard and Co., Limited, report another highly satisfactory week's business, the sales effected up to noon yesterday totalling quite up to the figures of last week. In the home site estates section Strathfield, Haberfield, Hurstville, Carlton, Auburn, Bellevue Hill, and Blacktown were the most prominent, while waterside properties at Manly, Woy Woy, Cronulla, Port Hacking, Pittwater, and Narrabeen were brisker than usual. The farming estates handled by the firm sold freely, especially those at Wentworthville, Flushcombe (Blacktown), and Bankstown.

There is evidently a good demand for small farms, judging by the reports to hand. Mr. W. F. Kay this week sold quite a number. He got £625 for a mixed farm at Liverpool, £730 for a fruit and poultry farm of 30 acres at Rossmore, a farm and orchard of 40 acres at Wyee, on the Northern line, he sold for £850, a farm at Thirlmere brought £225, and one at Canley Vale realised £150. Three blocks of land at Fairfield were sold by Mr. Kay for £275.

Mr. C. Crammond had a fairly active week. His sales included a brick cottage at Marrickville, known as Dalston, for £555, a pair of brick cottages in Unwin's Bridge-road, Sydenham, for £740, a cottage in Stanley-street, Arncliffe, £455, and another cottage in the same suburb for £500; also land on the Addison Estate, Marrickville, at £5 10s per foot.

TO-DAY'S AUCTIONS.

A number of sales are listed for this afternoon. One sale that is almost sure to attract attention will be conducted by Messrs Raine and Horne at Edgecliff, Woollahra. Opportunities for obtaining residential sites in this district are now few and far between. There are few freeholds left, and subdivision sales of recent years have always proved the popularity of Edgecliff as a residential suburb for persons of means. The subdivision to be offered to-day is No. 2 Wallaroy-crescent Estate, and this is regarded as absolutely the last chance of obtaining Edgecliff sites at the price. The land occupies a splendidly elevated position, and adjoins the first subdivision of the same estate, every lot of which was sold on the ground at auction. There are 54 liberal-sized lots to be submitted this afternoon, and from these there are beautiful peeps of Sydney Harbour, and they are also well sheltered from westerly winds.

Messrs. Richardson and Wrench have two sales for this afternoon. One is at the old favourite picnic grounds of Pearl Bay, three minutes' walk from the Spit tram. It is known as "The Pearl Bay Estate," which for many years was owned by a medical man, who refused to part with the land; but since his death two or three persons have bought several blocks, and this latest subdivision has been laid out at considerable cost. The outlook is a splendid one. The surfaces of land range from grassy levels to gentle slopes, while parts are rugged, but a house set on these rubbed portions, as was done in so many cases near the Mosman wharfs, would provide a glorious and extensive stretch of water scenery and encircling land environments of attractiveness. A few lots also face the 100ft reservation.

The second sale of Messrs. Richardson and Wrench this afternoon is at Eastwood, where the Eastwood House Estate will be offered. This land is quite close to the railway station. It includes the old home of the late Edward Terry, a commodious cottage residence, and portion of the original grounds. Eastwood is certainly a progressive suburb, between Hornsby and Strathfield. It has gas and water, and a good train service.

Westmead will provide a sale this afternoon. This suburb has made a lot of progress during the last few years. Fresh country air, and yet within reasonable distance of the city, led many people to select Westmead for their future home. Especially was it so with people who desired to go in for a little farming in their spare time. But to-day it will be the residential portion of the district which Mr. W. F. Jago will bring under the notice of the public. There are 34 lots to be offered, and these have frontages to main streets, and are within a short distance of the railway station.

Bruntnell and Bannerman, Ltd., will to-day offer the Calmsley Estate at Dundas. This subdivision comprises 24 good-sized sections, also the beautiful homestead, standing on some four acres of land, and a weatherboard cottage, on a good-sized corner block. This estate is very high, and the sale promises to make an attractive one.

Messrs. Watkin and Watkin will to-day offer the Punchbowl Estate at Punchbowl. The land is within 10 minutes' walk of the railway station, and comprises 21 choice building sites. Gas and water are on the estate.

NEXT SATURDAY'S SALES.

There are a number of sales listed for next Saturday. Two of these, one on the Mountains and the other by the seaside, are attracting a good deal of attention. The St. Patrick's College Estate at Manly, which Messrs. Stanton and Son are submitting, is well in the public eye. Over a hundred applications are made daily to the firm for a copy of a well-arranged booklet containing very fine views of the estate and its picturesque surroundings. This is leasehold property, and the buyers will have the right to fix the rental, which will remain in existence for 99 years. Each lot will be put up by the auctioneers, and the bidding will fix the annual rental. The local municipal council has undertaken to make the roads, etc., within six months, and until the roads are completed no rental will be charged the buyers. Almost daily large numbers of people are to be found on the ground spying out good lots, while letters continue to arrive from the country asking for full particulars, plans, etc.

The Mountain sale will be at Wentworth Falls, and will be conducted by Messrs. J. T. Wall and Co. It comprises some of the finest land in the district, close to the railway station, and within easy access of the sights for which Wentworth Falls is famous. The district is making rapid progress during the last few years. A very fine school of arts is nearing completion, and a contract has been let to erect a large residential club-house on the newly-made golf links. A number of private residences have also been built in different parts of the district, and generally the progress has been rapid and on solid lines. The land to be offered next Saturday is owned by Mr. Pitt, and has been locked up for a number of years. It has frontages to the main Bathurst-road, and the sale is likely to be an attractive one.

Messrs. Hugh Duff and Co. are offering at Burwood next Saturday splendid building sites, within a few minutes' walk from the station, and a few yards from 1d tram, also close to Burwood Park. This is about the last land available in such a handy position. The same firm is offering at Enfield, at 4 o'clock, building sites, also close to 1d tram from Burwood station. The terms in each case are easy, and buyers in search of land in this locality have a good opportunity to secure a good block.

Messrs. Watkin and Watkin have a sale next Saturday at Undercliffe, where the Mount View Estate will be offered.

Next Saturday Messrs. Hardie and Gorman will submit the Snape Park Estate, between Kensington and Maroubra. There are seven good building sites to be offered.

Messrs. H. W. Horning and Co. will, next Saturday, offer the Lenton Park Estate, at Ryde. This estate has been locked up for many years, and is now subdivided into 103 choice business and residential sites of liberal areas. The land is parklike in appearance, is studded here and there with magnificent eucalyptus trees, and has rich fertile soil for gardens. The situation is fine, and is only four minutes from the Ryde railway station, and the tram which runs from Sydney to Ryde railway station passes the land. The ferry and the beautiful Parramatta River are only 10 minutes distant. The train service is a good one, and the time from Sydney railway station to the land is 30 minutes.

The bride, who was given away by the Hon. A. W. Meeks, M.L.C., wore an exquisite gown of ivory charmeuse, mounted on pale pink silk. The bodice had a "V" neck, and was formed of rose point lace, veiled in tulle, and mounted on pale pink ninon. The skirt had a tunic and pointed train of ivory charmeuse, lined with pink ninon, opening over an underskirt of tulle and rose point lace; deep swathing of charmeuse finished the waist, with a cluster of orange blossoms. Her beautiful veil of Brussels lace (presented by a friend) was arranged in mob cap fashion over a chaplet of orange blossoms. The bridal bouquet of white roses, carnations, and heather, and a diamond and sapphire ring, were the gifts of the bridegroom. The Misses Edith Talbot, Winifred Gibson, and Lillian Talbot acted as bridesmaids, and were attired alike in pale pink crepe de Chine. The bodices were of pink ninon, with pleated tunics of the same. They wore large black velvet hats, lined with pale pink. Their bouquets of pink roses and heather, and a pendant, bangle, and ring, respectively, were the gifts of the bridegroom. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore white supple satin, trimmed with Limerick lace and orange blossoms; her bridal veil was arranged with a wreath of orange blossoms. CONDENSED MILK FOR THE BELGIANS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—We have recently received many applications to supply full cream condensed milk to the various patriotic societies collecting funds for the relief of the starving Belgians in the various States of Australia.

Recognising that condensed milk manufactured and shipped from Australia would cost considerably more than if supplied by our English factories we cabled our London office, and have now pleasure in stating we have to-day received a cable informing us that they are willing to place at our disposal 10,000 cases full cream sweetened condensed milk, and 2000 cases full cream unsweetened condensed milk at the nominal price of 2/3 per case, and 2000 cases full cream unsweetened condensed milk at 13s per case, delivered to recognised authorities in London. The above prices are equal to 5d per tin for sweetened condensed milk, and 4½d per tin for unsweetened condensed milk, which means the Belgians will receive 50 per cent. more milk for the same expenditure.

If remittances are sent to us from recognised patriotic societies, we shall be pleased to remit the money by mail free of cost. It must, however, be understood we cannot accept subscriptions from individual members of the public, and that all subscriptions sent from recognised patriotic societies must state to whom we are authorised to deliver the milk in England.

We are, etc.,

IN TEN YEARS I'VE PAID
AND ABSOLUTELY NOTHING
TO SHOW FOR IT!

Such is the experience of a client, who made up his mind the other day that "HE WOULD HAVE NO MORE OF IT." Better late than never. This is but an instance of the utter folly of rent-paying, when RICKARD'S EASY TERMS can make YOU THE OWNER OF YOUR OWN HOME. The £880 paid away by our friend, referred to above, apart altogether from the garden and other improvements HE MADE FOR HIS LANDLORD, without any thanks or recompense (and which cost him approximately nearly another £90 during the ten years' tenancy), would have paid off a good block of land and a fine five-roomed Cottage and garden.

HERE IS A LESSON
HEARKEN TO NOW.

By availing yourself of the wonderful prospering opportunities which are yours on RICKARD'S EASY TERMS. Nearly 200 Home Site Estates, ranging through nearly every suburb, and many Country Districts—lots on either of which can be secured at only 2/6 a week. The Terms are £1 down and 10/ a month (or 2/6 a week), which covers both principal and interest, at 5 per cent. per annum, for each £25 worth purchased.

OUR REPRESENTATIVE will be in attendance on FAIRLIGHT EXTENSION ESTATE, FIVE DOCK, and GRASMERE ESTATE, MORTLAKE, this afternoon from 2 o'clock. Look for our Red Flag.

CALL (or WRITE) FOR PLANS.

WHO ACTED.

Thought the dreamer—"Haberfield is destined to a great future. Some day it will become the most popular, most beautiful Suburb of Sydney. Properties will steadily increase in value, but I'll wait just a little longer and make sure."

So he dreamed about real estate and waited; and the other fellow bought real estate and waited—and then cashed in on the increased value of his property. Why not be the other fellow, and

STATIONS, FARMS, AND STOCK.

A SPECIAL INTEREST attaches to this farm of 27 acres, because it is in such a beautiful situation, out at Baulkham Hills, and only 20 minutes' walk from the tram. The views extend for miles, and the air is pure. But the main attraction is the producing power of the soil, which will grow all crops to perfection, and that which is not cultivated is heavily grassed. Besides having plenty of water. There are 2 acres of young citrus and summer fruits to bear next season, 2 acres corn, 1 acre artichokes. Nice W.B. Cottage of 4 rooms, well constructed outbuildings, including large barn and 16 cow bails, all with cemented floors, extensive fowl runs, 3 bricked underground tanks and numerous others.

The stock and plant includes 3 milking cows and heifer, 7 breeding sows, all to farrow soon, 1 boar, horse, cart, and harness, plough, harrows, cultivator, scarifier, saddle, and bridle, 4 tons oaten hay, 50 bushels corn, etc., etc., the whole forming a home of health, enjoyment, and profit, that would be hard to equal at the price. Torrens Title. £1200; half cash.

A wise man will come at once to see this, without any fear of disappointment.

TO ENSURE EFFICIENCY in Steam Plants you must keep your pipes free from water. The only way to do this is to lead the water with the steam to a proper collector, and discharge it through an efficient Steam Trap.

The "SENTINEL"

HIGH-PRESSURE STEAM TRAP

is tested to 250lb Steam Pressure, and is guaranteed to remain right even after much use, a feature being its regrinding valve.

The "Sentinel" Trap has many advantages not possessed by any other make. Let us explain them.

BELTING USERS will appreciate the economy which such a result as the following proves by using the Genuine Balata, manufactured by Messrs. Dick, of Glasgow. Not only is economy in belting to be considered, but the absence of loss usually occasioned by stoppages to machinery, etc.

"The Dick's Balata Belt I showed your representative when last here has been running in these works as a main driving belt for the past 16 years. During the greater part of that time, it has been running night and day on three shifts.

"Originally it was a 7in x 4-ply. I have just taken off one ply and put in driving a box mill. The belt being so well preserved, it was but joined in the usual way."

WUNDERLICH CEILINGS.

Wunderlich Ceilings are built up to a standard not down to a price. But, nevertheless, that price is not necessarily a high one. Because after all quality is the only true gauge with which to measure up the economy of any proposition.

And above all things, Wunderlich Products are Quality Goods. The Sheet Steel is the best that can be procured in Great Britain. It is imported direct, by ourselves, and worked up here in our own factory, at Redfern.

You can see some of the samples erected and finished at our Pavilion at the Showgrounds. Call and see them, or write for catalog.

FARM AND STATION.

THE STORY OF THE GRAPE.

(BY JAS. R. SCOTT.)

Like the discovery of coal, the question of the first introduction of the grape vine into Australia is shrouded in—well, not exactly mystery, but, to some extent, historical uncertainty. The point has been thoroughly investigated by painstaking searchers amongst available records, and two different theories—fixing the date in the years 1815 and 1828 respectively—have a great many supporters. It is known, however, that the First Fleet (1788) carried cuttings of the vine to Sydney Cove—but their life history seems to have practically ended there. In a little book, published in 1843, entitled "The Culture of the Grape Vine and the Orange in Australia and New Zealand," George Suttor, F.L.S., tells us that he made several attempts to plant vineyards near Parramatta as far back as 1801. Owing to adverse circumstances, however, the experiment was unsuccessful; but that the lack of success in his earlier endeavours was not attributable to the qualities of the soil is proved by the fact that in 1835 he planted 2500 cuttings, and from this small vineyard wine was made in the fourth year.

But it fell to the lot of the Hunter Valley to be the nursery of the vine in Australia, for here, on the banks of the historic Hunter—at Kirkton, between Branxton and Singleton—the first vineyard in Australia was successfully cradled. In the year 1830 James Busby, a pioneer, whose watchword was forward, planted upwards of 350 varieties of vine cuttings, selected by him in France and Germany, and thought to be the best suited to Australian climatic conditions, and to the nature of the soil. The experiment proved eminently successful—so much so that, after the lapse of 85 years, some of the original stocks are still bearing. Seeing that the average longevity of the vine is about half a century, this is striking testimony of the fertility of the soil, and at the same time an interesting sidelight upon acclimatisation. Most of the early vineyards of the Hunter owe their origin to cuttings from Kirkton, and it is interesting to note that the original vineyard has always been immune from the ravages of phylloxera and other pests to which the vine is heir, and also that the same remark applies equally to its "offspring."

In September, 1840, Henry John Lindeman, M.D., a member of the Royal College of Surgeons, arrived in Sydney, and proceeded to the Paterson River, where he acquired the estate named Cawarra. To a certain extent, though acting independently, he followed in the footsteps of James Busby. Both of these pioneer vignerons made observations in Germany and France, and secured their cuttings there. Their initial operations were separated by 10 years. The history of Cawarra wine-growing, and of the uphill battle to establish the reputation which it now enjoys, forms one of the finest pages of Australian viticultural history. Consideration of space precludes our going into details; but standing out prominently from a sheaf of adventures "by fire and flood and field" is an event of September, 1851. The Cawarra cellars, which were constructed of wood, contained a large quantity of wine, the result of several years' growth. Earlier in the year Edward Hammond Hargraves had discovered payable gold near the Turon, and all men's minds were turned in that direction. Dr. Lindeman decided to convey the product of his labour thither, and had backed his bullock-drays in preparatory to loading. But that night the result of 11 years' work and worry was reduced to ashes. It was believed to have been the work of an incendiary; and a mystery of some magnitude was added to the list of the unsolved. Cellars of stone, and stores of iron, were afterwards erected. The Kirkton vineyard passed into the hands of Lindeman, Limited, in May, 1914, the vendor being Mr. Kelman. The Busbys and Kelmans were kinsmen, and as the Kirkton Kelman married a daughter of Dr. Lindeman, the original Australian vineyard may be almost regarded as still being "in the family."

The wine-growing area extending from the Hunter River southwards to Mount View has an extremely interesting history. From the view-point of the geological student, it is particularly fascinating. (Witness Professor David's periodical visits to the district, occasionally accompanied by University students.) It is good to look upon a well-ordered vineyard at this time of the year, and to follow the various details of vintage operations. But behind all this industrial activity is the story of a mightier activity now non-existent, or quiescent. The mountain range forming a crescent at the back of the area now being dealt with (the Brokenback Range) was at one time—thousands of years ago—a volcanic belt. Observe the lava formations amongst the foothills. Break a boulder—anywhere in this locality—and observe the fossils and impressions therein, the remains of marine life and growth indicating that at one time this tract was submerged. And herein lies the secret of the productivity of the Pokolbin district vineyard, the order of sequence being the volcanic lava, shales, and marine growths, and trap formations, the weathering and decomposition of these producing a rich chocolate soil—the delight of the vigneron. The position of the industry to-day is due principally to those engaged in it. In common with all agrarian pursuits, the vigneron has had, in a large measure, to "play a lone hand." History shows that the State has not in the past assisted as it might. Current events on the Continent—the ruthless destruction of the best of the world's plantations—point a moral. Will our viticultural associations agitate for the betterment of the industry, and will our Legislature arise as befits the occasion?

THE WOOL TRADE.

IDEAL FOR ALL, BUT FAULTY.

Another splendid week for the disposal of wool has been experienced in the Sydney market; and the addition of 5000 bales over the limit of last week was no handicap to the reception of the total quantity by the trade. The pleasing feature of the demand now is that it runs on nearly all grades; wools that were utterly neglected three months ago now not only command attention, but are eagerly competed for at prices far above the rates of any good average wool seasons. Medium staple, wasty wools are still irregular, also second lambs, but practically all other descriptions are snapped up by buyers with the greatest avidity. Never before was wool-hunger more pronounced than during the last two or three weeks; and, fortunately, the wool has been in store to appease some of the appetite.

Upwards of 35,082 bales were catalogued by the 13 firms of selling brokers, and 31,511 bales were cleared from the rostrum at a highly satisfactory range of values, which tended in growers' favour. If the offerings had mainly comprised New England wools, free or nearly free, well grown and attractive, instead of a considerable proportion from the slopes and plains, carrying more or less burr seed, or dust, the position would not be so satisfactory, but with wools free of burr scarce, and medium to useful grades largely in evidence, the clearances at the prices were remarkably good.

If the pastoral conditions of the State were as satisfactory as the demand and prices realised for wool, flockmasters would indeed be in an enviable position. Unfortunately, such is not the case; the country is in the grip of a very severe drought, and the buoyancy of the wool market is some compensation for the losses of stock and the expenses incurred in saving a proportion of the flocks by agistment, hand-feeding, or travelling. Even relief country is now difficult to find, and much of that previously obtained is eaten out. Under these circumstances the wool market is saving the situation to a large extent. If, in addition to the drought, the clip was being held up through a lack of demand, or a demand at rates that growers could not accept unless reduced to the last extremity, the outlook would indeed be grave. But, thanks to the magnificence of the British navy in keeping the seas open, we can ship wool to the United Kingdom, to our allies, and permit wool to go to neutral countries.

We are apt to speak of America dominating the wool position, and be pleased at the strength of the Japanese demand; also look on with pride at the French and Belgians again taking their place in the wool saleroom beside the stalwarts from Yorkshire, as well as the representatives of Australian mills, quite forgetting the great fact that it is all due to the British navy. The great factor in wool, coupled with the undying services performed by the allied armies, is the British fleet in being. If the navy had been effete, or in any way unequal to clearing the seas of enemy cruisers, the current season's wool market would have been as stagnant as it was in August and September.

The British Isles are supposed to be "blockaded" now; enemy submarines make piratical attacks, but the ships go to and fro as usual, and the wool position is such that 40,000 bales will be catalogued next week. Victoria brought its selling season to a close in Melbourne on Wednesday and Geelong on Thursday last; not because wool could not be sold, but because the stocks were cleared out. Sydney has a fair slice of the clip still to dispose of, which will be added to by some autumn shorn wools. The whole of the supply promises to be catalogued by the second week in June. At the conclusion of the sales next week there will be a recess till April 26, a series will be held in Brisbane, commencing Tuesday, April 20. Possibly a clearing-up sale, with belated clips, will take place in Melbourne next month. Thus the only market next week for wool in Australia is Sydney, and no more will be available by public auction for four weeks, the demand is expected to be strong at recent high rates.

Rates current for the principal descriptions of the staple in the Sydney market may be given as follows:—

THE OFFERINGS AND SALES.

As the limit for the week was fixed at 35,000 bales, the proportion of each day's offerings this week was larger than at any time previously since the commencement of the war. On Monday three catalogues totalled 8622 bales, and the clearances at auction 7824. The offerings comprised a rather large proportion of medium to useful wools in the grease, the bulk merino, with a small showing of crossbred. There was a sprinkling of super lines, and a few nice parcels of scoured. The useful wools were in fairly free condition, and a number of the medium grades were thinly grown, heavy, and in wasty condition. The wools were representative of practically all the districts of the State—tablelands, slopes, plains, and Riverina. All the best features of last week were in evidence, and the market ruled strong at the best rates of the season; all good to medium free wools selling in growers' favour, while faulty wools were in better request than previously. Greasy sold to /16, paid for 64 bales w of GGP over Airlie over New England, from Bendemeer, a bright, attractive wool of nice length, medium condition, soft, and fine. Scoured made to /22½, for 8 bales sup com of MM over Briery, from Brewarrina, a wool of fine quality, nice colour, and little condition.

On Tuesday four catalogues, aggregating 8704 bales, were catalogued, and 8014 cleared at auction. It was a fair to good average selection, and included a few super lines, together with a large proportion of medium to useful wools, many carrying burr, dust, and seed. With the exception of one good parcel of scoured and two or three small lines, the offerings were in the grease. A keen demand prevailed, with values more distinctly in growers' favour than last week. All sections operated freely, the French representatives being more active than previously, and the Japanese competing keenly for bulky skirtings. Greasy merino sold to 16½d, first pieces to 13½d, greasy crossbred to 15½d, and scoured merino to 20½d. The top price was paid for 15 bales sup com w h e of AL over Mulverindie from Walcha, fine quality, good staple, bright, well bred, and in good condition; also for 6 bales first com RHH over Uralla, a bright, well-grown wool, in attractive condition.

Three catalogues on Wednesday totalled 8580 bales, of which 7556 were sold at auction. The wools were drawn from a wide area of the State, and included one good-sized parcel from Central Queensland. It was a rather good selection, and included a fair proportion from the northern and southern tablelands, with a considerable showing of medium to useful wools from the slopes and plains, carrying burr and dust. With the exception of a parcel of local scoured, the wools were in the grease. There was a keen demand for the better grades, but faulty sorts were a little irregular. So strong was the bidding for special lots, that the merino record for the season was taken from 16½d to 17½d, and for crossbred to 18d from 15½d. The crossbred record has only been exceeded once for a number of years, and that was in the 1909-10 season; this season's was established for 13 bales xbd w h of JX over 5 over New England, from Guyra, a fine, free wool, of good length and condition; and the merino for 42 bales 1st com w of AC over Balala over New England, from the Uralla district, a shafty, free wool, of medium quality, in good condition.

On Thursday three catalogues totalled 9156 bales, and the sales at auction 8083. The offerings comprised a some super lines; the bulk, however, were medium to useful wools, carrying burr, seed, and dust. The market was strong for all medium to super wools, but on short, burry, and faulty lines values were irregular. Crossbreds continued in sellers' favour. Greasy merino sold to 16d, paid for 28 bales AAA e of HY over Burnima (Monaro).

The offerings and sales for the week, and totals to date, compared with last season, are as follow:—

SYDNEY WOOL RECEIPTS.

Wool continues to arrive in good volume, and is reducing the decrease that was so large at the first half of the current statistical year. The receipts by both rail and boat show an increase during the week; how the quantity by rail and boat for the week and for the season to date compares with the corresponding period last year is shown as follows:—

WOOL SHIPMENTS.

Five vessels have cleared the Sydney Customs since last week's review with wool for the United Kingdom and foreign ports, aggregating 12,337 bales. It is noteworthy that in these strenuous war times, when wool is being so jealously guarded from the enemy, and care taken as to supplies to neutrals, that the largest shipment this week is for Italy; showing the faith the Allies have in the Italian people and Government. The vessels with quantities for the week and total for the season to date compare with the corresponding period last year as follows:—

RELIEVING FARMERS.

SHORTAGE OF TRUCKS.

The Minister for Lands and Agriculture made available yesterday information regarding the work of the Department of Agriculture in distributing seed wheat and fodder to farmers who had suffered owing to the recent drought.

Mr. Ashford stated that a sum of a quarter of a million has been made available so far and expended in the purchase of approximately 548,000 bushels of seed wheat and 10,000 tons of chaff. So far the department has received 2577 applications for seed wheat, totalling 546,000 bushels, and 1861 for chaff, totalling 14,000 tons. Of these 4114 have been approved by the department, and orders issued on the distributing agents for 509,912 bushels of seed wheat and 12,638 tons of fodder.

The distributing agents have, added the Minister, been greatly delayed in their work owing to the difficulty experienced in obtaining a sufficient number of trucks, but so far they have succeeded in delivering 235,000 bushels of seed wheat and 4750 tons of fodder. Strong representations are being made to the Railway Commissioners with a view to securing a better supply of trucks, as it is recognised that unless these be forthcoming at an early date, so that the horse feed may be supplied to the farmers, the working horses will be in an almost too poor condition to put to work immediately. Then, again, many farmers who have a sufficiency of horse feed are keeping their horses in idleness waiting for the seed wheat.

The total number of applications are considerably greater than Mr. Ashford expected, but he considers that the special circumstances justified him in the helping hand which he has held out to the man on the land.

ADVANCES TO FARMERS.

The Minister for Lands and Agriculture stated yesterday the lines upon which advances were being made by the Government to assist farmers suffering from the drought.

"The money to be made available by the Treasury," says Mr. Ashford, "will be restricted to drought areas. Special cases, however, will be considered on their merits. Advances will be limited to £200 in each case, and confined to those holding Crown tenures or freeholds—wholly or partially acquired—and who are not able to carry on pending next season's harvest. Searches will be made with respect to the soundness of title, and all other necessary precautions taken to protect the State.

"The amounts advanced will be a charge against the holdings and the crops until repayment is made. Repayments will have to be made in five yearly instalments, with 6 per cent. interest added." "This cannot," said the Minister, "be considered an excessive rate, in view of the nature of the advances. The policy of the Government in regard to this matter was dictated by knowledge of the very straightened circumstances of many farmers."

CLYDESDALE MARES.

The six Clydesdale mares imported by the State Government are to be exhibited at the Royal Agricultural Show.

ECONOMIES IN FODDER.

The Department of Agriculture yesterday issued, through the Acting-Minister, Mr. Grahame, a statement drawing attention to the food value of lucerne chaff, as compared with wheaten chaff, which is dearer. Lucerne has a higher albumenoid ratio. It is also pointed out that at Hawkesbury Agricultural College a ration of 18lb chaff, 9lb crushed maize, and 3lb bran has been fed for years to the team horses.

To cows bran can be fed in considerable quantities with perfect safety. Experiments conducted in the United States showed that 15 steers fed for four months on 14lb of bran per day gave a very satisfactory gain in weight, while experiments in Denmark have shown it to be excellent feed for dairy cattle.

"The reality of the economy may," the report says, "be illustrated by the statement that bran that costs £7 10s per ton will supply 100lb of nutritive matter at 8s 5d, while wheaten chaff that costs £9 per ton will supply 100lb of nutritive matter at 11s 11d."

THE CATTLE TICK.

STOCK FROM QUEENSLAND.

A telegram which appeared in our issue of the 18th inst. from our Goondiwindi (Q.) correspondent, with reference to cattle entering this State from Queensland, stated:—"It would appear that the New South Wales Government is about to relax the tick regulations in respect to cattle entering New South Wales from Queensland, special permission having been granted by the Stock Department to Messrs. White Bros., of Tucka Tucka, to cross 970 bullocks without being dipped. This is the first instance for about 13 years of cattle being allowed to cross at Goondiwindi without dipping."

The chief inspector of stock, Mr. S. T. D. Symons, advises that the circumstances of the case are that these cattle (stores) were overlanding from Charleville to Mungindi, where they are entitled to cross on inspection only, and without dipping. They were, however, from the bad state of the roads, very weak, and did not come as far east even as Mungindi, and, taking advantage of the extension of the railway from Warwick westward, they proceeded in sealed and disinfected trucks from Dirranbandi to Goondiwindi, and in the circumstances dipping was waived.

Mr. Symons states that it is not the intention of the department to do away with dipping of cattle presented at Goondiwindi for entry that reach there by the ordinary stock routes, or from any locality from which danger of introducing ticks may be apprehended.

RUSH FOR LAND.

RECORD BALLOT.

MOREE.—The ballot for Crown lease area No. 1690 of 4000 acres, county Benarabe, parish of Yarrol, was conducted on Friday by Mr. C. E. Barnes, before the full Land Board. There were 649 applicants, of whom 584 were admitted to the ballot. The number of applicants constitutes a record. The winner of the ballot was Douglas Nimmo Mohr.

BERRIGAN.—One hundred and ninety applications were received for two homestead farms of 425 and 550 acres, near Urana. Of these 179 were allowed to go to the ballot, which resulted:—W. Kenny, Oaklands, 1; W. T. St. Clair, junr., Yarrawalla, 2; W. Hardman, Deniliquin, 3; D. J. Francis, Boree Creek, 4.

EXPERIMENTAL PLOTS.

CULCAIRN.—One of the first sowings of the season has taken place on Mr. Eulenstein's farm, Gracevale, Henty, under the supervision of Mr. H. C. Stenning, the Agricultural Department's expert in Riverina. The experimental plots sown are for fodder purposes, and also to serve as rotation crop experiments. The following are the varieties of seed sown in the seven plots:—(1) Algerian oats; (2) red rustproof oats; (3) bald skinless barley; (4) Cape barley; (5) Canadian field peas; (6) rape; (7) rape and barley. Besides those plots, which, of course, are under Government supervision, Mr. Eulenstein has sown two private fodder plots, one of silver beet and one of purple-top field turnips. In wheat growing districts the land becomes worn out, and requires spelling, and it is by a rotation of crops that the land can be brought back to wheat-growing capacity again. The plots sown will serve to show to the department, and also to the district farmers the most suitable crops for rotation sowing. To effect their restoring purpose, these crops should be fed off and the residue ploughed into the land.

MEETINGS OF FARMERS.

COOLAMON.—At the first meeting of the new committee of the A. and P. Association, the executive was re-elected, as follows:—Mr. A. W. Stinson, president; Messrs. John Maloney and Owen Furner, vice-presidents; Mr. P. R. Ford, treasurer. The secretary is Mr. George Clarke.

CULCAIRN.—At the annual meeting of the Henty Farmers and Settlers' Association, the following officers were elected:—President, Mr. R. O. Eulenstein; vice-presidents, Messrs. D. H. Schultz and H. W. Taylor; secretary, Mr. J. Schmidt; treasurer, Mr. G. H. Cruttenden. The balance-sheet showed a credit of £4 7s 8d, and the membership roll 65.

Pleasant Hills, near Henty, elected at their meeting:—President, Mr. P. Knobel; vice-presidents, Cr. W. L. Browne and Mr. W. J. Rice; treasurer, Mr. H. W. Krause; secretary, Mr. A. E. Knobel. This association sent £14 to the executive to defray expenses in connection with the Wheat Acquisition Act.

SHARE FARMING.

BATHURST.—Mr. H. R. Piggott, M.P., of Blayney, refutes the Labour assertion that any person working with the owner of land on the share farm system is necessarily sweated. He states that from 111 acres one man cleared £500 with his crop of hay, in another case a farmer joined with another on the share system, the latter found the plant and seed and the farmer provided the labour. As a result of three months' work the man who did the labour cleared £350.

DAIRYING.

LITHGOW.—Local milk vendors announce that, owing to the high price of fodder, they will charge 6d per quart on and after Sunday.

DISTRICT ITEMS.

DAPTO.—The long spell of dry weather is causing uneasiness amongst farmers, who are unable to get on with ploughing, and to sow winter crops. Bush fires are a real danger, owing to the long dry grass. Farmers are busy filling their silos with maize and planter. Owing to the splendid crops, it is estimated that a record quantity of ensilage will be made this year. The milk yield is rapidly diminishing, for, although there is plenty of grass, it is so dry and there is not much milk in it. Stock, however, are fat. Some farmers are taking in starving stock from the west, and a draft of horses from Yanco arrived during the week.

DENILIQUIN.—The drought in this district may be judged from the fact that one station alone is paying over £1000 per week for fodder.

AGRICULTURAL SHOWS.

INVERELL.

INVERELL.—The show concluded on Friday in ideal weather. The attendance for the third day was good, considering the season. Thursday's takings were £257 6s, and have only been exceeded at two previous shows by £25 in 1908 and £7 in 1913. Friday's total was £97, making a grand total of £381. UPPER HUNTER.

MUSWELLBROOK.—Arrangements for the Upper Hunter Show, which will open here on Wednesday next, are now complete. Despite the dry weather experienced since the beginning of the year, it is anticipated that the show of horses, fat stock, etc., will be up to the average. Good entries have been received for the jumping events. The weather has been threatening for the last three days, but only misty showers have fallen. A general and copious downpour is much needed. The water supply is giving out on some runs which were not short during the 1901-2 drought. There is still an abundance of dry feed in the district. Thousands of military horses are being depastured in this neighbourhood.

KATOOMBA.

KATOOMBA.—The Katoomba A., H., and I. Society's annual show was continued on Thursday in fine weather, and in the presence of a large attendance.

LITHGOW.

LITHGOW.—Although numerous economies have been effected in regard to this year's show, the committee is not yet out of the wood so far as finances are concerned. The loss of the subsidy and other donations, together with the extra sewerage rate, has proved a big setback, and the secretary states that they would be about £50 behind on the year's working.

MUNITIONS OF WAR.

When this war is over it will be the business of writers on international law to invent some new term for the sum total of the restraints which have been imposed on Germany by the joint efforts of the Allies. None of the recognised terms will suffice for a war which has no parallel either for the numbers of people and countries engaged, for the variety of materials needed by the armies in the field, or for the extent to which the control of all traffic from overseas is in the hands of one of the belligerents. The allied nations to-day have a command of the trade routes so complete that they can, if they please, kill the industry not only of Germany, but of any neutral country as far as imports are necessary to maintain it. They are operating against a country which has alienated all neutral sympathy, and which therefore can hope for no assistance except at a very high price, whereas England in the days of the blockade was the support and hope of Napoleon's enemies. The contrast is strengthened by the application of science to industry, especially to the machinery of war, and by the division of labour among the countries of the world. Even such a Power as Germany, which has aimed incessantly at preparation for war, cannot maintain a single factory without obtaining from some other country supplies either of raw material or of material in a semi-manufactured state.

What may for convenience be termed a blockade has under these conditions developed in a variety of ways, of which the joint declaration against all shipping to and from Germany is the most startling, though by no means the most effective. To some branches of German industry more harm has been done by the prohibitions against export issued by one or other of the Allies during the past six months. The dates of these decrees are at once a reproach to the countries which have issued them, and a vindication of innocent motives. Russia, for instance, did not prohibit the export of manganese, a necessary element in the preparation of steel, until the 27th of December; Canada exported nickel freely until the end of October, although Germany depends on foreign countries for almost half the nickel used in her factories. Petrol was obtained from Russia by Persian merchants until the beginning of November in quantities which were far more than sufficient for their own industries. No doubt the belligerents were anxious not to interfere more than was necessary with neutral countries as the British embargo on wool did, no doubt, interfere with the United States. But as the war has gone on, and the necessity of sacrifices has been realised, all the countries engaged have seen that any device which might shorten the war is best in the long run for the whole world. The example set by the British in their treatment of rubber will be applied to all such materials by the Allies. Since Great Britain has control of the world's supply of plantation rubber, the United States was bound to suffer. But Germany, with her 200,000 war cars, her Zeppelins, and her air-ships, will suffer still more, even if she is able to use some inferior substance in its place. The next serious check to German industry has been given by those neutral countries which, in order to secure supplies for themselves, have prohibited re-export to Germany. For some months neutral countries on the European seaboard flourished exceedingly by sales of goods which had passed British ships, or had been directly imported from England. By the end of January, however, the last of them had come into line. The Conference of Malmoe was followed by a decree of the Swedish Government forbidding any cargoes leaving her ports for a destination other than that to which they had been consigned from their port of origin. This was the last of the decrees by which neutral countries refused to make themselves the instruments of German policy. Holland had prohibited the export of petrol and of copper in October; Norway in the same month had prohibited export or re-export of petrol and benzine; Italy of tin, chrome, benzol, and rubber in November. Throughout the war Roumania had sacrificed her main commercial interest by forbidding the export of all forms of petrol suitable for automobiles, and has broken a treaty with Austria by refusing to supply her with food. The circle round Germany is now complete by the adhesion of Denmark, which, after much hesitation and much bargaining, decided in January to compel all shippers to bind their masters not to take part in a contraband trade.

It is not to be supposed that by the formation of this circle the British navy has prevented all material from reaching German workshops. Coal and iron are at their disposal as long as the provinces of Lorraine, Westphalia, and Silesia are free from invasion. If Silesia were invaded, Germany would be deprived of the main source of her fuel supply; if the French armies were to capture Metz, she would lose two-thirds of her supplies of iron. But even with these great mines intact, German industry is enormously handicapped by the want of other metals necessary for the transformation of raw material into munitions of war. Russia and British India control one of the main constituents of steel, Australia holds a large proportion of the world's stock of molybdenite, Asiatic Turkey is the only friendly producer of chrome, which is largely used by Germany as Australians learned at the time of Sir William Lyne's famous tariff bill. The need of copper in Germany has been attested by the protests of the United States, as well as by the price which is in Germany now more than double what it is in France. Though copper is not so necessary for the German armies as for the French, it is the one principal metal which Germany cannot get, and it is that one of which her existing supplies cannot be increased, except by smuggling or pillage. On land alone it is estimated that the annual consumption of the army is at the rate of 150,000 tons a year in shells and cartridges, and the consumption of the navy is on the same scale. Since Galicia was occupied by the Russians, and the Turks were driven back from the Caucasus, Germany is almost equally badly off for petrol. Inferior substitutes, such as benzol, may be, and have been, used for the army of cars, and even in submarines. But no substitute for the best essence can be used in Zeppelins and aeroplanes, where the slightest defect in motive power may bring about a disaster. For a constant supply Germany has nowhere to turn, since her allies have failed her, and the British navy has closed the route from America and the Dutch Indies. The same may be said of nitrates, a necessary element in the manufacture of explosives of all kinds. The last two cargoes of 3000 tons each from Chili, destined for Hamburg, were taken one to Bristol and the other to Nantes, and there will be no more. Germany, no doubt, has organised her supplies of material as well as her armies. But she has not organised for a long war, or for a war against the whole world. Patriotism and discipline may enable her people to make their food supplies last until the next harvest, although Germany has never been self-sufficient. But neither patriotism nor ingenuity can add to her stocks of material, nor can she reduce the supplies to her soldiers, except by gravely impairing their efficiency.

THE MILITARY SPIRIT.

Speaking to the members of the Edgecliff Rifle Club on Thursday evening on the military spirit, the State Commandant, Colonel Wallack, reminded his hearers of the glorious traditions of the British army and the Royal Navy, and remarked that Australia was now making traditions of her own. When New South Wales sent a contingent to the Soudan, the military traditions of this country began; and they were continued in the South African war. To-day we fight side by side with the soldiers of Great Britain in the greatest war of all, and soon we shall have sixty thousand men at the front—establishing fresh traditions which must, in the nature of things, be an inspiration to coming generations. A nation's soul expands by what it feeds on. The British Empire has been built up by a long succession of glorious deeds; and in all the annals of our Empire there is nothing to surpass the valour of our soldiers in these present days. Who can deny that the memories of past glories are a vitalising force, the traditions of their army and navy an ever-abiding inspiration, spurring them on to great achievements which shall take their place among those that have won the Empire? The war has inspired many noble words as well as deeds, and none shines out with purer radiance than the last message of Captain Norman Leslie, written to a friend: "Remember, we are writing a new page of history. Future generations cannot be allowed to read the decline of the British Empire and attribute it to us. We live our little lives and die. . . . But count the loss nought. It is better far to go out with honour than survive with shame." These are the plain words of a British soldier who gave his life cheerfully for his country, counting it gain for himself that his death brought gain to the Empire. Here we see what the true military spirit is, the spirit of self-sacrifice, of devotion to duty, of love for king and country. It means a conquering of self and a living for others. And when Colonel Wallack pleads for the instilling of this spirit into our people, beginning with the schools, he ought not to plead in vain. It should not be possible for the anniversary of Waterloo to pass by in any school of the Empire without some special reference to the importance of the day being made by the teachers. Trafalgar Day should not be allowed to pass without the re-telling of a story that can never grow stale wherever the flag of England waves and the English tongue is spoken. The story of Marlborough, of the gallant deeds of Drake and Hawkins and Frobisher, and other brave adventurers who gave us the kingdom of the sea—the story of all the famous fights on land and sea—should be familiar to all our children; and they will grow up the better men and women for it, with a just pride in the heritage that is theirs, and a determination to defend the Empire's possessions and their own rights and privileges. Nor will they stop there. It is because we know the blessings of freedom ourselves that we can sympathise with those who are struggling towards the light; and it is the place of a strong nation to help the weaker nations whose cause is just in its sight. More and more, as the years go on, we believe, will the British people be found as the protectors of the world's peace and the rights of the small nations. "The true military spirit means a living for others, and not for self alone," said Colonel Wallack.

There is a difference between this military spirit of which the State Commandant speaks and the militarism of which we have such a striking example in Germany. Militarism has given to that great nation a giant's power, and she does not think it infamous to use it like a giant. She would, if she could, take the world; but she could not keep it. Though she can make a vast number of people miserable for a long time, as one of the Oxford pamphleteers has put it, she could never hope to make all the inhabitants of the world miserable for all time. Such a militarism as that which before the war made the Zabern incident possible, and since the war broke out has manifested itself in such a way as to shock the civilised world, must be crushed for good and all. Germany's peculiar position doubtless made the building up of a strong army imperative after Jena, but under the domination of the Prussian military caste, with an overweening ambition to rule the world, the army that was planned for defence became a menace to all nations. It will spell her downfall. Like Frankenstein's monster, it will destroy her. There was a time—in the 17th Century—when England had to grapple with the same militarism. We saw then the encroachments of the military upon the civil authority. One demand followed another. At first the army pretended only to petition for what concerned themselves as soldiers; next they must have a vindication of their character; then it was necessary that their enemies be punished; finally they claimed the right of modelling the whole Government and settling the nation's affairs. They insulted and tyrannised over Parliament. And even outside the army there were those who expected by the terror of the sword to impose a more perfect system of liberty upon a reluctant nation. It could not last. The lesson that England learnt then is only now being learnt by Germany, nearly three centuries after. We keep no great standing armies, but when the Empire is threatened all her people rally round her standard, ready to "live their little lives and die" for her sake, and giving proof of the same inherent valour as their forbears. So long as this spirit lives in us our Empire is safe. Though in Australia we have not the monuments that England has in past glories and famous men, yet we share in the history; and now that we are beginning to make history for ourselves we must keep before us the memory of the noble deeds that have made the nation great, and in our own way endeavour to emulate them. We have our Duntroon for the training of army officers; and we have established a college at Jervis Bay for the training of naval officers. A new career is open to our sons; and surely there can be no nobler career than that of giving our lives to the service of our country. The war will do us much good. We shall not, for one thing, hear any more objections to the system of compulsory training, and with the passing of the years we may hope to see a nation trained in the use of arms. The war has awakened the spirit of the soldier in us, and in the Rifle Reserve movement, which is being joined by men of all classes and all ages, we have a sure indication that the heart of our people beats true to the traditions of the past. The military spirit burns within us, but it is the spirit of true manliness, of self-sacrifice and love of country—it is not militarism. We hope that militarism—a blatant, domineering militarism—will never be allowed to raise its head in this country. Our future lies in the peaceful development of our land; and whilst we would have our youth trained in the arts of war, it is only in order that, like the highly-trained Swiss people, they may be prepared to defend the glorious heritage that has been bequeathed them. Not for purposes of offence, but for defence, are we building up our army and navy. "Defence, not defiance" is our aim.

ONE HUNDRED SURGEONS.

SYDNEY SENDS 32.

The call for 100 medical men, to be sent from the Commonwealth to join the Royal Army Medical Corps as surgeons, with the rank of lieutenant, which, as announced in our columns recently, had been cabled from the War Office through the High Commissioner, is being responded to most satisfactorily. Twelve of the men who passed in the December examination have already sailed, and about 20 of the men who have just passed are leaving immediately.

Thus the University of Sydney sends at least 32 graduates in a few days after the request is received. Many of the men are leaving by the mail train to-morrow evening to join the steamer at Adelaide.

The following are among those who have volunteered:—Drs. S. G. W. Ratcliff, N. M. Gregg, C. Farran-Ridge, E. P. Dark, J. L. Digby, H. A. C. Wall, L. J. J. Nye, E. P. Blashki, C. M. Harris, P. S. Parkinson, B. M. Carruthers, W. S. Hawthorne, C. O. G. Donovan, W. F. S. Yeates, N. W. Broughton, J. I. M. Jamieson, J. R. M'Culloch, D. J. Browne, G. D. K. Waldron, W. A. Edwards, A. T. Roberts, W. J. Stack, R. W. Richards, N. E. Packer, C. G. Adams, C. R. R. Huxtable, A. W. G. Murray, and A. W. Raymond.

PRECEDENCE.

THE MINISTERIAL LIST.

MR. GRIFFITH'S VIEW.

CONDOBOLIN, Friday.

Speaking at a meeting Mr. Griffith (Minister for Public Instruction) had something to say with regard to the question of Ministerial precedence. "Men of different temperament," he said, "regard questions of this sort from different points of view. As my temperament differs from that of Mr. Carmichael, I can hold and express an entirely different view without any reflection on my predecessor. Personally I regard all these questions as of the most trifling importance. Whether I should appear second or tenth on the official list or sit next the chairman or halfway down the table at an official banquet is a matter of hardly greater consequence than the colour of one's necktie. The precedence that is important to me is that based upon the esteem of the electors of the State and of their recognition of the value of my public services. Some people seem to assume that because a man acquiesces without public protest in the publication of his name near the bottom of a list he is abdicating his right to the reversion of the leadership of the party should it become vacant. Personally this is not my view at all. As a matter of fact, until the recent trouble arose I did not know there was a list of precedence, and I am not quite sure now where I stand upon it. But should it unfortunately become necessary for the party to fill the position of leader that question will not be settled on any official printed list of precedence, but on the recognition of the members of the length of service and value to the movement and to the country of the men seeking the high position of leader."

Summing up the position, Mr. Griffith said in his opinion there was no doubt that technically Mr. Carmichael's contention was right, viz., that men who had just dropped into Ministerial portfolios should not rank above those who had successfully carried the standard for years; but, at the same time, he felt that Mr. Carmichael was wrong in attaching so much importance to what he (Mr. Griffith) regarded as a mere series of unimportant technicalities.

SUNDAY REFRESHMENTS.

AN OLD LAW.

MR. BLACK ON ABROGATION.

The Chief Secretary, Mr. Black, stated yesterday that he found he was in error in saying that his minute regarding the sale of refreshments on Sunday would not abrogate the law. He finds that he will abrogate an old statute passed in the reign of Charles II. The time of the Stuarts, he said, was one when monarchs, though not over-virtuous and holy themselves, expected others to be so.

Mr. Black, however, states that the fact that this old law is being abrogated will not affect his minute. He said definitely that the instructions to the police contained in the minute are to stand. The Chief Secretary recalled that in his early days in Parliament he once told Sir Henry Parkes, the then Premier, that obsolete laws should be broken till they were repealed. He intended to act on this dictum now, and, as regards the minute, he added, "nothing goes."

The Chief Secretary said further that the distinction he had drawn in his minute between consumption of refreshments on the premises and carrying them away for consumption elsewhere was in anticipation of an amendment in the law, which was already drafted and ready for submission to Parliament. He alluded to the Sunday Trading and Refreshment Rooms Bill. This bill actually had been brought down before, but, owing to the congestion of business, it had not passed. "I think," explained Mr. Black, "I was wrong in saying that there was this distinction in the law as it stands. I was a little too previous. What I should have said was that this was the intention of the bill that I knew would become an Act. I know that the majority of members of the House are in favour of it, and the majority of people outside are. One reason I have taken hold of it is to make sure that the bill is gone on with. I do not want any more delays about it."

"In any event, the position now is, Mr. Black," the Minister was asked, "that your minute still stands?"

"Yes," the Minister replied, "nothing goes."

BELGIAN TRADE.

WAR RESTRICTIONS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

A cablegram has been received from the High Commissioner intimating that goods from Belgium are not allowed to be imported into the United Kingdom, except by written authority from the Board of Trade, and the production of a consular certificate of Belgian origin. An undertaking has to be furnished that payment is to be deferred until the enemy occupation has ceased, or, if the payment be made into a bank, the importer must furnish an undertaking that the money shall not be withdrawn except under license. The Minister for Customs (Mr. Tudor) stated that whilst no restrictions would be placed on Belgian goods imported into the Commonwealth from stocks held in London, in all other cases the United Kingdom conditions would be insisted upon.

FIFTY YEARS AGO.

A glance through the files of the "Sydney Morning Herald" for the year 1865 will give the student of war literature some interesting points for thought and comparison. He has to remember that many things were different 50 years ago, and that Australia was a very small place in the world's interest. Yet as the files are turned over one thing after another attracts attention, and the half-century acquires a curious completeness. It is the same Australia, for one finds that a severe drought is being experienced then, as now. As the leading articles are scanned towards the end of 1865, the gravity of the situation grows upon the mind; and it is because the southern part of the continent is so badly hit that one could easily imagine he was in 1915. There are other things which come in to make 1865 and 1915 so strangely alike as the time is passed with the fluttering leaves. War, and neutrality, and a score of questions which occupy our thought and help to concentrate our anxieties to-day, are being discussed in the "Herald" fifty years back, or are dealt with in the news columns, and the same names appear. For instance, here is a reference to Mexico. The United States is considering the question of armed intervention, as though the commonplace of recent history was the everyday worry of American diplomatists so long ago. But the United States and Great Britain at that time were discussing war, as a possibility between themselves, because of alleged neutral misdeeds. Curiosity on the point prompts a reference to the "Annual Register" for 1865, for the following quotation:—"England adhered steadfastly to her avowed policy of neutrality—an attitude not maintained without considerable difficulty, nor without incurring occasional outbreaks of jealousy and displeasure from each of the contending parties." The London "Times," in its annual summary for 1865, with the Civil War over, after giving the pith of the news from America, says:—"It is also satisfactory to observe that the bluster of newspapers and orators is habitually counterbalanced by the good sense of a people which understands that verbal affronts are less culpable and less dangerous than actual wrongs. The menaces of a war with England, to be undertaken in revenge for imperfect sympathy as soon as the Federal armies were at leisure, have steadily and rapidly subsided since the conclusion of the civic contest."

It does not need to be noted that this is only a parallel reversed. Unfriendly remarks are passing to-day, and similar explanations are being offered; but after 50 years the United States is looking on while Great Britain is fighting for her life. Readers of the "Herald" in Australia watched it all then, as they are watching it now, but with a vastly different feeling. We are now at war ourselves, and the mother country's quarrel with Germany is our own; and still the old files are full of the strangest interest, because we seem to be watching in the news of the year 1865, the origin of the present strife. Here, for instance, is a reference to Schleswig-Holstein. In 1864 Austria and Prussia had invaded the Duchies, and taken possession, notwithstanding the engagements of the Treaty of London, signed in 1852. This treaty, to which Russia, Great Britain, France, Austria, and Prussia were parties, solemnly guaranteed to Denmark possession of the Duchies. We have only to look up the "Life" of Lord Clarendon to see how much our own folk were exercised over the matter. "Sympathy with Denmark ran strongly in England, all the stronger because the beautiful Danish princess had so lately become Princess of Wales." But neither Russia nor France was willing to move. There had been a Polish insurrection, and France had proposed that England should join her in an intervention. This was refused, though some bitter correspondence had passed between England and Russia. Finally, England had declined the suggestion of France to attend a European Congress; and when Denmark needed help the other two Powers were not to be moved. Lord Palmerston and Lord John Russell were the only members of the British Cabinet prepared to intervene at any risk, but their colleagues were not willing to face 200,000 Prussian and Austrian troops with an army of 20,000 men, notwithstanding the British Navy's readiness for war. In many respects the parallel between Belgium and Schleswig-Holstein is curiously close; but the "Times'" comment in 1865 is of special interest. It said:—"The precedent of abstaining from an extravagantly imprudent war may not improbably be followed hereafter, as it was anticipated in 1862; yet within ten years of the Russian (the Crimean) War it is premature to assume that England will never again engage in war for an idea embodied in an invaded territory." We know what has happened with Belgium in 1915, but it has taken 50 years to bring the wheel full circle.

Lord John Russell, in a letter to Lord Clarendon, in those stirring times, wrote:—"Bismarck is very amusing with his baby fleet." On which comment Sir Herbert Maxwell, Lord Clarendon's biographer, remarks:—"It has taken less than 50 years to let that baby attain very formidable stature." This latter note was written before the present war, but the point is that even as far back as 1862 Prussia was determined to possess Kiel, and to connect the North Sea with the Baltic by a canal. A German navy was in mind much earlier than we are disposed to imagine, and the invasion of the Danish Duchies had more behind it than the breaking up of the German Confederation. That union of States was not satisfactory to Prussia. Bismarck was determined to have a Germany to his own liking; and the language he used when the Diet of Frankfort spoke plainly about what should be done, or left undone, was not lacking in directness. The policy of "blood and iron" was not long in coming.

But 1865 is so important a year because it was the beginning of a course only now reaching its climax, in that the world then suddenly discovered a new Prussia. France was sadly shaken. She had entered upon a policy of adventure in Mexico, thinking that the United States, with the Civil war in full blast, would not be able to interfere: but with that internecine struggle ended there came a shock. Lord Acton in one of his lectures summarises the position in a few sentences. That great historian was beginning to discuss Bismarck as the cause of the Franco-German war of 1870, and thus continues:—"The evidence I have collected makes it difficult to approve these verdicts of absolution. The question goes back to 1865. . . . In that year the surrender of Lee altered the condition of European politics. The victorious Americans, combining the forces of North and South, resolved to expel the French from Mexico, where they had set up an offending European monarch under cover of the Civil War. They appointed a General to command the army of Mexico, which was to be recruited largely among the Confederates, and to relieve the Union of a disturbing element, and they sent him to Paris to show his patent to the Emperor. Napoleon saw and understood. Without a struggle, without a protest, he recalled his army, and left Maximilian to his fate." This was just when Prussia was ready to smash Austria, as happened at Koniggratz in the following year. Lord Acton shows how seriously the French Empire was imperilled by the war of 1866; but the withdrawal from Mexico represented a humiliation which required on the part of Napoleon III. some definite action if his throne was not to be set rocking. He quite expected Prussia to be beaten in the struggle with Austria, and had actually agreed with the latter Power how the former was to be dismembered. With this defeat staring him in the face it became imperative to prepare for a life and death battle with Prussia, and so we get to the war of 1870, with all that its settlement has since entailed.

In that fateful year of 1865 Italy was concerned in the policy of Prussia, and anxious about the fate of Austria. When the two Germanic Powers joined battle, Italy attacked Austria; and it has been argued that the so-called Seven Weeks War would have reached a different conclusion had it not been that the Austrians, like the Germans to-day, had to meet their foes on two fronts. But our present interest centres upon an Italy which is still lacking the territory then so ardently desired and fought for. The last "Edinburgh Review" has an article upon "Italia Irredenta," beginning:—"When, on July 25, 1866, Garibaldi's advance was arrested upon the heights of Trent by a telegram from General Lamarmora, Chief of the General Staff . . . he at once withdrew his troops across the frontier, but all over Italy profound dissatisfaction was felt. Garibaldi himself obeyed the order reluctantly, and the conviction remained throughout the country that had it not been for the too hasty conclusion of peace Italy's political boundary in those regions would have coincided with her natural fortification." Prussia was not prepared to support the Italian demand for the Trentino; and Bismarck later on admitted that Napoleon had intervened. Thus was the Irredentist movement born. All these events may be traced by reference or direct description through our files in 1865, and even Turkey is not omitted in the general summaries. It is as one follows the various clues in modern history and biography that the culmination, in the war now being waged, seems so inevitable.

CALAIS.

ZEPPELIN RAID.

THE KARLSRUHE.

SUBMARINE WAR.

A Zeppelin dropped bombs on Calais, seven men being killed.

The Germans state that this was in reply to a French aeroplane raid on Schlettstadt, in which two schoolgirls were killed and ten wounded.

A German aeroplane dropped 11 bombs at Poperinghe (Flanders), a woman and three children being among those killed.

The British steamer Glenartney (5201 tons) was torpedoed and sunk in the English Channel.

The French report marked gains in the Champagne, N.E. of Mesnil, and in Alsace. The Belgians are also making progress.

Fierce fighting continues in Poland. Since March 5 the German losses in the Pilica region have been 25,000.

Copenhagen reports give details of the sinking of the German cruiser Karlsruhe by an explosion in December.

WESTERN FRONT.

MARKED GAINS.

TRENCHES FULL OF DEAD.

PARIS, March 19.

A communique states: We have had marked gains north-east of Mesnil (in the Champagne), and at Hartman's Wellerkopf (Alsace), where the enemy's losses were very high, the trenches being full of dead.

The Belgians are making progress. They bombarded a convoy near Dixmude.

A French airman dropped bombs on the Conflans Railway station (Lorraine.)

A STUBBORN CONTEST.

Official details regarding the explosion of a mine chamber at Carnoy, near Albert, on March 15 show that when the mine exploded it partly filled up a French trench. The Germans who occupied it, and were subsequently driven out, established themselves in a cavity caused by the explosion. Bombarding with trench mortars and hand grenades, they succeeded in reoccupying the trench.

During the night the French infantry expelled the enemy with heavy loss. The French occupied the cavity and connected it with the trench by tunnel. They defeated a German counter-attack, killing 100.

NEUVE CHAPELLE.

GERMAN PRINCES KILLED.

LONDON, March 19.

"Eye-witness," with the British headquarters, in France, writes:—

On the 11th, we found the enemy at Neuve Chapelle, making an incessant effort to regain what they had lost.

On the 12th the Germans began to show signs of great exhaustion. The attackers frequently held up their hands when we fired. Our infantry never gave them a moment's rest.

Whole companies surrendered. The dead lay thick along the whole front.

Two thousand dead were found south of the village. Another 700 were stretched out along the front of one of our battalions east of the village.

These did not include large numbers of killed in Neuve Chapelle itself.

A patrol found a dummy figure in front of a German trench, which exploded on removal, injuring a man.

A German officer, who was taken prisoner, stated that three princes, including Prince Leopold of Hohenzollern, who were serving with the enemy forces at Neuve Chapelle, are believed to have all been killed.

BRITISH LOSSES.

A thousand wounded Indians have arrived at Brighton.

The Sixth Gordon Highlanders lost their colonel and twelve officers killed and wounded at Neuve Chapelle.

Lord Claud Hamilton states that the Grenadier Guards lost their colonel and sixteen officers. Only 300 men out of 1100 were unhurt. The Cameronians seemed to be wiped out.

SIEGE OF PRZEMYSL.

DEFENDERS' GUNS.

GERMAN LOSSES IN POLAND.

PETROGRAD, March 19.

A communique states: The guns of Przemysl continue to fire 1000 heavy projectiles daily with little effect.

There has been fierce fighting for the possession of villages on the right bank of the Narew (Northern Poland), and they are continually changing hands. Murderous machine gun fighting rules in the daytime, and desperate bayonet charges by night.

The German losses in the Pilica region (Poland) since March 5 have been 25,000.

A destroyer landed the crew at Newhaven. An apprentice died.

The Glenartney is a vessel of 5201 tons, belonging to the Caledonian S.S. Co., Ltd. She was built in 1911 at Glasgow.

THE THORDIS.

GERMAN FLEET.

VESSELS OVERHAULED.

THE EMPEROR'S INTENTIONS.

BASLE, March 19.

A telegram from Kiel states that the Dreadnoughts are being overhauled and remanned. Owing to their long rest the boilers are showing signs of rust. The warships will undergo sea trials and gun trials which will continue for a week.

Since the outbreak of the war the crews have been distributed, and many have been killed or wounded in the land fighting. The biggest guns have been sent to the Belgian coast to meet the English naval attack.

It is freely stated that the German Emperor intends to seek a fair fight in the North Sea.

KARLSRUHE'S FATE.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL STORY.

LONDON, March 19.

Evidence is accumulating that an explosion sank the German cruiser Karlsruhe on December 18, off the Grenadines, Windward Islands. The crew were brought to Germany on board the Hamburg-America liner Lionegro. The matter was kept secret in order that British cruisers might continue chasing the Karlsruhe.

Reports allege that the explosion broke the Karlsruhe in twain.

When the survivors reached Germany the men were sworn to secrecy.

West Indian letters state that much wreckage marked Karlsruhe was washed up between Saint Lucia and Grenada.

THE DRESDEN.

DETAILS OF SINKING.

MAGAZINE EXPLOSION.

VALPARAISO, March 18.

The Orama's commander, Captain Fielding, states that the German cruiser Dresden was sighted a dozen miles off Juan Fernandez. The warships immediately went in hot pursuit. The Glasgow was the first to hit her, and got in several shots before the Dresden replied.

Meanwhile the Kent swung in to intercept the Dresden's attempt to reach territorial waters. The Dresden's upper deck works were already ablaze. The Kent pumped in a few shots, when the raider hoisted the white flag.

Fire was noticed in proximity to the magazine, and an explosion occurred in a few minutes after the Germans left in their own boats.

COTTON AS CONTRABAND.

SIR WILLIAM RAMSAY'S ADVICE.

PARIS, March 18.

The "Matin" states that Sir William Ramsay, the eminent scientist, informed M. Millerand that it would be greatly to France's interest to treat cotton as contraband, as, ultimately, Germany would be forced to resort to ordinary gunpowder, which is not suitable for modern guns.

AUSTRIA AND SERVIA.

EXCHANGE OF NATIONALS.

NISH, March 18.

Austria and Servia have arranged to exchange interned females, of all ages, and males under 18 and over 50 years of age.

AIR RAIDERS.

IN THE FOG.

ATTACK ON CALAIS.

INCENDIARY BOMBS.

LONDON, March 19.

A French communique states that a Zeppelin dropped bombs on Calais, causing a little damage at the railway station. Seven employees were killed.

The correspondent of the "Daily Chronicle" at Calais says the Zeppelin arrived at midnight. The town was immediately darkened, and quick-firers manned, but the searchlights were unable to penetrate the fog.

Bombs fell for eighteen minutes. They were mostly of the incendiary kind. Only one was effective. It fell on some railway carriages, where a number of mechanics were sleeping, and the carriages were soon ablaze.

Seven men were killed, their heads and limbs being blown off. Nine were extricated alive.

Another bomb pierced a vault in the transept of Notre Dame Cathedral. Another damaged the Lamarcq hospital. A track of blazing petroleum where the bombs fell could be seen an hour after the Zeppelin left.

BERLIN STATEMENT.

GERMAN SCHOOLGIRLS KILLED.

AMSTERDAM, March 18.

It is officially stated in Berlin that French airmen dropped bombs at Schlettstadt (Alsace-Lorraine) on a school, killing two girls and wounding ten.

It is added that as a reply Calais has been bombarded with the heaviest bombs.

IN FLANDERS.

INNOCENTS SUFFER.

PARIS, March 19.

A Taube aeroplane dropped eleven bombs at Poperinghe (west of Ypres), which killed a woman, three children, two soldiers, and two other persons. Seven children and thirteen other people were wounded.

PERSIA.

GERMAN INTRIGUE.

LONDON, March 18.

The Press Bureau states that documentary evidence has reached the Government proving that German Consular officials intrigued to facilitate the Turkish invasion of Persia.

Herr Wassmuss, Consul at Shiraz, who was recently in Cairo and Constantinople, had also possession of thousands of violent inflammatory pamphlets in English, Urdu, Hindustani, Punjabi, and Sikh, calling upon the Indian army to kill their officers.

Correspondence between the German Legation and the German Consul at Bushire shows that a large consignment of ammunition and arms reached Bushire secretly, and was taken up country by Swedish officers of the gendarmerie for Persian shieks and Raisoli, a shiek who was desirous of attacking Bushire. The German Legation promised to combine Raisoli's attack with a German movement, which had been already secretly arranged, and which was designed to win over all Persia.

SOUTH AFRICA.

INDEMNITY BILLS PASSED.

CAPETOWN, March 18.

The Indemnity Bills have passed the second reading stage in the House of Assembly by 70 votes to 15.

The entire Opposition voted with the Ministry. The Hertzogites and the Labourites formed the minority.

THE BUDGET.

General Smuts submitted the Budget, which provides for a special war tax of £500,000 upon mines.

The expenditure is estimated at £16,400,000. The deficit of £2,702,000 will be met by an increase of Customs and excise dues, and by reducing the limit of exemption from income tax to £300, and increasing the scale of the tax to 1s, rising to 2s.

ESCAPED LINER.

RECAPTURED BY CRUISER.

LONDON, March 18.

The "Daily Mail" correspondent at Madrid states that a British cruiser has recaptured the liner Macedonia.

[It was reported from Las Palmas on Wednesday that the interned Hamburg-America liner Macedonia slipped out from the inner harbour during the temporary absence of the guardship, and, despite the removal of parts of the machinery, it was believed she was using wireless to attract German commerce destroyers in order to deliver war stores which she had on board.]

GERMAN SAILORS SHOT.

FOR DISOBEYING ORDERS.

LONDON, March 18.

A member of the crew of the steamer Potaro (of 4419 tons, sunk in the Atlantic in February), who was a prisoner for six weeks aboard the armed merchantman Kronprinz Wilhelm, states that six of the Kronprinz Wilhelm's crew were shot for disobeying orders.

LABOUR AND WAR.

THE OUTPUT PROBLEM.

LONDON, March 19.

The labour conference was continued yesterday, and there is every prospect of an agreement being reached.

Owing to the stevedores' strike in London, nine important merchantmen are unable to load. The Moldavia's fruit may be held up.

The executive of the Miners' Federation has recommended the districts to take the shortest possible holidays, so as to prevent curtailment of output.

HORRORS IN SERVIA.

WOUNDED UNTENDED.

PRISONERS' AWFUL PLIGHT.

LONDON, March 19.

Captain Bennett, Red Cross Commissioner in Servia, in an urgent appeal for help, describes Uskub as a valley of dead.

There is horrible over-crowding in the hospitals. Six doctors and twelve orderlies, without nurses, attempted to attend to 1800 sick and wounded. Half the doctors and orderlies are since dead or stricken down. Patients are dying of sepsis because their wounds are not dressed. Scores of doctors and fever nurses are wanted, bringing with them wooden huts for field hospitals.

The Servians are doing their best for the prisoners, but of 750 in one camp only 20 are able to stand. Sixty are dying daily, and there is nobody to remove the dead. When a stranger enters the silence of the camp is broken by moans of "For love of God give me water!" or "For God's sake, bread!"

INDIA.

EMERGENCY LEGISLATION.

TO CHECK SEDITION.

DELHI, March 18.

Lord Hardinge, Viceroy of India, in addressing the Legislative Council, read a telegram from Lord Crewe, expressing the deep satisfaction with which the King-Emperor had read the Council's resolution of Ferunary 24, thanking his Majesty for personal attention to wounded Indians, and expressing deep loyalty to the Throne. He also read a telegram from Sir John French, and the Viceroy's reply to Sir James Willcocks, expressing admiration of the Indian Empire at their great gallantry in the recent severe fighting.

SECURING PUBLIC SAFETY.

The Viceroy said that before the formal introduction of a bill to provide for special measures to secure the public safety and defence of British India, and more speedy trials for certain offences, he desired to make some remarks. On a previous occasion he had alluded to the desire of the Council to avoid the discussion of controversial questions, and a number of important measures had already been deferred. The measure to-day would present openings for controversy, but it was a precautionary measure to ensure public peace and tranquillity. It was no slur on the people, but the Government had information that the measure was absolutely necessary to meet possible emergency. No one was more jealous than he of the honour of India, and her reputation for loyalty, but he was not disposed to allow the honour and fair fame of India to be tarnished by the criminal acts of a few ill-balanced minds. He preferred taking the Council into his confidence rather than promulgate in ordinance, and was confident of their help and co-operation.

SEDITIOUS ACTIVITY.

Sir Reginald Craddock, in introducing the bill, congratulated the country that the need for the bill had not been previously felt, and emphasised its nature as a war measure. It was required in order to arm the military authorities with special powers which the emergencies of war might demand, and to nip in the bud manifestations of lawlessness which were beginning to show themselves. With a full recognition of the general loyalty of the country, he alluded to the campaign engineered from the Pacific coast of America. Some deluded men, with minds so poisoned, had returned to India during the last few months, and had committed acts of violence in Bengal. Seditious activity, though not new, had recrudasced, and become more daring. In Western Punjaub, large under economic pressure, there had been looting, incendiarism, and racial conflict between Hindus and Mohammedans. The danger could only become serious if not checked promptly. The bill fell into two parts. The first, which was generally applicable immediately, gave power to the Governor-General-in-Council to issue regulations to ensure the safety of the country. It was modelled generally on the English Defence of the Realm Act.

TRANSPORTATION.

The second part permitted the creation of a special tribunal of three commissioners, of whom two must have qualifications of sessions, or an additional session judge, to hear cases made over to them by order of the local government, concerning breaches of regulations under the Act, or any offence punishable with transportation or imprisonment for a term of seven years. The order of the tribunal should be final.

Numerous Indians heartily supported the main principles of the bill. After discussion, the bill was unanimously passed.

Sir Reginald Craddock thanked the Council for its loyal support.

CANADA.

PROHIBITION DURING WAR.

OTTAWA, March 18.

The Saskatchewan Government has decided that complete prohibition shall be effective from July 7. The Government proposes to operate the wholesale liquor trade under the dispensary system until a referendum decides whether dispensaries also ought to be abolished.

The measure is intended to be effective during the war, but if the voters so decide, it may be permanent.

WAR NOTES.

THE POPULAR VIEW.

Now that the much-heralded spring campaign is developing it would perhaps be well for us to take a calm glance over the situation. There is far more in the position than is suggested by the confident "Wait till the spring," which so many British people have been voicing for months past. As we remarked yesterday, it is not merely a case of turning loose the new British forces, the reinforced French legions, and the reorganised Belgian army—with the speedy sweeping back of the Germans beyond the Rhine to follow. It is not even a case of us laying back when the new armies have taken the field, and counting that they would be sufficient to drive the invaders slowly but steadily from France and Belgium. Ever since the Germans were forced to retreat from the very gates of Paris our people have been seized of an optimism that has tended largely to distort their sense of perspective. That first great German reverse convinced them that the enemy was beaten, that it was only a question of going on from victory to victory, merely a matter of time and he would be finally crushed. When the Germans turned on the Aisne and refused to retreat further, this was regarded as simply a temporary lull in the Allies' victorious forward march, which would soon be resumed. In the long war of the trenches—during which the Allies lost as well as gained ground—the view of the people only shifted slightly. There was the same unquestioning optimism, but it found expression in "Wait till the spring." This sanguine public opinion was fostered by the more enthusiastic press correspondents, by whose agency purely local successes of comparatively small significance in the general trend of the campaign were invested with an extraordinary importance. And every set-back sustained by the Allies was minimised. That blessed word "attrition" came into its kingdom, and the people believed that Germany's resources in men, munitions, and money were rapidly running down to the dregs. The spring would see the Allies at the height of their strength, ready to demolish almost at a blow the great, creaking Prussian engine of war.

THE DANGEROUS KIND OF OPTIMISM.

Now popular optimism is a most excellent thing in a people—it is an asset which a Government at war has need to cherish greatly. But it is not a good thing when it is carried to the length where it woefully underrates the capacity of the enemy and tends to the relaxation of effort. There was every reason for a healthy optimism when the German retreated from the gates of Paris, and was hurled back in his attempt to batter a way to Calais. It became clear that he had shot his bolt, that he could never be completely victorious in the war. There were even excellent grounds for the view that he was "beaten," though, like a beaten prize-fighter in a contest only to be judged on a knock-out, he might still fight for a draw. The whole point is that there must be no draw; there must be no relaxation of effort in the knowledge that the enemy is "beaten"—Prussianism must be administered a knock-out, or the whole of the woeful sacrifices of the Allies will have gone for nought. Most emphatically we must not rely on the view that the armies which the Allies are now putting in the field will be able to administer the knock-out swiftly; we must as emphatically not accept the view that those armies will in themselves be able to administer the knock-out at all. By this we mean that it is not sufficient to turn those armies loose and calmly await the desired result. Their advent into the field does not mark the ending of the war—it represents the beginning of the most critical phase of it, a phase that is going to transcend in blood-sacrifice any that has preceded it. More, and still more, men will be needed if the work in hand is to be carried through to the consummation we seek. It is not the voice of pessimism that tells us that—it is merely the voice of common-sense vibrating from the facts of the campaign to date. Germany is not at the end of her resources; she has in the field an army of tremendous strength and reserves upon which she still can draw, and the Allies from now onward will be acting more and more as the attackers, much the more costly role of opposing armies. We need to realise the full significance of these things, and if our optimism prevents us from doing so, and tends to a slackening of national effort, then that optimism is a bad thing indeed.

"IF THE WAR SHOULD CEASE."

One thing we can say with certainty—Germany cannot emerge victorious from the war. All beyond that seems to be largely a matter of providing a steady supply of recruits and munitions in the west and of equipment and munitions for the great legions of the Czar, who, it is now evident, are not yet all properly accoutred for the field of battle. These things must be supplied, men and material, and we can but hope that every effort will be put forth to supply them as quickly as may be. That we can afford to spare no effort is admirably illustrated by that acute international writer, Dr. E. J. Dillon, in the latest "Contemporary." He says: "An effective means of realising how we now stand . . . is to imagine that for some reason at present inconceivable the two groups of warring Powers were of a sudden constrained to make peace on the basis of their present holdings, and then note how our side would compare with its enemies. The resulting picture will enable one to gauge aright the real value of the many actions we have won against the Teutonic forces during the past three months, and also the worth of Germany's conquests made before or afterwards, and still firmly held. The prosperous kingdom of Belgium, with its rich colony, ceasing to have an independent existence, would become a German province. Ten of the northern departments of France, including the most thriving industrial and mining districts, would be wholly or partially wrenched from the Republic, and incorporated in the Teutonic Empire. Russia would lose a considerable and very valuable part of Poland. In the East she would forfeit a portion of Transcaucasia, and of her sphere of influence in Persia, inclusive of the important city of Tabriz. Germany would retain her navy and her army, and her powerful organisations. Against these heavy losses we could set only the anaemic German colonies oversea, the flourishing city of Kiao-Chao, and part of Galicia. Strengthened by these accretions, Germany would become a colossal Empire, alive with industrial, commercial, and, above all else, military and naval enterprise, and capable of bending the rest of Europe to her will. No coalition able to withstand the onslaught of her mighty forces could then be formed. . . . The Day would indeed have dawned, and the dream of the Teutonic peoples be translated into a shining reality. The end of the British Empire would be drawing near." Perhaps it would be as well if the more sanguine of our readers were to peruse that extract a second time.

THE IMPORTANCE OF COTTON.

Sir William Ramsay, in urging upon M. Millerand, the French Minister for War, the desirableness of treating cotton as contraband, is only re-echoing views that have already been emphatically expressed by a number of people in England. Mr. Hilaire Belloc has referred to the matter several times. As he points out, cotton is not only a harmless substance, which provides the civilian portion of the enemy with a livelihood, with wealth, and with clothing. Nor is it even only a necessary requisite, for the equipment of the troops, whose function it is to kill or disable as many of the Allies as they can. It is also the equivalent of what was known to generations of soldiers as the chief factor in ammunition—gunpowder. Every explosive charge which launches a missile in modern war is simply cotton treated in a particular fashion—"nitrated," as it is called. The proportion in which it is "nitrated" gives it its explosive character, or lack of chemical equilibrium. The chemicals whereby cotton is subjected to the process of nitration, which turns it from a harmless vegetable product to an explosive, are obtainable by Germany and Austria in spite of the blockade. They are obtainable, in the last resort, from the air. But cotton cannot be produced in Europe at all, and to cut off the entry of cotton into Germany would be almost certain to force her to resort to the old gunpowder, which is not suitable for modern guns. Certainly other substances than cotton could be used for the purposes of making the explosive into which it now enters—wood pulp, for instance, or even rags. But before this could be done on a large scale it would mean, among other things, the erection of new plant and a host of new experiments, all representing a prolonged delay in the output of ammunition, and a serious handicap to Germany. But, so far, the Allies have consistently refused to put cotton on the contraband list—and it may be taken that their attitude has been dictated by political motives. Cotton represents a very great item in the United States exports, and it was purely out of consideration for the great transatlantic Republic that it was not placed among the banned articles. The latest decision of the Allies, however, in regard to tightening up the blockade of Germany, should have the effect of cutting off the latter's supplies of cotton to a very serious extent.

IN EGYPT.

THIRD CONTINGENT ARRIVES.

TRAINING ON DESERT.

(FROM CAPTAIN C. E. W. BEAN, COMMONWEALTH PRESS REPRESENTATIVE.)

CAIRO, March 18.

The season here is already full spring. The fruit blossom is out, and new green is covering all the trees. Flies are becoming pestilential, and occasional fierce hot winds from the desert bring down clouds of sand, lasting a day or two, and settling like a fog over the landscape.

Through all this, the troops have worked thoroughly well. The hardest part of training is now over. Probably the stiffest period was for about a fortnight before the Turkish attack on the canal, when the troops were working solidly in the desert from eight o'clock to five every week day. Since then, the authorities, in order to keep the men fresh, instituted one whole holiday every week, besides half on Sundays. Hard work in the dust naturally tells on the health of a proportion of the men, but this incident of training is absolutely unavoidable and willingly incurred. Willingness is the chief virtue of these Australian troops. British and French officers who watch them never fail to remark on this.

Those who have fallen victims to pneumonia, which is always the prevalent complaint amongst soldiers in Egypt, have died as truly in the service of their country as any who die on the battlefield.

An Egyptian paper publishes a statement that altogether seven soldiers have fallen down the Pyramids of Cheops, of whom four were killed, and one was sent back to Australia with spinal injuries. As this may possibly reach Australia, I may state that the fact is that one soldier has died through a fall on the Pyramid. He was a territorial. One Australian injured his spine. No other casualties on the Pyramids are known of by the authorities.

The third contingent has arrived, and is now in camp, after a splendid voyage, which was quite uneventful. There was not a single rough day. The horses are splendid.

One transport one day picked up a wireless message, but it turned out to be from a consort. She was asking for Epsom salts.

WAR NEWS.

WHAT TO BELIEVE OF IT.

M. Hiliare Belloc contributes an interesting article to "Pearson's Magazine" on the subject of "What to Believe in War News."

"The importance of a sound public judgment upon the progress of the war," he says, "is not always clearly appreciated. It depends upon truths which many men have forgotten, and upon certain political forces which, in the ordinary rush and tumble of professional politics, are quite forgotten.

"How is the plain man to distinguish in his news of the war what is true from what is false, and so arrive at a sound opinion? In the first place, the bases of all sound opinion are the official communiques read with the aid of a map. You must read impartially the communiques of the Austro-Hungarian and of the German Governments, together with those of the British Government and its Allies, or you will certainly miss the truth. Unless you compare all the statements of this sort, you will have most imperfect evidence.

"These official communiques have certain things in common by whatever Government they are issued. These common features we may tabulate thus:—(a) Places named as occupied by the forces of the Government in question are really occupied. To invent the occupation of a town or point not in one's own hands would serve no purpose; (b) Numbers, when they are quoted in connection with a really ascertainable fact, and with regard to a precise and concrete circumstance, are nearly always reliable; though their significance differs very greatly according to the way they are treated. Thus, if a Government says, in such-and-such a place or on such-and-such a day we took 3000 prisoners, it is presumably telling the truth, for the enemy who has lost those prisoners knows it as well as they do. But estimates of what has happened in the way of numbers, where the Government issuing the estimate can have no direct knowledge, are quite another matter. These are only gathered from prisoners or from spies, and are often ridiculously wrong; (c) all official communiques of whatever Government conceal reverses, save in minor points. They are wise to do so, because there is no need to tell the enemy more than he may know of his own success. Reverses are not actually denied. They are omitted.

"The various governments issuing the communiques have acquired certain habits in them which are worth noting if one is attempting to get at an accurate view of the war, and these habits may be briefly described as follows:—The British Government publishes short notes of advances made or of positions maintained, but very rarely refers to the losing of ground. It publishes casualty lists, which are, of course, not complete till very long after the events wherein the casualties were incurred. It supplements the short communiques, and this by a more or less expanded narrative written by an official deputed for that purpose and giving accounts, often graphic, but necessarily of no military value; of no value, that is, for following the campaign. For if these narratives were of that kind the object of the censorship would be defeated. The Belgian Government at the beginning of the war allowed very full accounts to go through, and permitted the presence of correspondents at the front itself. That phase is now over and does not immediately concern us.

"The French Government is by far the most reticent. It occasionally mentions the capture of a colour, but it publishes no casualty lists, no account of the field guns taken by French troops, and only now and then hints at the number of prisoners. It is, however, minutely accurate and even detailed in helping us to locate the fluctuations of the front, and by the aid of the French communiques we can follow the war upon the map better than by the aid of any other. In its control of the press the French General Staff is absolute. There has been nothing like it before, and it has been perfectly successful. There is lastly to be noted in connection with the French communiques, especially after the first two months of the campaign, a remarkable frankness with regard to the occasional giving of ground by their own troops. The theory is that the enemy will know this in any case, and that as the position is secure, details of the sort, though adverse, lend strength to the general narrative. The Russian Government is accurate, and, if anything, a little too terse in what it communicates to the public, but its censorship is far less strict than that of the French or even the English.

"When we turn to the enemy's communiques, we note first that the Austro-Hungarians are rare, insufficient, and confused. They are of little service, and may almost be neglected. But the German ones are numerous, extended, and precise, and it is our particular business to judge them accurately if we are to understand the war, for when or if they tell the truth it is from them that we learn what would otherwise be hidden. Well, in my judgment, these official German communiques are in the main remarkably exact, and I believe it is possible to say why they are so exact. The German General Staff makes war in a purely mechanical fashion. It gravely exaggerates, as do all modern North Germans, the calculable element in human affairs. It is what used to be called 'scientific.' It is obvious that if you get a reputation for exactitude your falsehood, where it pays you to tell the falsehood, will be the more likely to work. The remarkable general accuracy of the official German communiques cannot be due to any other object. It cannot be due to a mere love of truth, for the same government deliberately circulates to its own provincial press and to certain neutrals stories which cannot in the nature of things be true. Nor is this inaccuracy the result either of haste or of stupidity; it is very intelligent and obviously deliberate. When, therefore, a German communique tells an untruth, that untruth is deliberate and upon an effective scale, and we have to consider what object it has, if we are to understand the news. We may take it that the object is nearly always domestic and political. Remember that these official German falsehoods, countersigned by the General Staff and the Government, are as rare as they are solid. They do not slip in. They are not vague or led up to by doubtful phrases. Let me take two of them. Scarborough was officially described as a fortified port, like Sheerness or Cherbourg. That takes one's breath away. But monstrous as it is, it is not childish, because it was intended to give to the public that read it at home a certain effect, which was, in fact, produced. It may be added in conclusion that, while German communiques rarely wander into conjecture, when they do they are idiotic."

OUR TROOPS.

RUSSIANS ANXIOUS TO ENLIST.

LANGUAGE DIFFICULTY.

RETURNED SOLDIERS REJECTED

A fine body of men were lined up yesterday to be despatched to Liverpool, after having passed the enrolling officer and the doctor. The majority of them were country men, who could both ride and shoot, and will make a useful addition to the men already undergoing training at Liverpool.

The outstanding feature of the applications was that of two Russians. They were well-set-up men, and very keen on getting to the front. They had the permission of their consul to join the Australian expeditionary forces, but unfortunately one of them could not speak a word of English. This was considered detrimental, but when explained to him he said, through his compatriot, who had a knowledge of our language, that in a week's time he would have learned enough English to understand and carry out all orders. He was told to return in the time he specified, and then if he could grasp what was said to him, he and his friend, who could speak English, would be put on the strength.

One of the men recently returned from Egypt, and discharged on the grounds of misconduct, also offered himself for re-enlistment. A number of his mates waited outside the barrack gates to see how he would get on. He did not get on. The detectives saw him at once, and he was immediately ordered to leave the barracks. As he wended his way out his crowd of companions faded away as well. Not one of the men who have been returned for misconduct will be taken on again on any consideration.

Major E. F. Harrison, director of military training, passed through Sydney yesterday, en route for Newcastle.

Bandsmen who are willing to enlist for service in a band at Liverpool are requested to meet the bandmaster at 11 Rowe-street, Sydney, on Monday next between the hours of 10 and 12. The band is for home service only, and the remuneration is the same as paid to members of the Expeditionary Forces.

"E. F. M.": During the time your husband was in camp, if he was being paid at a less rate than 8s per day, you were entitled to the separation allowance for yourself and children.

"H. R. F.": If you wish to join the Australian Engineers in any future reinforcements, or expeditionary forces, you must enrol in the infantry, stating in your application that you are a qualified engineer. As soon as there is a vacancy in the Engineers you will be transferred to that corps. There is no other way of joining.

"Anxious:" A private in the forces may, after reaching non-commissioned officer's rank, study for commissioned rank. It all depends upon the man and the manner in which he passes his examinations. He must study, of course, the whole time.

Colonel J. G. Legge arrived from Melbourne yesterday.

Lieutenant-Colonel P. P. Abbott, who is to command one of the Light Horse regiments, arrived from Glen Innes yesterday.

THE SOLDIERS' CLUB.

The movement for establishing a club for soldiers in Sydney is meeting with gratifying support.

Information will be gladly given to anyone addressing inquiries to Dr. Mary Booth, 17 Castlereagh-street.

COOLAMON, Friday.

Dr. Arthur J. Mollison has left Coolamon with the intention of going to the front.

RIFLE RESERVES.

PRESS RIFLE CLUB.

Among the matters considered at a meeting of the committee of the Press Rifle Club, held at the rooms of the Australian Journalists' Association yesterday, was the question of providing uniforms for members. It was ultimately decided that the secretary obtain prices and samples of suitable clothing, which would be submitted to a general meeting of members, when steps would be taken to inaugurate a fund for the purpose of purchasing the uniforms. The funds already in hand (£50 from the proprietors of the "S.M. Herald" and "Sydney Mail," and £7 2s from the proprietors of the "Evening News" and "Town and Country Journal") would be the nucleus of the fund. Steps were also taken by the committee to allow of the members undergoing their musketry course on the range. Drills will be held on Monday evening at 7.30 and on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, when it is hoped new members will be enrolled, all newspaper employees being eligible.

WOOLLAHRA.

The Woollahra Rifle Club continues to make steady progress, a number of new members having been enrolled during the week. The drills on Tuesday and Thursday nights were well attended, great satisfaction being expressed by Captain Soane, military instructor to the club, at the smartness of the men. The club proposes holding a parade and march throughout the district on Wednesday next, at 7.45, when the Eastern Suburbs Band will be in attendance. Members are specially requested to roll up in full strength at the drill of Tuesday, the 23rd inst., prior to Wednesday's route march, and to muster opposite the area office in Ocean-street, Woollahra, on the latter evening at 7.35 sharp. The secretary is in attendance at the orderly room, 80 Queen-street, Woollahra, every evening, between 7.30 and 9 o'clock, for the enrolment of members.

PETERSHAM DISTRICT.

A meeting of the Petersham District Rifle Club members was held at the Petersham Town Hall on Thursday night, when the following office-bearers were elected:—Captain, Mr. A. C. Rofe; hon. secretary, Mr. R. R. Mackenzie; hon. treasurer, Mr. E. A. Tyler; committee, Messrs. S. Smith, jun., A. H. Moyes, Staff, D. G. Bathgate. The by-laws were submitted and adopted.

NEWTOWN-ERSKINEVILLE.

Parades during the week have been a great success as regards numbers and efficiency. All parades in future will assemble at Newtown Bridge, near Town Hall, Saturday, 3 p.m., Monday and Wednesdays 8 p.m.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—So much has been said lately about the spiritual care of our soldier lads who are undergoing their training at Liverpool one cannot but recognise the great work which the Y.M.C.A., Salvation Army, and Church of England have been doing. What has become of the love the other denominations have for their members who are in camp? We hear so much about the Roman Catholic authorities complaining re chaplains, etc. What are they doing? There are hundreds of Catholics at the camp, but no tent. The priest in charge at Liverpool has for years being doing splendid work, but one cannot expect too much from one, although so willing. Is it fair to see the Catholics walking so far to Church on Sundays, whilst the others have their services on the ground. In Victoria and Queensland they have a tent and all conveniences for the use of Catholics. Surely Archbishop Kelly can see his way clear to attend to this important matter and appoint a chaplain—say a Jesuit Father—they are so noted for their work among the military throughout the world. I am sure large numbers of Catholic choir members would give a hand re the singing on Sundays. Trusting that some action will be taken in this important matter.

I am, etc.,

THE SUBMARINE.

(By M.)

By means of a supposed large fleet of submarines the Germans are at present pursuing a campaign of open piracy. So far, however, they have met with comparatively little success, and from present indications it does not seem likely that they will do better in the future. To the man "in the street" the submarine is a phantom ship. He has walked around the shores of Farm Cove, and has gazed across the water at the great battleship Australia, at the cruisers, and at the destroyers. He has seen all these boats, and has marvelled at the grim strength exhibited by every line of their contour, but the submarine——. Of these vicious, insect-like craft of the battle fleet he knows little or nothing. A few months prior to the outbreak of war he read of the arrival in Port Jackson of Australia's first two submarines, but he never saw them, and when he learned that "A.E.1." had foundered with all hands he was not surprised. "I always had my doubts about the safety of those infernal boats," he soliloquised, "and the only wonder to me is that more of 'em don't go to the bottom. As for the chaps who ship aboard them—well, they're game. I might face a German machine gun, or go up in an aeroplane to make a reconnaissance, or be aboard the Iron Duke when the German High Sea Fleet is sighted in the North Sea, but when it comes to going down into the depths of the ocean in a submarine I draw the line."

Yet we are told that, despite the many terrible disasters which have befallen underwater craft, there are more volunteers for this branch of the British Navy than can possibly be accepted, and that consequently the Admiralty is able to select the very cream of the service for the manning of the submarines. Only men who, besides passing the medical and other examinations, possess the very highest character, stand a chance of selection.

A submarine flotilla manoeuvring at sea is a somewhat weird sight. In the distance it looks like half a dozen casks floating on the surface of the water, but as it draws nearer the casks become elongated until at close quarters the observer might be forgiven should he mistake the flotilla for a number of old bath-tubs floating upside down. There is no splash or churning up of the water, but suddenly and with one accord the domes disappear, leaving only the poles visible above the water. In a few minutes they also disappear, and there is nothing left, not so much as a ripple, to show that anything out of the ordinary had occurred, and that beneath the surface are half a dozen death-dealing silent machines, capable of sending the mightiest Dreadnought to the bottom.

The first sensation one experiences on squeezing through the narrow manhole in the conning tower, says one naval writer, is that of oppressive, damp heat, while the air seems thick and "sticky." In shape the narrow interior somewhat resembles a huge cigar, tapering away fore and aft to mere points; the top or ceiling sloping down at each end, so that to explore the inside thoroughly it is necessary to do a great deal of it on all fours. The highest part is under the conning tower, where a man six feet high can stand upright and still have six inches to spare. On every side and overhead there is machinery of a peculiarly complicated character. Wheels, dials, levers, and taps are scattered about in bewildering numbers. Beneath the deck are concealed storage batteries and ballast tanks, while amidships on each side, are the torpedoes, their discharge tubes being situated right forward in the nose of the vessel. When a torpedo is fired it is obvious that the boat must lose a certain weight, and if this is not immediately equalised, her equilibrium will be disturbed, with possibly very dangerous results. To prevent this, and maintain a constant equipoise, the tubes are provided with what are known as compensation tanks. These, as soon as the torpedo has left the tube, admit an equivalent weight of water, which is ejected as soon as another torpedo is inserted. On each side of the vessel are steel cylinders, or air flasks, containing air compressed to 2000lb per square inch, a pressure which, if the air were allowed to escape through a hole no larger than a pin's head, would penetrate three or four inches of solid oak as easily as a steel gimlet. The ballast tanks when full provide a reserve buoyancy sufficient to bring the boat to the surface without the aid of propulsion.

Immediately the submarine dives beneath the waves, light is provided by a number of electric bulbs. There are no ports, so that, contrary to the belief of many, the crew of the submarine is not treated to weird and wonderful visions of life beneath the sea. As a matter of fact the underwater boat is as blind as a bat, and is steered entirely by means of a periscope fixed at the top of the hollow mast. This tube, according to the authority already quoted, contains 17 lenses, corrective and magnifying, and at the top is a glass-protected convex, silvered lens, with its convex face looking down the tube. This lens collects the light from every point of the compass and by its shape throws the rays straight down the tube to a prism at the bottom, in which they are seen through an eyepiece in the form of a complete circle. There is almost complete silence when the boat is submerged, practically the only sound being the whirr of the motors. Beyond a slight tilt there is nothing to suggest that the vessel is below water, as of course there is no wash, and however rough it may be on the surface the effect of the waves is not felt by those beneath.

As is well known, Admiral Sir Percy Scott gives a forward place to the submarine. He is of the opinion that submarines have entirely revolutionised naval warfare, and that the submarine can deliver a deadly attack even in broad daylight. The navy of the future, according to Admiral Scott, will be entirely changed. The naval officers will no longer live on the sea but either above or underneath it, and the strain on their systems, and nerves will be so great that a very lengthy period of service will not be advisable. It will be a navy of youth, for we shall require nothing but boldness and daring. "A battleship is not immune from attack even in a closed harbour," says the Admiral, "for the so-called protecting boom at the entrance can easily be blown up. With a flotilla of submarines commanded by dashing young officers, of whom we have plenty, I would undertake to get through any boom into any harbour and sink or materially damage all the ships in that harbour."

Although it is only within recent years that the submarine has been brought to anything like perfection, inventive minds have for centuries been endeavouring to produce underwater craft. In a paper published in Edinburgh on June 7, 1596, John Napier, of Mercheston, speaks of "devices of sailing under water," which he "hopes to perform." An attempt was made in James II.'s reign to row a boat under water. In 1774 a man named Day was drowned in Plymouth Sound in a submarine boat which he had invented; and at about the same time Bushnell, of Connecticut, and Robert Fulton, made other unsuccessful experiments, as did a German inventor, Bauer, about 1850. In 1860 the Plongeur submarine, designed by Bourgois and Brun, and built at Rochefort, was propelled by compressed air, but the vessel was not a success.

RETURNED SOLDIERS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Minister for Defence (Senator Pearce) made an announcement to-day with reference to the men who returned recently from Egypt, invalided home by the hospital steamer Kyarra. These men, to the number of about 100, have been under medical supervision at the police depot, St. Kilda-road, and the Minister stated that the greater number of them had been discharged. Those who were able to leave for their own homes had left the hospital. The Victorians were discharged yesterday, and the South Australians left for Adelaide the same day. The Tasmanians left Melbourne on their return to Launceston today, and the New South Wales and Queensland members also left Melbourne to-day. The Western Australians will journey home by the steamer to-morrow.

It has been arranged that those men who are being discharged from the Australian Imperial Force will receive payment for 14 days after the date of their reporting themselves at their own district headquarters.

DEATH OF MR. J. J. CALVERT

CLERK OF PARLIAMENTS.

UNIQUE RECORD.

The death of Mr. John Jackson Calvert, I.S.O., which took place at his late residence, Maybank, Manly, yesterday morning, in his 85th year, removes from our midst one of the best known and most popular of our citizens. He was the last survivor of all the officials who were in our first Parliament under responsible government, and of the members who sat in it not one now remains. Mr. Calvert saw much history made in this country.

When, on November 18 last, the President of the Legislative Council, Sir Francis Suttor, announced the retirement of Mr. Calvert from the position of Clerk of Parliaments, he paid a high tribute to his ability, his knowledge of Parliamentary law, and his unvarying courtesy. As Sir Francis Suttor then pointed out, Mr. Calvert's position was a unique one in the history of the State. He entered the Civil Service nearly 62 years ago, and with the beginning of responsible government was appointed one of the clerks of Parliament. For some little time he served in the Legislative Assembly, and was then promoted to the Upper Chamber. For 58 years he was connected with Parliament, and for 43 years he occupied the position of Chief Clerk of the Legislative Council and Clerk of Parliaments. Mr. Calvert was more than an official; he was the friend of all the members of the Council, and his knowledge of Parliamentary procedure and of the legislation of the past was of great value to them. It was something for Mr. Calvert to look back upon with pride that his public services had covered practically one-half of the history of the State, and that he had received every President who sat in the Legislative Council.

Mr. Calvert used to say that perhaps the proudest period of his life was in 1871, when Sir James Martin, the then Premier, sent for him and offered him the position of the Senior Officer of Parliament, held for some years with so much ability and distinction by the late Mr. Richard O'Connor, the father of the late High Court Judge, Mr. Justice O'Connor. Mr. Calvert was then only in his 40th year. In his time he was associated with all the giants of the past as they reached the Council, as well as the great men who were associated with the Assembly only. These included Mr. Wentworth, Sir James Martin, Sir J. E. Darvall, Sir Stuart Donaldson (father of Archbishop Donaldson), Sir Henry Parkes, Sir Charles Cowper, Sir John Robertson, Mr. W. Bede Dalley, and many others who were their contemporaries.

Born on August 31, 1830, Mr. Calvert was a son of the Very Rev. Thomas Calvert, D.D., who was Dean of Manchester and formerly Norrisian Professor and Fellow and Tutor of St. John's College, Cambridge, and Juliana, eldest daughter of Sir Charles Watson, Bt., of Fulmer, Bucks, who married Juliana Copley, a sister of the Marchioness of Abercorn and Lady Manners. Mr. Calvert was educated at Shrewsbury School and Brasenose College, Oxford. He arrived in Sydney in 1853, and was appointed by Sir Charles Fitzroy to the Colonial Secretary's Department, when the late Sir Edward Deas-Thomson held the position of Colonial Secretary. When the country was granted responsible government, Mr. Calvert was transferred by the Donaldson Ministry to the Assembly as Clerk of Select Committees. On the death of Mr. John Black, brother of Mr. R. J. Black, M.L.C., Mr. Calvert was appointed by Sir Charles Cowper to the Legislative Council. Rapidly he gained ground, until he succeeded in 1871, Mr. Richard O'Connor as Clerk of the Council and Clerk of Parliament. In 1904 the distinction of the Imperial Service Order was conferred upon him.

On his retirement Mr. Calvert received 12 months' leave of absence on full pay, and it was announced that at the end of that time he was to receive a pension commensurate with the very valuable services he had rendered to the country.

In his younger days Mr. Calvert took a great interest in sport. He played goal for Oxford in the late 'Fifties—in a style of Rugby different from that of the present day. Afterwards he became president (the first and only one) of the New South Wales Rugby Union—holding that position for a period of 41 years. He was a member of the A.J.C., and vice-president of the New South Wales Cricket Association. Formerly he was secretary of the I Zingari Cricket Club, and he never missed a big cricket match if he could help it. But he was an all-round lover of sport, and used to be a regular contributor to the sporting pages of the press. He was a vice-president of various sporting bodies at Manly, where he resided for so long.

Mr. Calvert married Miss Barker, daughter of the late Mr. James Barker, who survives him, and there are two sons and one daughter of the marriage—Mr. Cecil Hamilton Calvert, Assistant Clerk of Parliament; Mr. Thomas Copley Calvert, civil engineer, of this city, and Mrs. Reginald Calvert, who is residing in England.

The funeral will take place at 11.30 this morning, at the Manly cemetery.

INTERNED IN HOLLAND.

NAVAL DIVISION.

RETREAT FROM ANTWERP.

The following is taken from a letter just received by Mr. H. C. Cooper, of Waverley, from his cousin, Stanley French, A.B., who is interned at Groningen, Holland:—

"I have now been in Holland since about October 10, after the Antwerp affair. My career as a member of the naval division was very short lived. You undoubtedly remember that I belonged to the Naval Volunteer Reserve. Well, at the declaration of war we were mobilised, but, there being no prospect of our being drafted to ships, Mr. Churchill established his Naval Brigade, consisting of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve, active service sailors in barracks, men of the Royal fleet, and Royal Naval Reserves.

"We started serious training at Walmer (Kent) at the beginning of September, and after about four weeks' good hard training we were pushed across to the Continent at a moment's notice. We were aroused on a Sunday morning at 5.30, and ordered to fall in on the parade ground immediately. This we did, and were informed that we were to embark from Dover at 2 p.m.

"Needless to say, our destination was unknown, but about 8.30 a.m. we found we were nearing Dunkirk. Thence we took train to Antwerp, and within three or four hours of arriving there we were marched into the trenches. There was very little rifle fire, the work consisting of artillery duels and the bombardment of the town by the enormous 42 c.m. guns of the enemy. Well, after five days in the trenches without sleep and very little to eat, we received instructions from headquarters to retire. We were, of course, fighting some miles outside Antwerp, and the retreat had to be carried out carefully. We started at 9.30 p.m., and marched continuously till 5 a.m., when we arrived at the burning oil tanks outside Antwerp. We crossed the Scheldt by a steamer standing near by, and after a little rest proceeded on our way with the object of reaching Ostend. After a few more hours' marching we arrived at a place called St. Gilis Waes, where we entrained. The train started, but after running for a few minutes stopped, and we were told to get out immediately. We were then in a sad plight. We were informed that the line to Ostend had been blown up, and the enemy were almost upon us. There was no hope for us. We had had no rest for nearly six days, very little food, and were nearly worn out after our long march, which, all told, amounted to about 50 miles. Our only hope therefore in preference to being taken prisoners by the Germans was to retire into Dutch territory, two or three miles up the line. We arrived at a small town called Hulste, so if you consult the map you will see that we had a long journey by rail and water before arriving at Groningen.

"It is rather 'sad' here. We amuse ourselves as best we can, reading, studying, and card-playing. Some of the fellows have hobbies, such as fretwork. Every two days out of three we have a route march, lasting 1½ hours, which keeps us fairly fit. The food is fair—all boiled stuff.

"We are all anxious to get out of this, and two or three have tried to escape without success. The only hope is in Holland joining in the war, but they are not at all anxious about this, and I do not think they will do so until they are forced."

MALARIAL FEVER.

The Board of Health recently recommended that malaria should be added to the list of notifiable diseases under the Public Health Act, and a proclamation is contained in Wednesday's issue of the "Government Gazette," declaring acute malarial fever to be an infectious disease for the purposes of the Act. It will therefore now be incumbent upon medical practitioners to notify any cases seen by them to the local authority for the district in which the patient then is.

H.M.A.S. AUSTRALIA.

MINISTER PRAISES HER WORK.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

"I think that the work done by H.M.A.S. Australia has never yet been properly recognised by the Australian people," declared Senator Pearce, Minister for Defence, to-day. "Not only did she save our ports from bombardment and our mercantile shipping from being held up, but it undoubtedly was the driving force that sent the German squadron into the arms of Admiral Sturdee. Had it not been for the Australia the German squadron had no reason to leave the Pacific."

TRAWLING.

THE STATE VENTURE.

The three trawling steamers purchased by the State Government will soon reach Sydney, and no time is to be lost in putting them into service. The new venture aims at supplying fresh fish, first to Government institutions, and secondly to the public.

The trawling scheme was initiated by Mr. Cann when Chief Secretary, and his successor, Mr. Black, states that he is waiting to have a consultation with Mr. Stead, of the Fisheries Department, who has been making inquiries abroad, and who is expected to arrive in Sydney on Easter Monday.

Mr. Cann yesterday made available a recent report by Mr. Stead, who wrote:—

"I visited all the principal fishing ports, and have a fairly complete first-hand knowledge of the handling of much larger quantities of fish than it will be economically practical to deal with in Australia for many a day. Land conveyance of fish by road and rail, and the various types of vehicles and receptacles, were given very close attention; and the marketing of fish from the seaside to municipal and other distributing agencies inland, has received great consideration."

TRADING WITH ENEMY.

MORE PROSECUTIONS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Attorney-General (Mr. Hughes) since his return from his holidays has authorised 12 prosecutions under the Trading With the Enemy Act. The Attorney-General made a humorous remark about the assumed ignorance of certain commercial men. "These commercial Alices in Wonderland," he said, "are wonderful. There are quite a number of people who seem to be in a state of perpetual astonishment, asking themselves how, with such honourable records as they have possessed, they could have fallen into such pitfalls. They know nothing, and they never knew anything. They profess to ignore the facts. The laws have been passed, and they are ignorant of everything." These cases are divided between Melbourne and Sydney.

KILLED IN ACTION.

Lieutenant Noel Barrington, only son of Mr. Fourness Barrington, of Sydney, is reported by private cable as having been killed in action in Flanders about March 10. He received his commission from the Oxford University as second lieutenant in the Royal Irish Rifles at the outbreak of war, and was promoted to full lieutenant in December. The deceased officer was 21 years of age.

MOTOR AMBULANCES.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Her Excellency Lady Helen Munro Ferguson was yesterday presented with two more motor ambulances for service with the British Red Cross Society. The first was the gift of Mr. R. M. Blackwood, and the second was purchased out of funds collected by the Essendon branch of the Red Cross Society.

NEW ZEALAND'S VOTE.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Friday.

Official figures of the result of the prohibition poll in last December are:—

BARRIER UNIONISTS.

STRIKE THREAT.

BROKEN HILL, Friday.

The Hotel, Club, and Restaurant Employees' Union last night decided to ask for a conference with the Hotelkeepers' Association regarding the wages matters now before the Wages Board, and also passed a resolution—"That in the event of the Hotelkeepers' Association refusing to meet this union, and recognise the old log in conference, and the employers' representatives failing to withdraw their proposals for a new log as presented to the Wages Board, by 2.30 p.m. on Tuesday, this union will call out all employees in those places who do not give their consent in writing to the union that the old log shall be maintained and made the ruling rate by the Wages Board for the district."

STATE BORROWINGS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Reference was again made by the Prime Minister (Mr. Fisher) to the question of the States carrying out their borrowing in London through the Commonwealth. It appears, however, that the Prime Minister's views on this subject are not shared by the majority of the State Premiers. So far only one State, Tasmania, has intimated its willingness to accept Mr. Fisher's proposals.

LABOUR ORGANISER FINED.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

In the Ballarat Court on Wednesday Thomas Richards, formerly organiser for the Labour party at Ballarat, was charged that being "a person witnessing an electoral claim by one Adam Hamm, and not personally acquainted with the facts, did not satisfy himself by inquiry that the statements in the said electoral claim were true." Defendant was fined £10, with £3 16s 6d costs. A stay for 21 days was granted.

VICTORIAN PARLIAMENT.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Cabinet has decided that the State Parliament shall reopen on April 20 or 21.

DISCREDITED CONFESSION.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Friday.

Charles Harvey appeared at the Magistrate's Court, Wellington, on remand, charged with the murder of a Chinaman, Wong Ching, at Wellington, in September last. The police applied for the charge to be withdrawn. Accused confessed to committing the crime, but the police failed to substantiate his statement. Accused was discharged.

NEW MUSICIANS' UNION.

A new Musicians' Union has been formed in Sydney as a result of the recent cancellation by Mr. Justice Edmunds of the local registration of the Musicians' Union of Australasia. Yesterday the new body took definite form, when at a well-attended meeting at the Queen's Hall the actions of a provisional committee, including an application for registration under the Industrial Arbitration Act, were unanimously and enthusiastically endorsed.

BURRA TRAGEDY.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

The Burra murder still remains a mystery, despite the vigorous searching of the police. The weapon with which Escott was killed has not been discovered. All the community surrounding Burra and Black Springs are assisting of officers of the law.

BELGIUM.

NATIONAL FUND.

The work of covering the city of Sydney with a close organisation to raise regular subscriptions to the National Belgian Relief Fund is progressing.

Mr. Hunter reports that a most useful idea has been struck by Mr. Wm. Lowe. This gentleman has opened a weekly subscription list in his establishment, and has undertaken to subsidise all the money subscribed by the employees at the rate of pound for pound. This will give a most satisfactory result, and it is an example that might well be copied. In addition to this, Mr. Lowe has undertaken to form a committee of half a dozen business men to take charge of the block bounded by George, Pitt, Park, and Market streets, and thoroughly canvass it. The secretaries at Challis House would be glad to hear from business men who would undertake a like task in other blocks. Mr. W. L. Kerr has taken up the work in block George, Pitt, Park, and Bathurst streets, and Mr. E. C. Clegg is forming a committee for O'Connell-street.

Powerful committees have been invited to act in Sussex, Kent, York, and Clarence streets, and when they have got to work it is expected that very substantial results will be obtained from this highly important centre of the mercantile life of the State.

Asked as to how the fund was going, Mr. Hunter said yesterday:—"The subscriptions have fallen off instead of increasing, and this applies to the fund being raised by the Belgian Consul, as well as to the National Fund. Of course, it is too early yet to form any idea of what result will come in from the country districts, and, judging by the whole-hearted way in which the movement has been taken up through the municipalities and shires, it promises well. Still, we want £1000 per day, and this only feeds the Belgians for one day a month. Some one else has got to look after them for the other 29 or 30 days. For the past five days our daily takings have been £320 1s 10d, £310 13s 6d, £217 19s 1d, £158 15s 9d, and £131 5s 1d. This is a long way short of £1000 per day; but, as I say, hardly any country subscriptions have yet been credited. What is wanted is a prompt recognition of the fact that this is a national obligation which must be shouldered. No one wants to let the Belgians starve, but unless we cable this money every month to the International Commission, we are not doing our share. This is a time when no honest patriot can contemplate an idle bank balance with complacency, and this appeal should touch all pockets.

"I believe people only want to have the matter brought directly under their notice to give, and the secretaries would like to hear from young men or women working in the city who will help in the work of canvassing the business centres."

Messrs. Hunter and Beavis, joint hon. secretaries (Challis House, Martin-place, Sydney) acknowledge the receipt on March 19, 1915, of the following amounts:—

STATISTICIAN'S SUGGESTION.

The Acting Premier yesterday made available a report from the Government Statistician upon the subject of raising £30,000 a month for the Belgian National Relief Fund.

"If," says Mr. Trivett, "every wage-earner or property holder were to contribute monthly one penny for every £10 of his annual income more than the amount of £30,000 would be raised. Thus, every man receiving £100 a year would give 10d per month, £200 a year 1s 8d per month, £1000 a year 8s 4d per month, and so on. This is equivalent to 10s per cent. of income per annum, and the amount is so small that many people would give more than the minimum."

"Another simple proposal is," the Government Statistician adds, "that the amount required represents rather less than 4d per head of the total population per month. That is to say, if every householder contributed 4d per month for each person in his family (on the average the contribution per house would be 1s 8d per month) the amount would be obtained without difficulty."

BIG SCORES.

943 FOR EIGHT WICKETS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

World's Great Public School records were established to-day in a match between the Melbourne Grammar School and Geelong College. The game started at half-past 10, and stumps were drawn at 6 o'clock, with an hour for lunch.

Melbourne Grammar School scored 943 for the loss of eight wickets—at the extraordinary rate of 136 runs per hour. J. C. Sharp made 498 not out, and Herring 238. Sharp's score is a world's Great Public School record. Herring and Sharp put on 343 for the third wicket, which constitutes a Victorian Public School record.

J. C. Sharp's 498 not out is not only a Great Public School record, but the third highest individual score on record in any match, the two higher totals being 628 not out by A. E. J. Collins in 1899, and 566 by C. J. Eady, the Tasmanian International, in the 1901-2 season. The previous Great Public School's record was held by O. H. Dean, who made 412 for Sydney Church of England Grammar School against Newington College in the 1904-5 season. Collins's 628 not out was spread over five afternoons.

The Melbourne Grammar School's total of 943 for eight wickets is the second highest on record in any match, the highest being 1094 by Melbourne University v Essendon in 1897-8. The previous highest G.P.S. total was 916 by Sydney Grammar School v Sydney Church of England Grammar School in 1908-9.

PREPARING FOR INVASION.

LITHGOW, Friday.

Writing to relations in Lithgow, a resident of Colchester, England, gives interesting particulars as to what residents are required to do in the event of invasion. The writer says:—"We live in a state of uncertainty, not knowing what next day will bring. The last three days (the letter is dated January 28) have been very trying. The military quite expect some sort of a raid. Every road is guarded by sentries. Motor cars are not allowed to use glaring lights, and the windows of all houses must be fitted with dark green blinds. We have now our instructions what to do in the event of the Germans landing, as we are in the invasion zone. Some of the men have to take the women and children to Tolleshunt Knights. All are to take 48 hours' provisions, strong boots, and thick clothing. Further instructions will then be issued. The remainder of the men have to drive all live stock inland, and kill and render unfit for food what cannot be taken; burn all hay, corn, and straw stacks before starting, and then ring the church bells loudly, a signal, 'get ready.'"

STATE BREAD.

BATHURST, Friday.

Mr. Hall, Attorney-General, referred to-night to a statement made recently by a master baker.

"An admission by the master bakers that the Government can save 25 per cent. and over on the people's bread bill," said Mr. Hall, "surely constitutes an argument of tremendous weight in favour of the Government going on with the scheme. It amounts to £25,000 per week. If then it is admitted that the Government can save £25,000 per week on the total bread bill, is it not worth while its doing so? Saving, indeed, does not depend upon the installation of automatic machinery. The mere existence of monopoly conditions would enable this to be done, even without automatic machinery. The savings arising from the introduction of automatic machinery would be in addition to the estimated penny per loaf. It has to be remembered that the men who are baking bread now for private enterprise will be the same men who are to bake it for the Government. They will not have to cease to be good bakers because they change their employers. It has been stated that the automatic machinery at Brisbane has not been successful, and does not give the people the loaf they want. The fact is, as I learned first-hand, that the Brisbane Company is increasing its output every week."

Mr. Hall declined to discuss Mr. Cann's statement that the scheme was still in the clouds.

CHILD STRANGLED.

BATHURST, Friday.

The 17-months-old daughter of Mr. S. Vinton met her death in a remarkable manner. The child was playing in its cot, when it struck its chin against the ironwork. The blow rendered it unconscious, and, falling, the child caught its head in the railing in such a way that it was strangled.

MISSING ENDEAVOUR.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

At the request of the Prime Minister (Mr. Fisher) the Marine Board to-day decided to hold an inquiry into the loss of the Commonwealth trawler Endeavour.

EDUCATION OFFICES.

The Director of Education (Mr. Board) stated yesterday that he hopes to have the whole of his staff housed in the new Bridge-street building in August.

TEACHERS' GUILD.

A general meeting of the Teachers' Guild of New South Wales was held last evening at the Sydney Grammar School. The president, the Rev. P. J. M'Curtin, was in the chair. A discussion took place on the motions carried by the Modern Language Association at the Summer Conference, and a recommendation was made by the meeting.—"That the reports of the examiners be published at a much earlier date than heretofore." A motion was carried that the meeting was of opinion that the standard of marks in French in the intermediate leaving certificate was apparently too high.

THE LATE CAPTAIN CAMPBELL

The late Captain W. U. M. Campbell, who was announced in our cables yesterday as being killed in action, was the second son of the late Mr. William Campbell, a member of the Legislative Council of New South Wales. Many years ago Captain Campbell left New South Wales and obtained a commission in one of the English regiments. His mother went home some time ago.

In the final round of the women's singles championship, Miss Waxman played superbly, and defeated Miss Stewart, 5-7, 6-1, 6-4. Miss Sharp will challenge Miss Waxman for the title.

In the women's doubles championship Misses Stewart and Schlesinger defeated Mrs. M'Arthur and Miss Waxman, 6-4, 6-2; and Mrs. Rowe and Miss Sharp beat Misses Parr and Laurie, 6-4, 7-5.

In men's doubles handicap Reid and Lemme (owe 30) defeated J. and R. Thomson (owe 1/6): and Clem Hill and Davis (receive 3/6) defeated Reid and Lemme, 5-6, 6-3, 6-1.

In women's doubles handicap Mrs. M'Arthur and Miss Schlesinger (owe 30) beat Mrs. Rowe and Miss Laurie (owe 30), and later they defeated Misses Parr and Harris (owe 15), 6-5, 6-5.

In the veterans' doubles handicap Hone and Rowe (scratch) defeated Rice and Mursell (owe 15/3), 6-3, 6-0.

SINKING OF THE TOKOMARU.

THE CAPTAIN'S STORY.

The question whether the steamer Tokomaru, the "gift ship" from New Zealand, was sunk by a mine or was torpedoed is settled definitely by a statement by her master, Captain F. Greene, in an interview published in the London "Standard," that the vessel was torpedoed by a submarine.

As in the case of the Ikaria, sunk similarly not far off, the Germans made no attempt to rescue anyone on board, but left them to their fate with a callousness as brutal as it is despicable. The German submarine which sank three steamers near Liverpool Bay at least stopped its victims, and gave their officers and crews ten minutes to get into their boats; but the conduct of the German officers operating in the English Channel can only be compared for sheer indifference to the fate of those on board the attacked steamers, with that of the pirates of old, who sank all and sundry without mercy. The submarine's officers' behaviour is a worthy parallel to that of the officers of the Gneisenau, which, after the Monmouth and Good Hope were sunk off the coast of Chile, was deliberately steered through the hundreds of British sailors who were in the water, and made no attempt to rescue one of them. It is no fault of the German naval men that the torpedoing of the Tokomaru and Ikaria was not accompanied by heavy loss of life, and this point is brought vividly forward by Captain Greene's statement.

"We had a very successful and satisfactory run from Wellington," he said, "and experienced no trouble or danger from enemy cruisers, though, of course, we did not neglect the usual precautions. Early on Sunday morning we were off the French coast, about seven miles west-north-west of Cape Antifer, near Havre. The weather was bright and clear, and the sea smooth, and the Tokomaru was steaming very slowly, as we were expecting to pick up our pilot. In fact, at the moment when we were struck the ship was almost stationary.

"At 9 o'clock, shortly after we had finished breakfast, I was standing on the bridge with two of my officers, looking for a pilot, when suddenly there was a terrific explosion on the port side, slightly forward of the bridge. A tremendous column of water shot up into the air, and the ship immediately listed heavily to port. It was obvious in a moment that she was doomed. There was no time then to speculate as to the cause of her destruction, but in the few minutes which elapsed between the explosion and the launching of the boats both my officers and myself distinctly saw the periscope of a submarine showing above the surface a little distance away on the port side, so I am perfectly certain that the Tokomaru did not strike a mine, but was sunk by a torpedo fired from a submarine."

You received no warning from the enemy?

"Absolutely none. Not a whisper. Not a sign. Nor did the enemy stand by to render assistance or help in any way to save life. The submarine simply disappeared and left us. There was no panic among the crew," Captain Greene continued, "although not one of us knew how long the ship would remain afloat. We carried no passengers.

"I ordered all hands to the port boats, which were promptly and safely launched. Meanwhile our wireless operator had managed to send off the 'S.O.S.' message, though the wireless apparatus had been greatly damaged and deranged by the force of the explosion. Everybody was off the ship within fifteen minutes from the time she was struck. Neither the officers nor the crew were able to save any of their belongings—they lost everything save what they stood in.

"No lives were lost, I am thankful to say, but had the torpedo struck us a little further aft probably every soul in the engine-room and stokehold would have been killed or drowned. Before we could leave the ship she was down by the head and her forward decks were all awash.

"Fortunately there were several French trawlers in sight—I heard afterwards that they were sweeping for mines—and in about half an hour or so my entire crew, 57 men in all, were picked up by one of them and taken to Havre, where we received every kindness. The Tokomaru remained afloat for an hour and a half after she was struck. One of the trawlers stood by until she sank, and then placed a buoy to indicate the exact locality of the wreck.

"What helps to convince me," Captain Greene went on to say, "that we did not strike a mine, but were struck by a torpedo, is the fact that some hours after we reached Havre a British steamer—the Ikaria—was towed into the harbour in a sinking condition by French torpedo craft. She had been torpedoed fifteen miles west of Cape Antifer, and left to her fate just as the Tokomaru was.

"By the sinking of the Tokomaru a most valuable and unusually large cargo of frozen meat—beef, mutton, and lamb—amounting to nearly 100,000 carcases, has been sent to the bottom and lost. We also had a considerable consignment of wool on board. But perhaps the most regrettable feature of the whole affair is that all the clothing and other things which were collected in New Zealand for the Belgian refugees have also gone down in the ship. The Tokomaru was known as the 'Gift Ship,' and it will be with keen regret that New Zealanders will learn that the result of their sympathetic and philanthropic labours has been thrown away by an act of unparalleled barbarism on the part of the enemy."

Harry Bryan, the wireless operator of the Tokomaru, highly praised the French sailors' rescue work. He stated that a dozen torpedo boats answered within half an hour the "S.O.S." message from the steamer.

DARING EXPLOIT.

BRITISH SUBMARINE.

SINKING OF THE MESSUDIEH.

A vivid account of the great daring and skill displayed by Commander Holbrook (who has been awarded the V.C.) and the crew of the submarine B11, which sank the Turkish battleship Messudieh in the Dardanelles, is supplied by Victor Westall, serving on his Majesty's ship Hindukoosf with a submarine flotilla. He says:—

On the morning of December 13, at 3 a.m., the B11 left for the entrance of the Dardanelles. Having fully charged her battery—that is, with electricity, which gives the submarines propelling power whilst under the surface—the captain gives the order, "Down bridge rails, prepare to dive." The crew go below, the captain last; he closes the conning tower lid. He then sings out, "Diving stations." The men get to their posts. Two are at the torpedo-tubes, one at each main ballast-tank kingston, one at the hydroplane wheel, another at the submerged steering position, another at the motor switches; the engineer is there at the group of vents which allows the air to escape as the water floods the tanks. The next order comes from the captain, "Flood main ballast." Each kingston is opened, the water rushes in, and the boat begins to sink. The tanks are full, the gauge is showing 7ft, not quite deep enough, so the auxiliary ballast tanks are opened, the tanks slowly fill, and the gauge now shows 10ft. "Close everything" is next heard from the voice in the conning-tower—these boats are never under the surface unless under way, as there is a tank known as the buoyancy tank, which is never flooded, and always sufficient buoyancy for the boat to come to the surface when the motors are stopped.

The boat is now what we call trimmed. Then we get the order to dive, say, 16ft, so that the periscope is just on the surface. The hydroplanes are put to dive, and the motors are started to the ahead position. It does not take long to get down, for I have dived that boat B11 to 65ft in 1½ minute. She is now feeling the effects of the strong current which runs down from the Black Sea. The captain is satisfied with things so far, so gives the order, "Take her down to 60ft." At 11.45 a.m. the boat is brought to the surface to see where they are. To the captain's surprise there is a ship not far away—and a Turk, too. "Down again to 40ft; charge firing-tank; flood torpedo tube; stand by to fire." All this in one breath. "Up again to 15ft (she is within range); fire." The torpedo has gone, as you say, to blow the Turks and Germans to heaven. The shot was a good one, for an explosion is heard. Now to get back to safety. Guns from the shore are doing their best to hit the submarine, but she soon gets out of the danger of the guns, and is at 40ft again.

We will just have a look at the target to satisfy curiosity. She is sinking by the stern, so all is well. Down to 60ft. "What was that?" At 20ft the submarine has struck. For ten minutes she grates the bottom—shingle no doubt. There is no panic in the boat, for the captain, Lieutenant Holbrook, is very trustworthy. She is off the bottom and in the deep channel again, so at 50ft the boat gets as far as Helles Point. Next comes the order, "Surface." The surface is reached. "Blow all main ballast." The water is forced from the tanks by a pressure of air, the tanks are empty, the gas-engine is started, and out she comes victorious, to report a safe return, and a ship hit, after being nine and a half hours submerged. No wonder all England gives praise for such a grand feat, and no one will realise more what dangers have been dared than we who know the working of the boats.

AFTERNOON SHIFT.

STILL NOT SETTLED.

POSSIBLE TROUBLE AHEAD.

Although, after a very protracted struggle, an agreement was arrived at a week ago for the settlement of the afternoon shift strike at the northern collieries, matters are not yet running as smoothly as could be wished. It appears that at three collieries—Pelaw Main, Richmond Main, and Whitburn—the miners complain that some men who worked during the strike are still employed, and they object to working alongside of them. The officials of the Colliery Employees' Federation are very anxious to have the agreement adhered to, and one of the officers is now visiting the scene of the discontent, with this object in view.

The Colliery Proprietors' Defence Association held a meeting at Messrs. Pitt, Son, and Badgery's office on Thursday. It is understood the attitude assumed by the meeting is that, unless the men return to work under the terms of the recent conference in Newcastle, the proprietors threaten to throw all the mines on the field idle.

THE STRIKE FEVER.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

Despite the fact that an agreement has been come to between the colliery proprietors and the miners for the settlement of the afternoon shift dispute only four of the collieries resumed work this week, and three of that number were thrown idle through further strikes.

In order to get a resumption of work, the proprietors conceded both extra payment for working the afternoon shift and a time limit for its abolition. When the miners came before the wages board they asked the board to decide both of those questions. After the case had been heard the chairman of the board announced that he could not make an order for the abolition of the shift, nor could he order extra payment to be given while the second shift was being worked. Two or three days after that announcement the afternoon shift miners were on strike.

The colliery proprietors, in giving way the ground that they did, no doubt felt practically certain that work would not be interrupted by further strikes. In fact, the general opinion in the district was that there would be no strikes for many months to come. Whitburn was the first to cause trouble. The whole of the lodges, with the exception of two, approved of the terms of the proprietors for a resumption of work, and Whitburn should have resumed last Monday. The men held out, as they had previously done, and refused to sign the agreement till the time had been still further reduced. The company was communicated with, and agreed to another reduction of the time. The company's action throughout the conferences forms a strong illustration of their desire to have the pit working. At the first conference they proposed five years as a time limit for the abolition of the shift. They reduced the time on three occasions until it stood at two years and three months. Naturally, it was thought that Whitburn would have resumed work without losing further time, but other excuses were found by the miners, and the colliery has not yet started.

If there is one colliery more than another that has earned an unenviable name for strikes it is Pelaw Main. Not only the proprietors and the miners refer to that lodge as a hot-bed of strikes, but also many unionists. When Pelaw Main resumed work last Tuesday several persons well acquainted with the coal trade jokingly remarked, "I suppose Pelaw Main miners will be on strike before the end of the week." The miners had worked only one day, when for a trivial reason they went out on strike, and are still out.

East Greta and Stanford Merthyr were also on strike during the week, but the difficulty was overcome, and only a day's work was lost.

CORRIMAL IDLE.

DISPUTE ABOUT THE CAVIL.

WOLLONGONG, Friday.

Corrimal colliery is idle on account of the dispute about the cavil. The men contend that they will not work until their request is granted, and their action was unanimously endorsed at an aggregate meeting of miners at Wollongong on Monday. The management, on the other hand, assert that they are acting within the bounds of the award, and matters are at present at a standstill. The executive officers—Messrs. S. Bird and James Russell—met the manager of Corrimal colliery, and Mr. T. R. Morgan, in reference to the trouble at Corrimal, but no solution of the difficulty was arrived at.

BARRIER WATER.

WHAT CONSUMERS WILL PAY.

ABNORMAL INCREASES.

BROKEN HILL, Friday.

A meeting of Argent-street business men last night at the Town Hall strongly protested against the provisions of the Government Water Supply Enabling Bill before the Legislative Council. All the speakers objected to the conditions of rating, especially of Argent-street premises.

The chairman (Mr. S. G. Lawrence) said the bill is very distinct in saying that the charge will be made on the unimproved capital value of the land, approximately to 2s in the £ on an annual rental basis. "Argent-street from Kaolin-street to Iodide-street," he said, "produces about one-fifth of the whole of the rates of the Municipality of Broken Hill, and if we have to stand one-fifth at the rate the Government is going to charge for water you can imagine how it will affect us. It is going to be something like £5000, which the Government is going to take from Argent-street. One hotel not very far from here last year used 48,000 gallons of water, which cost £12. Under the new rate the hotel will have to pay £143, which is equal to 63s per thousand gallons. Mr. Griffith recently said that the water would come to about 1s or 2s per thousand gallons. Mr. Griffith is a long way out in his calculations. There is a store in Argent-street which last year paid £4 10s for water. Now it will be rated at £37 10s, which is equal to 42s per thousand gallons. There is a cool drink shop, in which 21,000 gallons were used, costing £6 0s 6d. Under the new rate the shop will have to pay £30, and it is situated away from the centre of the town. A grocer in Argent-street last year paid £2 2s 6d for water. His new rate will be £60 15s per annum, equal to 71s 5d per thousand gallons."

The meeting decided to appoint three delegates to meet three from the Chamber of Commerce to frame a scheme and report to another meeting.

FALL FROM HORSE.

BINGARA, Friday.

John Stanton, a farmer six miles from Bingara, left his house this morning and went into an adjoining paddock on horseback. Later the pony was seen coming towards the house, and a son found his father with his head lying on a stump quite dead. Deceased had been a resident here for over 40 years. He was nearly 70 years of age, and was one of the successful gold discoverers of Upper Bingara. Of late years he had been a farmer and grazier.

COAL TRADE.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

This week the coal exports reached 93,113 tons, and were 11,000 tons better than last week, but 16,000 tons short of the exports for the corresponding period of last year. The Commonwealth exports totalled 56,725 tons this week, and the foreign 36,388 tons, compared with 58,235 interstate, and 51,232 tons for the third week in March last year.

MILK SUPPLY.

DANGER OF LAX CONTROL.

A CIVIC DUTY.

"In 1880," writes a correspondent, "the death rate in the metropolitan area was 20.6 per thousand. In 1912 it was 11.37, and in 1913, it had fallen to 11.18. That means that the lives of 6000 people (who would have died under the health conditions of 1880) were saved. The statistician attributes this result to the operation of the Dairies Supervision Act and other Acts. It is stated that no milk samples have been taken at Lidcombe for two years. If this is true it shows a shocking neglect. The milk inspection methods of some councils, it is to be feared, are not what they should be."

The question which our correspondent opens up is one of very great importance. It is high time that steps were taken by the Government, with a view to the proper control of the milk supply. No community can afford to dispense with the inspection of milk. Pure milk means health; impure milk spells disease and death, especially to the young. The diphtheria outbreak in a North Sydney district some time ago, it will be remembered, was traced to the milk supply. And so it has been from time to time with other epidemics.

The British Royal Commission appointed to inquire into the relations of human and animal tuberculosis, stated in its report in 1907:—"There can be no doubt that in a certain number of cases the tuberculosis occurring in the human subject, specially in children, is the direct result of the introduction into the human body of the bacillus of bovine tuberculosis; and there also can be no doubt that in the majority, at least, of the cases, the bacillus is introduced through cows' milk. . . . A very considerable amount of disease and loss of life, especially among the young, must be attributed to the consumption of cows' milk containing tubercle bacilli."

In Columbia in 1906 a record was kept of the number of cases of typhoid which broke out during that year, and 60 per cent. of them were found to be milk-borne. Again, in one outbreak of scarlet fever 485 cases—84 per cent. of the total number of cases—were reported among the customers of one dairy company. The infection was traced to a man who was employed by the company to "taste" the milk, and who used the same spoon in sampling each lot.

FALL IN THE DEATH RATE.

Of recent years, the death rate in Sydney has shown a gratifying decrease, and there can be no doubt that this is the result of such measures as the Dairies Supervision Act, which was passed in 1886, the Diseased Animals and Meat Act passed in 1892, the Public Health Act of 1896, and the Pure Foods Act of 1908. We find that tuberculosis cases have decreased from 10.69 per 10,000 of the population in the period 1884-88 to 6.2 in 1913. In typhoid, the death rate in the metropolitan area was only .87 per 10,000 in 1913, and in the country it was 1.67. "The decrease between 1888 and 1893," remarks the Government Statistician, "was very marked, and is to be traced to the influence of the Dairies' Supervision Act, which began to operate in 1889." To the same cause the Statistician also attributes the big drop in the number of enteritis cases.

It is of interest to compare the death rate of the metropolis with that of the country. In the period 1880-1884, the death rate per thousand in the metropolis was 20.6, and in the country it was 13.21. In 1913 the figures were 11.18 and 10.73, respectively. Mr. Trivett, the Government Statistician, says:—"The fall began in the metropolis in 1889, the year when the improved sewerage system was installed, and about the same time that the Dairies Supervision Act came into operation. The figures point an important lesson, they show that the city, by reason of the attention paid to matters of hygiene, is now able to show a rate almost as satisfactory as that of the country, with all its natural advantages."

Particularly gratifying is the decrease in infantile mortality. Since 1880-84 the rate has fallen from 174 per thousand to 78 per thousand.

SOMETHING WANTING.

Thus we see the value of legislation. Acts of Parliament which aim at the purity of the food supply save thousands of lives. But there is still something wanting. Dr. W. G. Armstrong, medical officer of health for the metropolitan area, stated it when, in giving evidence before the Royal Commission on a Greater Sydney in 1913, he said:—"Whether Greater Sydney be established or not, the State central authority should have more power of control over local authority in the direction of public health than it at present possesses. . . . Most of the public health work of local authorities is carried on under the Local Government Act, and under that Act the Board of Health has very little power. It can only reprimand local authorities, and by a very expensive and difficult process can carry out work which the local authority fails to carry out, after repeated warnings."

The Act says that the board "may require" any council to submit samples or portions of articles of food, drugs, etc., for analysis each year, and "the articles to be so submitted for analysis may from time to time be specified by the board on the recommendation of the advisory committee." In Victoria this duty is imposed on every municipal council, irrespective of any requisition by the board.

If we are to receive the full benefit of the legislation that has been passed the councils must fulfil the duties that are expected of them, even though the provisions of the Act may not always be mandatory. Otherwise there must be amended legislation. Credit should be given where it is due. Some of the councils regard this matter of safeguarding the public health as the most important work they are entrusted with. The Redfern Council, for instance, has by a constant system of inspection, practically stamped out the adulteration of milk. So also with the Glebe. The council in that municipality prides itself on being even more rigorous in its inspection of the milk supply than the city of Sydney itself, or any other council in the State. But there are some municipalities where the inspection is so lax that the establishment of dairies in them should be a very profitable business.

In the hands of the local authorities is placed the care of their districts from a public health point of view. But so far as the inspection of foods is concerned, that is carried out by officers of the Board of Health, with the exception of milk which the local authorities are better able to deal with.

THE CASE OF REDFERN.

The Mayor of Redfern, Alderman T. Holden, stated that the sanitary inspector of that municipality acted for both the council and the Board of Health, and, therefore, had authority to take samples of anything sold in the way of food. He took three samples—one for the vendor, one for the Board of Health and one for himself. "He has been with us for five or six years," said Mayor," and has been very painstaking and energetic. He makes early-morning raids on the milk carts in various parts of the municipality, and takes samples of the milk. His fortnightly average is about 25 samples. In the early stages of his work, out of the 25 samples there would be three or four on which prosecutions would be based, and he has never failed to get a conviction. But within the last 12 months I do not think he has averaged one prosecution a fortnight."

RAILWAY WORKERS.

RETRENCHMENT IN THE WEST.

PERTH, Friday.

The executives of the Railway Employees' Unions have issued a circular on the 44 hours' week dispute with the Government. The circular complains that the executives understood that the reduction would be general, and not confined to wages men only. They have been unable to get definite answers from the Premier or the Parliamentary Labour party, therefore they have issued ballot papers, asking members to decide—(1) Whether they will continue on the 44 hours' week or accept the Premier's offer to return to 48 hours a week, and give the Government the right to retrench where practicable; (2) in the event of the ballot favouring the return to the 48 hours per week, power be given unions to amend the rules, so as to provide for levies in support of members retrenched owing to the 48 hours' week. The Premier, who left for Kalgoorlie to-night, says he is not worrying about the matter.

LIGHTER FOUNDERS.

MAN DROWNED.

WRECK NEAR THE HEADS.

The steam lighter Hornet, 65 tons gross, foundered at sea near the coast, 4 miles south of Sydney Heads, late yesterday afternoon. Of the crew of three, one was drowned, and the other two were rescued in an exhausted condition by the crew of the pilot steamer Captain Cook.

The Hornet was in charge of her owner, Mr. Thomas Rose, and had left Manly early in the afternoon with 40 tons of coke for Botany. The crew consisted of the owner and two stokers, John Boake and — Tait. The latter, who is described as a single man, about 45 years of age, was drowned. He became exhausted just before the rescuing pilot steamer arrived, and sank. Rose and Boake were struggling in a moderately heavy sea when they were picked up by the boats of the Captain Cook.

Upon arrival at Circular Quay Mr. Rose said the only explanation he could give for the disaster was that the bolts in the stern band of the steamer broke. This caused the stem to open out, and the sudden rush of water prevented the vessel being saved. About 500 bags of coke were jettisoned, but a few minutes later all hope of saving the vessel was abandoned, and the three men jumped into the water. A white shirt had been waved from the sinking vessel, and this attracted the attention of the signal-master at South Head, Mr. Alfred Gibson. He immediately signalled to the Captain Cook, which put out to sea. Tait secured a life-belt, but it is believed that he was caught in the vortex of the sinking vessel. It was stated that the dingy carried by the Hornet was washed overboard and swamped soon after the water came rushing in.

This is the second time that Rose has been rescued from the sea. He was one of the crew of the Kingsley, which went down off Sydney about 10 years ago.

The Hornet was an iron steamer of 55 tons gross, and was built in Sydney in 1883. She was 72 feet long, 15 feet broad, and 6 feet deep.

ARMY MEAT.

HEAVY CONSIGNMENTS.

Within the next week or so the State Government is shipping to England for Imperial Army purposes about 120,000 carcases of mutton and 20,000 quarters of beef.

Mr. Flowers says that this will greatly relieve the cold storage chambers, and make room for further supplies. The Imperial authorities are finding the ships, and the steamers taking the consignments mentioned are also taking butter and rabbits for the London market. All the Abattoirs and Meat Industry Board has to do is to effect purchases at rates suitable to the Imperial authorities, the sellers quoting f.o.b. prices. At present there are 300,000 carcases of mutton in the refrigerating chambers, which are awaiting shipment for army purposes.

NEW ZEALAND.

FEDERAL INVITATION.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

At the meeting of the Federal Cabinet on Thursday the Prime Minister (Mr. Fisher) submitted to his colleagues his views upon the advisability of a conference being held between the representatives of the New Zealand Government and representatives of the Commonwealth and State Governments. The Cabinet was enthusiastic in favour of an invitation being extended to the Dominion Government for some of its members to visit Australia. An invitation to this effect will be despatched to New Zealand as soon as replies have been received to the communications which he had addressed to the State Premiers.

CO-OPERATION AND CO-OPERATORS.

WEAKNESS OF CO-OPERATION.

Having already discussed the sham of regarding life offices as benevolent institutions, we should now like to have a few words upon the sham of co-operation. By a curious mental process co-operators are apt to regard themselves as a class apart. They aggogate to themselves the title of public benefactors, whereas at best they are merely looking after their own selfish interests. Any one who is a prudent and economical man, who has a proper care of his own affairs, brings up a family imbued with lofty ideals, is in some way a benefactor of the community in which he resides. But that is no reason why he should claim preferential treatment. Several of our correspondents have been shocked because co-operative societies are not exempt from taxation under either the Income Tax or Stamp Duty Acts, as though the mere fact of their being co-operators should entitle them to better treatment than the rest of the community. The whole thing is a sham.

When the co-operative principle is analysed, it will be found that it is essentially a selfish movement. In so far as it encourages self-help it is beneficial, but its main objective is no more than looking after the selfish interests of the co-operators who are by no means identical with the community at large. This is clearly shown when the two forms of co-operative enterprise are considered. Take the case of the distributing co-operative store. Its sole object is to sell goods to its co-operating shareholders at as low a price as possible. "Low prices" are its motto, these sometimes taking the form of comparatively high prices with a cash discount. If it sells butter, for instance, its endeavour is to buy that commodity at the very lowest price, so that it may be enabled to give its co-operating customers the benefit. But this is only one form of co-operation. There is another form, which goes in for co-operative manufacture. The average co-operative butter factory is an example of this kind. Now, the co-operative butter factory comprises a number of co-operating shareholders, who join together for the purpose of making butter on a larger and therefore more economical scale than would be possible under individual effort. The private churn is virtually a thing of the past. And in so far as the co-operative factory has reduced the cost per lb by large-scale production and by more scientific means, as well as by the utilisation of by-products and the elimination of waste, there is nothing but good to be said of the movement. But who benefits—the consuming public or the co-operating shareholders, or the employees who do the actual work in the factory? Certainly not the public, for the co-operating shareholder of the butter factory wants the whole of the savings that he has effected if he can possibly get them. In order that competition—the bane of the co-operator—may be stifled, he sends his product to a co-operating distributing agency, whose sole object is to get the best possible price for the co-operative butter factory. Now, all this is very good business for the co-operators, providing the factory on the one hand and the distributing agency on the other are reasonably well managed; but it is not philanthropy. The object is to extract from the consuming public the last fraction.

Then we come to this strange state of affairs that we have a co-operative store whose object is to get butter, among other things, at as low a price as possible for its co-operative shareholders; and, on the other hand, a co-operative agency whose object is to get the best possible price, even from a co-operative store, for the butter which it has for sale on behalf of its co-operative factories. Low prices are the desideratum of the one, high prices of the other. There is thus no community of interest between these two sets of co-operators.

But co-operators are very anxious that there should be more co-operators, and it is interesting to ask why? The average business man is not usually eager to convert others to his methods, more particularly if his methods be successful. The co-operator, on the other hand, scours the country endeavouring to make other co-operators. The reason is plain. The co-operator is not exactly a State socialist. He does not go the whole way with the socialist. The socialist would organise the whole community; the co-operator only portion of it. The butter factory co-operators, for instance, would like all butter factories to become co-operative. They have no interest in developing the co-operative store. That, indeed, would not suit them at all. If a whole industry could be organised upon co-operative lines, then prices could be controlled at the expense of the consumer. To-day the co-operative factories fix the price of butter in the Sydney market, and it may not unreasonably be assumed that prices are not fixed in the interest of the consumer. It may be heretical to say so, but such things as co-operative monopolies are possible, and the co-operative form of monopoly may be just as detrimental to the public interest as any other form.

There is another aspect of co-operative enterprise that requires looking into. The co-operator is usually a thrifty man. He keeps a watchful eye upon all outlays. No blame attaches to him for this. No one will help him to pay his bills or provide for his old age if he does not do it himself. But the thrifty man is apt to become a mean and grasping man. The line between the two is hard to draw. The employees in co-operative enterprises are apt to suffer from this natural tendency towards economy. Some few years ago a local butter factory called for tenders for a manager, the lowest tenderer to get the position. Fancy the Railway Commissionership or the presidency of the Harbour Trust going to the lowest tenderer.

SYDNEY AND SUBURBAN HYDRAULIC POWER.

Mr. J. B. Nicholson, who has just resigned fro mthe board of the above company, has addressed the shareholders in the following terms:—

Certain relations existed between the Sydney and Suburban Hydraulic Power Company, Ltd., and Standard Waygood Hercules, Ltd., as the result of the purchase by the latter company of what had been originally part of the Power Company's business—viz., the maintenance and repair of hydraulic lifts. These relations have been broken by desire of the shareholders.

Naturally, reprisals are provoked, for no company will tamely permit an attempt to take from it a business which it bought and paid for.

The Power Company cannot increase the number of lifts on its mains, for hydraulic power cannot compete with electric, save under exceptional conditions (Messrs. Angus and Grimley differ from me on this point). The late board of directors was successful in retaining the company's consumers, and in this direction I claim to have been of very considerable help.

The share market affords some index of how the company's prospects are now regarded. I have no access to the company's records, but I believe that as I joined the board I have been the principal buyer of shares, and none have cost me less than par. Mr. Bruce Smith has also lately increased his holding.

I consider that you should be informed that confidential (provisional) proposals to amalgamate on a basis of the issue of one fully paid Standard Waygood Hercules, Ltd., share for every two fully paid, or four contributing, Hydraulic Power Company's shares, were rejected by your present chairman (who, with Mr. Grimley, sits on the board and votes, although his own counsel declares him illegally elected) as not worthy of consideration.

An alternative offer to take over and manage the company, under the control of the board, was also rejected. Neither of these offers was brought before the board. The acceptance of either would have made your shares much more valuable.

DRESS STUFFS.

FUTURE PROSPECTS.

GERMAN POLICY OF DESTRUCTION.

All dress stuffs are higher than they were in August last. The increase amounts to between 20 and 30 per cent. First among the causes is the decrease in supply. The whole world outside of our enemies and the United States is looking to Bradford for supplies. And Bradford has also to supply woollens for men's clothing. When the manufacturers find themselves overpressed with orders, when they have to refuse orders because of inability to carry them out, rates naturally go up. Again, freights have gone up 25 per cent. Where 6 or 7 per cent. of the cost of a piece of dress stuff was consumed in freight, now 7½ to 9 per cent. is the charge on to cost, on account of freight. War risk adds a little, and, as far as Australia is concerned, Customs duties add 5¼ per cent. As to stocks, there need be no anxiety for the immediate future. Supplies are sufficient, because for this winter they were contracted for before war broke out. The manufacturers are always about 12 months ahead of the using public. It is next winter that the pinch will be felt. Then the scarcity may be pronounced. Curiously enough, those in the business believe that were the war to end within a couple of months the shortness of stocks would be more felt and prices would be higher than should the war continue for another 12 months. The reason is that were the war to end shortly, there would be such a revival of business that the world would spend more money in dress, so much so that there would be a scramble for the goods. Under the stress of the demand the prices would soar. Competition would force them up. On the other hand, should the war continue, buying would be restricted to a large extent.

No matter when the war ends there will be a pronounced scarcity of the finer dress-stuffs. Belgium is in ruins; so are large districts of Northern France. Here the chief fine-wool dress-goods of the world were made—cashmeres and crepes, for instance. Germans in Australia believe that they will never be driven out of Belgium; that they are there to stay there. They may be driven out of France, they say; but before they are they will destroy every factory, every means of manufacturing commodities of any kind whatsoever. Similarly, if by treaty—and that, they profess, is the only way by which they will evacuate the country—they agree to evacuate Belgium, they will see to it that every Belgian factory is razed to the gorund and the machinery destroyed. Germans in Australia are quite frank about the matter. Such measures they look upon as self-protection. Great nations of the world have declared, they say, that they will not do business with Germany when peace is declared. Well, Germany will force them to do business. For years Belgium will not be able to export any woollen manufactures, nor Northern France. It will take at least two years to rebuild the factories, even if capital is available, and get them properly running. The world will be forced to fall back on Germany for goods in which France and Belgium were pre-eminent. So Germany, by destroying her neighbours' means of livelihood, hopes to rehabilitate her own broken fortunes. Germans here do not believe that the Allies, once peace is declared, will practise self-denial, and deprive themselves of luxurious dress in any measure. For ourselves we believe that the Germans are mistaken, and that the English and Russians will wait patiently for French and Belgian goods. These facts are known better in Melbourne than in Sydney, and Melbourne is buying more freely than Sydney, and at higher rates, those lines which it is known must be short next year.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

The oil market was extremely firm yesterday. Linseed was distributing at 4/7 and 4/9, and parcels could not be purchased under 4/6 and 4/8 for first brands. Blundell's was cabled again dearer at 2/10 f.o.b., and Ferguson's was up 1½d at 2/9 f.o.b. The convention price of whitelead in England was advanced by £1/10/ to £31/10/ per ton f.o.b., and Champion's was quoted at £32/10/ f.o.b. The cause of the advance, no doubt, was the heavy increase in the constituents, lead and linseed oil. Locally Champion's had sales at £44 in cwt. packages. Redlead was cabled £2 a ton higher. Turpentine had a strong inquiry, and parcel rates advanced to 3/10. The market for copra was weaker, principally on account of freight difficulties, and the quotation was given as £21 f.o.b. export steamer for sun-dried in bags. The fall was £1 on the week.

Metals were firm in all departments. Imported nettings in some quarters could be obtained at a slight advance on the closing rates of last week. In others the full advance noted by the Australian makers was wanted. Sales of tinplates were made at 22/ per box for 20 x 14 in parcel lots, and in small lots at 23/. London quoted a rise of 3d per box at 18/9 c.i.f. and e. Business was done in 20 x 28 at 43/6 per box. For Continental cement 18/ was asked, and for first brands of English 20/ per cask.

All chemical lines were strongly held, and the tendency continued upward. Canadian carbide had sales between houses at from £20 to £22 per ton. Distributing 25/ per cwt. was asked. Melbourne was on the market for caustic soda, and bought 70/72 per cent £14/10/. Rosin of G grade had no relief at £14/10/ per ton. The jute market was quiet. A little was done in branbags at 5/ net ex wharf. A cable from Calcutta, dated March 18, quoted branbags at 5/6 c.i.f. for April-May-June shipment, and early December shipment at 5/3. The difference between the Calcutta price and the local price is thus greatly in favour of the latter. Woolpacks had a little business on spot at 3/6 net, and for season's delivery 3/ net each was asked. Cornsacks were rather better at 6/ net per doz., with an inclination to rise. All now on offer are free sacks, that is, they were imported before the duty was imposed, but they are being cleared up, and when importers and the Calcutta syndicate get on to the cornsacks in bond they will naturally want more to cover the 6d duty which will be payable.

Herrings again advanced. Maconochies were quoted yesterday: Fresh 6/7½, in sauce 8/1½, halves 5/ to 5/3.

WHEAT LOADINGS AND STACKINGS.

During the week ended March 13 the quantity of wheat despatched from country stations was 48,013 bags, compared with 49,133 bags for the previous week, and 288,017 bags for the same period of last year.

From December 1 to March 13 there were despatched from country stations 1,513,943 bags, compared with 4,120,239 bags for the same period of 1913-4, and 3,364,855 in the same period of 1912-13.

The stacks at country stations and Darling Island on March 13 were 295,101 bags, compared with 387,215 bags on the previous Saturday, and 4,319,392 bags on March 14 last year. The number of bags despatched from the railway districts during the week ended March 13, and the stacks in railway districts on March 13, were:—

THE YIELD.

Millers are beginning to feel anxious over the yield of wheat. They are inclined to doubt whether the first estimate, low though it was, was low enough. The second estimate of the Government Statistician is now due, and they want to know if it is being delayed. They know that the returns were all in some weeks ago. The opinion is gaining ground that there will not be enough wheat for consumption and seed. So far the railway figures show that not quite six million bushels are accounted for out of the fifteen million estimated. No doubt farmers are keeping wheat back on the farms awaiting the decision of the High Court, but even if we allow three million bushels for seed there is still six million bushels to be accounted for. Some millers are getting low in stocks, and unless fresh supplies are received will not be able to carry on beyond Easter. Flour sold yesterday at the maximum price, £11/17/6, bran at £7/10/, and pollard £10.

At Darling Harbour yesterday 158 tons of wheat and 158 tons of flour were manifested to arrive.

PRODUCE.

DAIRY.

CASE EGGS FIRMER.

Case eggs were advanced one penny per dozen in Sussex-street yesterday, making quotations for South Coast and railways 1/5 to 1/6, and for Northern Rivers 1/5. In view of the strong state of the market, several of the largest buyers have been drawing on cold store supplies, and considerable business has been done at 1/4. In addition, fairly large consignments of pickled eggs have been arriving from Adelaide, the price for them here being 1/1 to 1/2. These two factors have combined in helping to keep the market down, and if cold store supplies were shut off next week, another considerable rise would be seen. The price of new-laids was unchanged, but there was a considerably firmer feeling. Many houses had cleared out stocks completely, whilst others admitted a surplus.

The poultry market revealed easier tendencies. Large quantities of birds of inferior quality are coming on the market, and at the present rate a glut would not be unexpected.

Following on the raising of the price of some special brands of cheese, Bodalla brands were advanced to /8.

Butter and other lines were unchanged.

FORAGE AND GRAIN.

ANOTHER FALL IN MAIZE.

ONIONS EASIER.

The price of maize was lowered by /3 a bushel yesterday morning. Last Friday there was a strong demand at 5/6. Arrivals during the week-end totalled nearly 12,000 bags, and this caused the market to fall to 5/3. Yesterday another 5000 odd bags were placed on the market, this amount being somewhat in excess of requirements. As a result, the price has dropped to 5/. Later in the day the market regained somewhat in firmness, and it was stated that several firms were asking 5/2 to 5/3.

There has been a falling-off in the demand for onions during the past day or so, and the market, consequently, is slightly easier. Victorian Brown Spanish were quoted at £6/10/ to £7. A small parcel of some 400 bags, from New Zealand, was disposed of at £7.

Other lines were quiet and unchanged.

RAILWAY MARKET.

MEDIUM CHAFF EASIER.

A fairly large yarding of produce was offered at auction at the railway forage and grain sales yesterday morning to a large attendance of buyers. The market opened weak, but during the later stages of the sale bidding became more spirited, and bigger business was transacted, especially in choice grades of produce, which remained steady at late figures. Medium and inferior chaff, however, were not particularly wanted by the buyers, and the majority of the auctioneers were forced to clear consignments at prices which showed a decline of 5/ per ton on previous rates. Choice lucerne hay made as much as 8/6 per cwt.

Wheaten chaff was well represented and sold at auction from 7/9 to 9/, the latter being obtained for consignments from Wongarbon and Wellington. Oaten was also plentiful, and brought from 5/1 to 8/8; whilst lucerne commanded from 5/ to 8/3. Lucerne hay changed hands at figures ranging from 7/ to 8/6 per cwt.

THE FEDERAL CAPITAL BLUFF.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—That we are a patient and unassertive community is amply demonstrated by the supine way in which we have allowed ourselves to be bluffed, bamboozled, and systematically cheated out of the fulfilment of the conditions regarding the Federal capital under which New South Wales was induced to enter the federation after having at first declined to do so. It is so many years ago since the first Federal Enabling Bill was submitted to a referendum of the people that the generation at present arriving at maturity probably knows little or nothing of the special terms under which we ultimately as a State agreed to enter the federation, which could not haye been brought about had New South Wales not joined in.

It will be recalled by those who took an active interest in the federation campaign that opposition centred mainly around the questions of increased taxation and uncertainty as to which State would have the federal capital. In regard to the first, advocates of the Federation Enabling Bill assured the people that they had nothing to fear on the score of additional taxation, as the cost of federation would not exceed an extra half a crown per annum; or the cost of "registering a dog."

How valueless was that assurance and how wide of the mark has been realised by those who find themselves to-day the most heavily-taxed people in the world, instead of the most lightly taxed, as they were in New South Wales just before federation.

With regard to the other outstanding ground of opposition, the fear that the prestige of New South Wales might be lowered by establishing the Federal capital in another State, it was agreed at a conference of State Premiers, after much controversy, finally, that the Federal capital should be in New South Wales, and principally as a concession to Melbourne jealousy, not within 100 miles of Sydney; and that the Parliament should meet in Melbourne temporarily until it met at the seat of Government. The electors of New South Wales were assured that this temporary location in Melbourne would certainly not exceed five years—a period which would afford ample time to fix upon a site and erect the Parliamentary and Administrative buildings. Unfortunately, a time limit was not embodied in the Constitution. And every unfair advantage possible has been taken of this omission.

Well, Sir, we are now in the fifteenth year of federation, and the Federal Parliament and Administrative offices are still in Melbourne, and, from present indications, are likely to remain there until doomsday, unless the people of New South Wales will themselves take an active interest in the matter of their rights, and invoke the assistance of the press as well as of their Parliamentary representatives in demanding a cessation of the shuffling and bluffing that has been practised in connection with this question for all these years.

At a time like this, when the question of unemployment is bulking largely in the problems immediately confronting us, thousands of men could, and should, be legitimately absorbed in the erection of the buildings necessary for the transfer of the seat of Government from Melbourne to Canberra.

I am, etc.,
W. ELLIOT JOHNSON.

TENANTS AND THEIR RENTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—It sometimes happens that a tenant who is in arrears with rent vacates the premises without notice, taking the furniture with him. It is not generally known by the tenant that by thus doing he may lay himself open to a quasi-criminal action. If he is successfully prosecuted under "11 Geo. II, C. 19" Statute, he is liable for a heavy fine, amounting twice the value of the furniture, or imprisonment. The proper and safe course would be for the tenant to take the landlord or agent into his confidence.

I am, etc.,

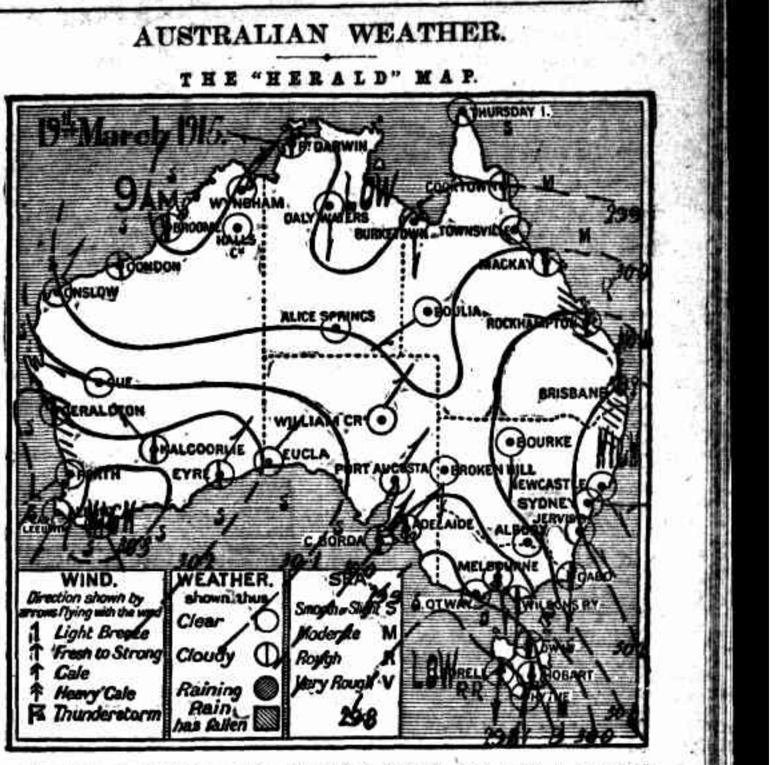
AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.



The different pressures over the continent of Australia have made a remarkably rapid movement since yesterday. The high pressure was in a most promising position yesterday, and in conjunction with the Antarctic disturbance, should have resulted in some rain over the southern districts of the State. But there is still a good feature, and that is that the high pressure over New Zealand has gained in weight, which means that the Antarctic disturbance will be retarded, and, in consequence, some rain will result in the southern parts of the State.

Ocean Forecast.—Strong to gales from the south-west around Tasmania, extending to the coast of New South Wales. Moderating south-east winds on the Queensland coast.

THE NEW FRENCH SPIRIT.

AND THE WAR.

FROM A LECTURE DELIVERED AT THE NEW SOUTH WALES MODERN LANGUAGES ASSOCIATION CONFERENCE, BY MR. F. J. GALLAGHER, M.A.

One of the outstanding features of the present war is the unanimity, resolution, and unalloyed patriotism of the French nation, in this, the greatest struggle in her history. Few students could credit that the France of 1870, crushed under the heel of a hated invader, would rise with such hope and determination within a century, to live once again the glories and victories of the past. Yet, any careful study of French contemporary literature, shows that the France of to-day is no longer the France of 1870; the pessimistic, sceptical France of Taine and Renan, of Pierre Loti, Maurice Maeterlinck, and Anatole France has been "redeemed from defeat" by the energies of a new school of writers, led by Bergson, Bourget, Adam, Bordeaux, Brunetière, Vogue, Barres, and a host of others of scarcely minor merit and importance. These writers are the heralds and couriers of the Renascence of French Idealism, which is conveniently dated by Brunetière at 1890. It is this new Idealism, inspiring the courage and patriotism of every French soldier, every French mother, and every French son or daughter, which is forging the will and the power to believe with Rolland that "Quand on a ete grand comme nous, il vaut mieux mourir que de cesser d'etre."

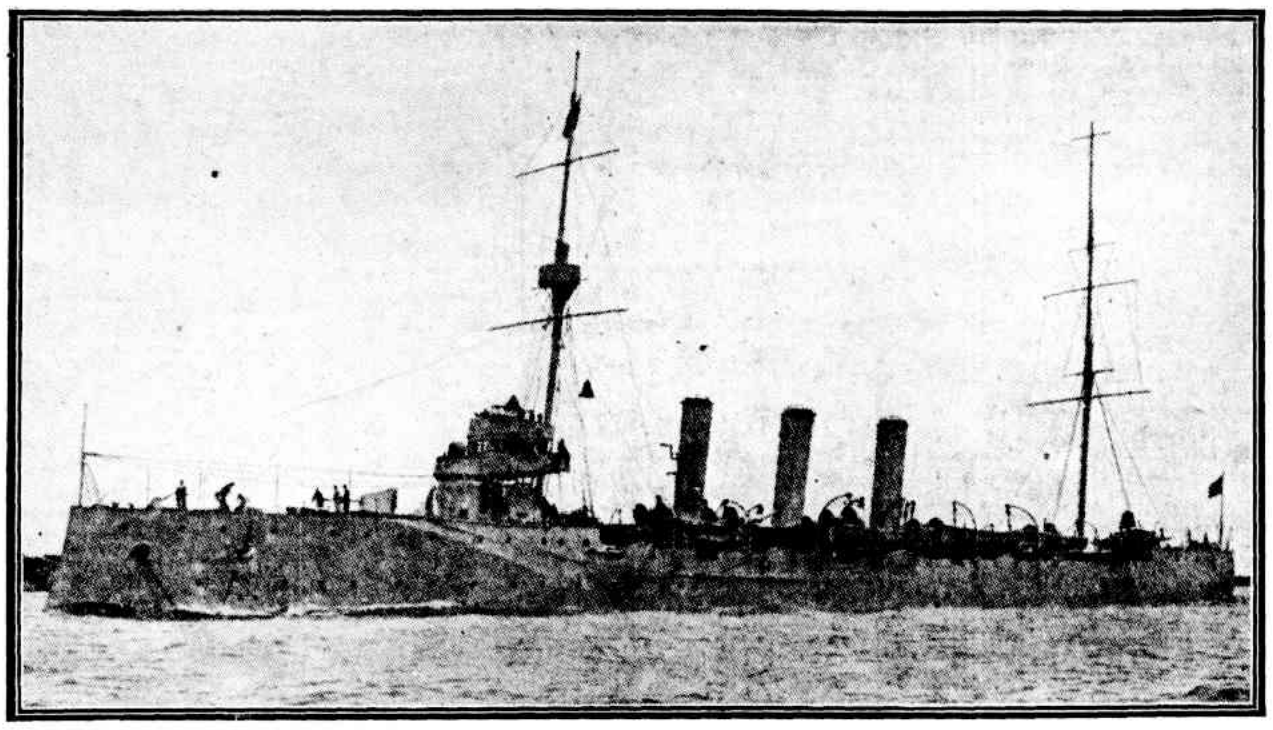
Because France was pessimistic in 1870, we have been apt to infer that pessimism and scepticism are national traits of Frenchmen; we are apt to forget that this pessimism was merely a transient phase resulting from a long period of national disasters. It arose from the world-wide scepticism of nineteenth century philosophy, and from its unreasoning belief in the omnipotence of science, and the impossible search for abstract artistic perfection; it drew strength from the failure of the great schemes of Napoleon, the destruction of the "July monarchy" and the Second Republic. Then followed the disaster of 1870, the loss of two treasured provinces, and the humiliating terms of surrender to crown a long period of disappointment and failure. After the destruction of the traditions of twelve centuries, France lay crushed and bleeding under the sword of a despised foe. How could a nation under such circumstances be other than pessimistic? But, such is the temperament of the French nation, that it has risen triumphantly from its reverses, and now faces the future with its old optimism, courage, and faith. As Bergson points out, the change is due not merely to a transformation of ideas, but to a "real recreation of the will." Foreign readers find it difficult to realise this great transformation of a whole nation through the might and power of its literary leaders. Anatole France and Pierre Loti are the authors who are most widely read outside France but within France they represent a bygone phase. The anarchy, scepticism, and irony of Anatole France; the pessimism and despair of Loti find no sympathetic note in the pages of the younger writers of the type of Barres, Bourget, Rolland, Vogue, Rod, and Bergson. These latter writers represent the school of "traditionalists," "unanimists," "idealists;" with perfect devotion and whole-souled energy they have urged "la jeunesse" to turn its gaze to the glories of the past, to find therein the inspiration and the courage to found a belief in the individuality and personality of "La France." The magnificent unanimity of the French people at the present day is almost wholly due to the influence of these writers. The success of their efforts, too, is a tribute to the power of literature in moulding the character and will of a people.

The newspaper, the magazine, the novel, the review to-day stand pre-eminent as educational agents, for it is due to them that the great leaders of the French youth have been able to kindle and fan the flames of patriotism and self-esteem which characterise the best of what is typically "French."

Unfortunately, these writers make an appeal mainly to French readers. Barres represents their position when he says: "Etant Français je juge toutes choses au point de vue français." Such writers are not tempting to translators, and therefore those not in touch with French literature are apt to form hasty and unjust conclusions from the analysis of Anatole France, the pessimism of Loti and the fatalism of Maeterlinck or Rodenbach. To non-French readers the real literary leaders, and consequently the real French spirit, are alike unknown. The genius of Bergson combating the determinism of Taine and Renan; the appeal to the medieval traditions by Bourget, Adam, and Rod; the life-long struggle of Maurice Barres and of Brunetière to rekindle the religious faith of France—these are the aspects which are unknown except to those who read and know French contemporary literature.

And these facts make us proud that we are standing shoulder to shoulder with a nation of idealists, battling against the narrow materialism of Germany—against the narrow prejudice of a foe fed on the lustful, murderous determinism of Trietschke, Nietzsche, or Bernhardi. This contrast of the two literatures is important. It shows that the struggle is between two ideas; and until one of them has its basis destroyed, the struggle must go on. In the beginning of the nineteenth century Madame de Stael appealed to the German idealists, Fichte, Schlegel, and Schiller—against the scepticism of France at that epoch. Yet, to-day, we find Maurice Barres appealing to French idealism against the materialism of modern Germany! Yet Stael's "L'Allemagne," and Barres' "Au service de L'Allemagne," are both masterpieces of truth and sentiment, opposite as their themes may appear. For, from the war of 1870, France, through the instrumentality of her writers, learnt humility and idealism; Germany, on the other hand, drew from it arrogance, ambition, and materialism. Germany has learnt to break, to slay, and to spoil, while France has been taught to build, unite, and create. French writers have created the spirit and the will, based on religion and tradition, to regard the maintenance of national ideals as a labour of love and of duty. When the scroll of fame is unrolled, then, in the near future, the names of the literary leaders will share the place of honour with the martial leaders who are fighting to-day, "pour la plus grande gloire de la France."

THE SHIP THAT BRAVED THE MINEFIELDS.



H.M.S. AMETHYST.

The vessel which, risking the dangers of a thickly-strewn mine area, penetrated three miles into "the narrows" in the Dardanelles, and reached Nagura. She must have run the gauntlet of a heavy fire from the shore batteries, but only three shells are said to have struck her. The Amethyst figured prominently in the Heligoland battle, and was also damaged on that occasion.

ALTERED OPINIONS.

"THE BEST OF TROOPS."

An editor of the "Berliner Tageblatt" who is taking part in the battles in Flanders as an officer of the reserve has sent a letter to his paper, in which he says that the British soldier is not to be underrated. He writes:—

"Our young soldiers show an eager desire for the fight, and they are marching to the battlefields with the intention of catching British soldiers, as they say. Every one of them was firmly convinced that God gave the Englishmen their long legs in order that they might the better run away. One remembers the many sketches and cartoons of Tommy Atkins. Sooner than we expected we met the enemy. We discovered in a house two severely wounded British officers, and we seized their diaries which contained very valuable notes. One hour later the first British prisoner was brought in. 'He looks like a chauffeur,' our men said. 'Are they good shots?' they asked. After another hour the comrades of the captured Englishman gave us their answer to the question whether they could shoot or not. And they did it so plainly that after the first encounters our battalion was reduced to half its number. We learnt that the clean-shaven gentlemen do not always use their long legs for the flight, but now and then for very severe attacks. In a few hours we found that our enemy was not to be dealt with as a 'quantité negligeable.'

"The British infantry opposed to us round Ypres can only be described as the best of troops. The great vigour with which the British soldiers defended their positions was admirable, and when they were repulsed they always tried, mostly during the night, to regain the lost terrain. In these attempts they are effectively assisted by their artillery, which is equal to the French and the German artillery.

"The main strength of the British infantry lies, without doubt, in defence and the good use of their terrain. Here the instinct of the British hunting man is very useful to him, and of this the average infantryman has none. The British recruit is very quick in learning the use of his rifle, the utilisation of the terrain, and patrolling. The handiness of the British soldier we could well observe during the many battles in this neighbourhood. The British trenches were so skilfully arranged that they could not be seen with the naked eye. When we occupied the first British trenches we were astonished at their good construction as regards depth, side-cover against splinters of shells, and breastworks. They were all well prepared for a long resistance. The greatest surprise for us was the number of steel plates which were used for the strengthening of the trenches. The resting places were abundantly provisioned, and our men found there great stores of preserved provisions, i.e., corned beef and other tinned meats and vegetables. Many of our men discovered also a fresh supply of razors.

"The British soldier is an expert in patrolling. I often followed with my field-glasses a British patrol, and I could see that their work was very clever, much better than our men could do. We Germans must not underrate the British mercenaries."—Reuter.

NEW SIGHT AT BLACKHEATH.

BLACKHEATH, Friday.

A new sight of exceptional beauty and grandeur was opened at Blackheath by the councillors of the Blue Mountains Shire. The members of the Blackheath New Sights Committee accompanied the councillors.

The new sight is probably one of the most extensive on the Blue Mountains. It is viewed from a narrow neck of land jutting out beyond a peninsula known as Shiply, and famous for its apples, into the Kanimbla, Megalong, and Jamieson Valleys, and is reached by a drive of six miles. Commencing at the north, one sees the mountains which overlook Rydal; then follows Hassan's Walls and Bowenfels, with the smoke of the blast furnaces at Lithgow rising high above the range. Then the road to the Jenolan Caves is distinctly discernible all along the top of the Black Range. The descent to the Jenolan Caves is also plainly visible. Further still, beyond a tumultuous mass of mountains, one plainly recognises the peaks which surround Moss Vale and Bowral. Turning round, in the foreground are the Narrow Neck and Pulpit Hill, with Medlow Bath in the distance. The view at the bottom of the valley is indescribable. Unlike ordinary valleys, it is an accumulation of large mountains. The top barely reaches the height of the Lookout. The view is unique, and especially fine at sunset, when the shadow of each mountain is thrown upon the next, and shows the immensity of the abyss which separates them.

TRADES AND LABOUR.

PRIVY COUNCIL APPEAL.

Mr. J. Millard, secretary to the Builders' Labourers' Federation of Australasia, stated yesterday that it was estimated £2000 would be required to fight the appeal being taken to the Privy Council by the Master Builders' Association on the validity of the recent Commonwealth Arbitration Court award. "We consider that in this matter we are fighting the cause for the whole of organised labour," said Mr. Millard. "We fought our own fight twice before the High Court of Australia, where we won, and the whole of organised labour is vitally interested in the question as to whether or not our own High Court is to be the final arbiter in deciding Australian industrial disputes."

CONDITIONS AT NEW ABATTOIRS.

The secretary of the Meat Industry Employees' Union, Mr. T. Furse, who is also a member of the Abattoirs Board, states that the new abattoirs will be opened about the second week in April. He says it is the intention of the board to render the working conditions of the men as little irksome as possible. Dungarees, jumpers, and leggings are to be provided, he says, and each man will have a locker to himself. Both hot and cold baths are also to be provided.

PREFERENCE IN JAM FACTORIES.

The complaint of the Factory Employees' Union that the clause of the award granting preference to unionists is not being observed in several large jam factories has been referred to the wages board, and it has been decided to visit the factories concerned on March 24. The secretary of the union, Mr. Carter, says that 85 of the non-unionists in the jam factories have joined during the week.

SEWER WORKERS AT CANBERRA.

The secretary of the Railway Workers and General Labourers' Union says that the dispute about the wages paid to sewer workers at Canberra has not yet been settled. The union has asked the Minister for Home Affairs, Mr. Archibald, to meet its officials in conference.

BAKING TRADE.

MR. HALL'S TOUGH PROPOSITION.

It would appear that the Attorney-General (Mr. Hall) is likely to find an alliance of masters and men arrayed against him in his efforts to nationalise the baking industry.

The secretary of the Master Bakers (Mr. C. Dyer) says that the employers propose to contest this effort to foist State socialism on the State at their expense, and that he has received numerous offers of assistance. The masters, however, have adjourned the matter till Wednesday, when a conference is to be held, at which the definite attitude of the employers will probably be announced.

The Operative Bakers' Union has met this week, and the secretary, Mr. Halliday, states that the union is much opposed to the Attorney-General's scheme. The opinions expressed, he says, were that the union could not possibly endorse a proposal which would inevitably throw a large number of men out of work. The meeting adopted without dissent the following resolution:—"That this meeting condemns any action that may be taken by the Government that will minimise labour, and so throw hundreds of men out of employment."

Referring to the question of day baking, Mr. Halliday states that the award just issued covering the South Coast districts practically ensures day-baking. It provides for a 48-hour week, except in weeks where holidays occur. The working hours are to be between 6 a.m. and 9 p.m. on ordinary days, 6 a.m. and 10 p.m. on "double" days, and 6 a.m. and 11 p.m. on "treble" days. The principal rate of wages fixed are:—Dough-maker or board hand, £3 per week; single-handed baker or foreman, £3 7s 6d per week; foreman in charge of two or more men, £3 12s 6d; breadcarter, £2 12s 6d. The latter's hours are fixed at from 42 to 54 per week.

MOTOR DRIVERS.

LISMORE, Friday.

At the request of the Country Traders' Association the sitting was opened yesterday of the Transport Board No. 10, governing carters.

Mr. Connington, for the employees, said the present award provided that motor-drivers ranged from 48 to 53 hours per week, and wages for vehicles to 25cwt capacity from £2 12s 6d to £2 15s per week. He proposed to ask for a minimum wage of £3 to 25cwt, and increase of 5s per ton or portion thereof capacity over 25cwt, and on a similar basis to horse carters. The board then adjourned.

ENEMY TRADE-MARK.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Friday.

The first case in New Zealand for the voidance of a trademark granted to an enemy subject was heard at Wellington. It was brought by Baldwin and Rayward, on behalf of the Australian Manufacturing and Importing Company, Sydney. The trademark was the name Matador, registered for lamps and lanterns manufactured by Ehrich and Graetz, Berlin. E. Cooper, director of the Sydney company, stated that for several years the company had distributed lamp-heaters and other sundries under the trademark Matador. In some cases the parts had been put together in Australia. At present the company could not defend any infringement of the trademark. The application was brought with the object of securing the sole right to its use. It was intended to manufacture articles under the trademark in Australia and New Zealand. The action was not brought with any feeling of antagonism to the German firm, but merely because the Australian company wanted to preserve its rights under the trademark. The Australian company had no connection with the German company, nor any share in the business. They were simply distributors of goods. If the present registration was not granted there would be the importation of inferior goods from foreign countries, and considerable trade lost to the Empire, and to the manufacturing trade in New Zealand. The decision was reserved.

WOMAN FIRED AT.

AUCKLAND, Friday.

A sensational incident occurred in Queen-street, when a man pulled a revolver from his pocket, and fired at a woman, fortunately missing his mark. The woman states that the assailant was a perfect stranger to her. The police effected an arrest, accused being remanded.

AUSTRIAN FINED.

BATHURST, Friday.

In fining an unnaturalised Austrian subject £2, with costs, for hawking goods without a license, Mr. A. Gates, P.M., of Blayney, refused the application of the defendant for a license, remarking, "What could a British subject expect if he made such a request in Germany or Austria?"

LIQUOR TRADE.

NORTHERN TERRITORY.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

A short time ago it was announced by the Minister for External Affairs (Mr. Mahon) that it had been determined to nationalise the liquor traffic in the Northern Territory. The Minister stated yesterday that he hoped to bring the new system into operation as far as the majority of the hotels in the territory were concerned by October next. There were, he added, two or three hotels in isolated places which it was not intended to deal with for the present. At a later date the question of these places would be taken into consideration.

Reference was also made by Mr. Mahon to the reconstitution of the district council in Darwin. The new regulations are to come into operation on July 1, and they will provide for a council consisting of three Government nominees and of four members elected on a residential franchise. Under the old conditions, there was a property vote, but this has now been abolished.

MADDENED COW.

ARMIDALE, Friday.

A serious accident happened close to the Armidale Showground. An exhibition cow was being removed from the ground, when it bolted through the principal street, where a large crowd was returning from the ground. The stockman in charge galloped in front of the maddened beast, which charged the horse, ripping its flanks badly. Continuing on its way, it knocked down a number of people. A little girl was badly gored in the face, and had to have an eye removed at the hospital. The animal fell in the midst of the crowd, when a plucky pedestrian rushed up and pithed the cow in the head, ending its mad career.

Mr. Edward H. T. Russell, of the firm of Russell and Russell, solicitors, has been appointed a commissioner of the Supreme Court of Victoria for taking affidavits in New South Wales.

CASUALTIES.

FOUND ON THE CLIFFS.

An inquiry was held yesterday by the City Coroner into the death of Albert Joseph Coyle, whose body was found on the cliffs at South Head on March 12. Constable Edward Stokes stated that he found the body near the edge of the cliffs, and a five-chambered revolver was clutched in the deceased's right hand. Linda Grace Coyle, deceased's widow, stated that he had suffered from insomnia. The deceased left home at 8 a.m. on March 12, which was his usual hour for going to business. He gave no indication of doing away with himself. Dr. A. A. Palmer said that there was a bullet wound in the deceased's right temple, which was the cause of death, and might have been self-inflicted. A verdict that the wound was wilfully self-inflicted was recorded.

DEATHS FROM BURNS.

The City Coroner, Mr. H. S. Hawkins, held an inquiry into the death of Eva Sorchsen, which occurred at Cronulla on March 14. The evidence showed that the deceased was in delicate health, and while engaged in cooking an explosion of methylated spirits occurred, which set fire to her clothing. A verdict of accidental death was recorded.

The body of August Burmeister, an elderly German, was found in the bush off the Cemetery-road, South Randwick, on March 8. An inquiry held yesterday by the City Coroner showed that the deceased had been overtaken by a bush fire, and a verdict of accidental death, due to burns, was returned.

THROWN FROM A HORSE.

MOLONG, Friday.

Mr. J. Paddison was riding in an impromptu horse race with his brother on a farm at Manildra, when his mount stumbled, and the rider was hurled with great force on to a stump, sustaining concussion of the brain.

TWO MEN KILLED.

KALGOORLIE (W.A.), Friday.

An accident occurred on the Trans-australian railway line on Tuesday, resulting in the death of two men, while a third man was slightly injured. A number of men who had been working at the head of the line were riding back to their camp in an open truck. At the 199-mile post the train stopped to pick up some more trucks, and during shunting operations the truck on which the men were travelling was bumped so violently that three of the occupants were thrown out. Cecil Mallon and Michael Sullivan fell on the rails and were run over, one being killed instantly, and the other dying on the way to the hospital car. James McCarthy was thrown clear of the line, and escaped with slight injuries.

FOUND ON RAILWAY LINE.

ABERDEEN, Friday.

Robert Dowe had a narrow escape from death last night. After the Brisbane mail passed Aberdeen station he was found on the line. Part of his left foot was cut off, and the heel badly crushed, the boot being crushed to pulp. Constable Boland, with the assistance of Nurse McLeod, removed the man to Muswellbrook Hospital, where he was admitted in a serious condition.

FALL UNDER A TRAIN.

MOSS VALE, Friday.

Shortly after 7 o'clock yesterday morning at Werai station, Duggan, a guard, in charge of a ballast train from Goulburn, was engaged shunting when he fell under the wheels, which passed over both legs below the knee. The mail train was stopped, and the injured man conveyed to Moss Vale, where it was found that both legs were shockingly injured. Dr. Quinn ordered his removal to Bowral District Hospital, both legs being amputated.

FOOT AMPUTATED.

MUSWELLBROOK, Friday.

LATE CLERK OF PARLIAMENT.

MR. CALVERT'S DEATH IS REPORTED ELSEWHERE.

MILITARY STORES.

STOLEN FROM DRILL HALL.

FOUR MEN CHARGED.

Considerable interest attached to the hearing of a case at the Water Police Court yesterday, by Mr. William Clarke, S.M., in which four men were charged with stealing a large quantity of oil and cartridges, military stores, from the Drill Hall, at the rear of Victoria Barracks, in Park-road, Paddington.

John Gribble, aged 42, William Poole, 38, William Henry Hamey, 55, and Josiah Chivers, 57, were charged with stealing 12 drums of Russian lubricating oil (used for the preservation of rifles), and 11,000 rifle cartridges, the whole valued at £72 6s 6d, between the 2nd and 6th instant. Mr. Bathgate, of the Crown Law Office, appeared to conduct the prosecution. Poole was represented by Mr. J. J. Carroll. The other three accused were undefended. All pleaded not guilty. Both Gribble and Poole are Staff-Sergeant-Majors, in the employ of the Commonwealth Defence Department.

The case against accused was that on the 2nd instant, and again on the 5th, a vanman named Hunter was employed by Hamey, from off the van-rank at Forbes-street, Darlinghurst, to go to the Paddington Drill Hall, with orders addressed to Gribble and Poole, there to take delivery of the oil and the cartridges, and to deliver them to business people in the city. Police evidence was that Hamey and Chivers admitted having instructed the carter, and also to having met him in the city, where the goods were sold. The 12 drums of oil were sold to Messrs. William Adams, Limited, of 44 Carrington-street, and the cartridges were sold to Messrs. Mick Simmons, Limited, Haymarket. A cheque for £6 was received from the former firm by Chivers, who gave a receipt for the money, and Hamey received a cheque for £17 15s from Mick Simmons, and gave a receipt for it. The purchasers of the goods were told that they were surplus stocks, which had been sold by auction by the Ordnance Department, in George-street North.

The carter stated that he was met at the Drill Hall by Gribble and Poole, and was not asked to show the order he had been given. He was simply told on each occasion to "back his cart in." He stated that Gribble and Poole had assisted him to load the goods on to his van. Lieutenant-Colonel Croker, in charge of the 21st Infantry, stated that S.S.M. Gribble was under his control, and had no authority to dispose of any military stores. Major Marks, in charge of the 24th Infantry, made a similar statement about S.S.M. Poole.

In reply to the charge, after the evidence, each of the accused said: "I reserve my defence," and the four men were committed to stand their trial at the Sydney Quarter Sessions, beginning on April 6.

WHY GERMANS COVET AUSTRALIA.

(BY SEA RUE.)

In the van of science as applied to commercial and industrial enterprise, the Germans have stood alone as the greatest metallurgists on this planet. How extensively her exploiting ambition was directed towards Australia has partly come to light through the paralysis of our whole mineral industry immediately following the declaration of war. But few, even at this eleventh hour, are aware of the comprehensive knowledge of the undeveloped treasures of this continent that the Germans possessed many years ago; a far more accurate knowledge than the bulk of Australians have of their own country, or of the boundless wealth lying in the bowels of the earth at their own back doors. How many Australians have the faintest idea of the opulence of the enormous area inland from Cairns, North Queensland, a region which abounds in every mineral known to science, and some that were unknown until quite recently? Beyond a comparative few who are engaged in mining enterprises, it would be safe to assert that this and other unopened treasure-houses are as generally unknown as Yucatan or Thibet. But the Germans have long since been fully informed of this delectable land, and they were not slow to make a bold bid for the lion's share of the spoil.

For a long time German buyers had eagerly bought up all the wolfram that had been won from the extensive deposits of that mineral already being worked. It appears that the astute Teutonic metallurgists discovered other valuable properties inherent in wolfram than the tungstic acid used in the manufacture of steel. Their exclusive knowledge, in this and other directions, was not proclaimed from the housetops. The comparatively cheap mineral which for a long while was thought to be scheelite by the unsophisticated miners found a ready market with German buyers until some doubting Thomas sent a sample of the stone for analysis to Archdeacon Campbell, then filling a long-felt want in Cairns. A notable geologist, formerly lecturer in geology at the Technical College, Sydney, and author of the prospectors' vade mecum, "Simple Tests for Minerals," he combined with his clerical duties an instruction class in geology, aided by a laboratory, which was supported by voluntary subscriptions, mainly from miners, prospectors, and others who were anxious to learn the rudiments of mineralogy. This labour of love by that public spirited Churchman was extended to the gratuitous analysis of samples sent to him by bona-fide miners or prospectors. The result of his analysis of the so-called scheelite was a tribute to German previousness, for it turned out to be monozite, a radio-active mineral, worth about £1100 a ton.

About this time Teutonic activity was manifested in other directions, but all forming part of a meticulously matured scheme. Representations were made by German syndicate to the Queensland Government, whereby it was proposed to acquire vast mineral concessions in the country back of Cairns. The Germans also guaranteed to proceed with mining and smelting operations on a gigantic scale, to be supplemented by a regular steamship service from Hamburg to Cairns and Brisbane; provided, that the Queensland Government deepened and widened the channel of Trinity Bay, Cairns; as well as that of the Brisbane River, and also the grant of extensive wharfage frontage to that river at Pinkenba, so as to admit of the berthing of the largest vessels of the Nord Deutscher Lloyd Company. However, the alluring prospect embodied in these modest proposals was declined, to the eternal credit of the Queensland Government.

These lines have been prompted by an observation of Archdeacon Boyce, published after his return from a holiday abroad. "I have no doubt," he said, "that Australia is deeply concerned in this war, because, if the Empire is lost, she will most certainly be attacked." That the Germans will attend to our case, with the utmost despatch and their unique solicitude for the comfort of noncombatants if ever they get the chance, is the most palpable platitude. They have long since begun the peaceful invasion of Australia, the undrained treasure house of the world, by the same insidious methods by which their cohorts of immigrants have so leavened the population of the United States as to create a very powerful pro-German section of public opinion there. Their spheres of influence in South America have been of such practical value as were responsible for the defeat of Admiral Cradock's squadron off Chili.

EASTER EARLY CLOSING.

Shops which usually close at 1 o'clock on Wednesday may remain open until 10 p.m. on Thursday, April 1, and Saturdays, April 3 and 10, and until 6 o'clock (hairdressers' shops 7.30 p.m.) on Wednesdays, March 31 and April 7.

BARRIER RAILWAY.

CEREMONY AT CONDOBOLIN.

FIRST SOD TURNED.

CONDOBOLIN, Friday.

To-day Mr. Arthur Griffith performed the ceremony of officially turning the first sod of the Condobolin-Broken Hill railway in the presence of a large and representative attendance. The Parliamentary party consisted of Messrs. Farrar, M.L.C., Thomas Brown (member for the district), Jabez Wright, and Robert Scobie, Ms.L.A.

Mr. D. H. Tasker (Mayor of Condobolin) introduced Mr. Griffith, who said that, owing to the assistance of the Commonwealth Government and a loan from the Commonwealth Bank, a commencement of the work was rendered possible, and it would be completed by Norton Griffiths at a total cost of £1,500,000. He also spoke of the strategical importance of the line.

Mr. Brown then called upon Mr. Jabez Wright, who dwelt on the development of the resources which the line would bring about, and stated that for 16 years he had advocated its construction.

Mr. Scobie spoke of the coal mines which would be opened up in consequence of the line. He stated that Mr. Harper had been sent by Mr. Johnson to give evidence. He had estimated a profit of £18,000 a year from the line when completed.

Before the ceremony a visit was paid to the hospital. A grant of £500 was asked for, as the finances were in a very bad state. The Minister said he would see his colleagues.

COUNTRY NEWS.

QUARTER SESSIONS.

DUBBO, Friday.

At the Quarter Sessions Thomas Wright, who had pleaded guilty to an assault upon a girl at Blayney, was brought up for sentence. His Honor sentenced Wright to six months' hard labour in Goulburn gaol, sentence to be suspended on his finding one surety of £50 for his good behaviour for 12 months, and his own recognisances for a similar sum. His Honor pointed out that the lenient sentence was due to accused's youth, and because he wished him to have another chance. Otto Schrieter, who pleaded guilty to stealing from a dwelling at Wellington, was brought up for sentence. His Honor said the accused was a German, and he supposed he found a difficulty on account of his nationality to obtain work. He did not know why this should be, if a man was a decent citizen. His Honor was a true Britisher, and he thought the fact of a man being a German, if he were a good citizen, should not debar him from getting employment. The sentence of the Court was that he be sentenced to 12 months' hard labour in Goulburn gaol, to be suspended under the First Offenders' Act if a reputable surety could be found, and that he enter into a bond to repay Mr. May for his loss. The surety was fixed at self in £50, and one of £50, the surety to be £25 for the repayment of the money.

At the Quarter Sessions William Wheeler was acquitted of a charge of robbing George Brownlow at Trangie, on February 5.

TRADE AND VALUES AFFECTED.

The Stock Exchange lacked activity yesterday morning. Indeed, some sections were in a disturbed condition, with the result that the number of transactions recorded fell away considerably. Values were also affected in several cases.

In the copper division, Mount Morgans commanded firm support, and sold 1/ better. Hampdens also recovered some of the ground lost earlier in the week, whilst Corella Copper were unobtainable at a sold figure.

In Barriers, B.H. Proprietary again sold on the firm side, whilst the call for other leading silver shares showed strength on the part of buyers, with sellers holding firm.

The tin section was in a disturbed condition. Deebooks again sold on the weak side, but Tongkah Compound recovered 3d. The last fortnightly return was 12 tons of tin oxide. Other Eastern tin propositions were slack from a buyers' point of view, but sellers refused to make the concessions demanded.

A marked change for the better was noticeable during the afternoon. Several stocks made a distinct recovery. This occurred in the case of Corella Copper, Hampdens, B.H. Proprietary, British (old), Tongkah Compound, and Tongkah Harbour.

MINING NOTES.

The manager of the New Associated Gold Dredging Company reports:—"The dredge started to open out on the 13th inst., and the first clean up resulted in 17oz of gold being won. The ground treated was old. Latest indications point to solid material being struck at any moment. All the machinery is working well."

Last month the mill of the Bullfinch Proprietary, Ltd. (W.A.), crushed 6050 tons of ore for 2583oz of gold, valued at £8218/15/. The total working expenses were £5206/5/, equal to 17/2.5d per ton. The total working profits were £3012/10/. The increase in costs was principally due to the short month.

THE NEW GOLD FINDS.

Activity is being maintained at the scene of the new gold find near Newbridge. A trial crushing is reported as having given satisfactory results. Many prospectors are expected to be on the field shortly.

BATHURST, Friday.

The new gold find in the Burraga district is situated at Jacky's Flat, about six miles from Burraga, and a few miles away from the Lloyd copper mine. There are said to be gold, silver, and copper in the vicinity. The showing of gold is good. The surface formation consists of about 24ft of ironstone. This field is unprospected as yet. Prospecting is not allowed until the warden grants authority, and assesses the rent and compensation to be payable to the owner of the land. After inspecting the field the warden will deal with applications to enter the land.

A great many applications for authority to enter the land are also pending in the Blayney division, where recently a gold find was located near Newbridge.

MOUNT LYELL MINE.

QUEENSTOWN, Friday.

No. 41 ore body at the North Lyell mine continues to supply a fair tonnage of ore from the ground floor, which proved a larger area than anticipated. A fair start has been made stoping overhead, and some very rich ore was won. Excellent ore is also coming from the southern end of Nos. 36 and 37 stopes, and the ore from No. 40 stope body (lower level) also maintains a good value. The 525ft level is now an appreciable contributor to the aggregate output. The connection drive from the No. 2 level of the North Lyell will reach the Crown shaft. The third furnace, which was out of commission last week, was restarted on Sunday. The output of copper for the current half-year ending Wednesday week is expected to reach 4000 tons.

ARDLETHAN TIN FIELD.

THE WATER DIFFICULTY.

ARDLETHAN, Friday.

At the Warden's Court, held on Monday and Tuesday last, Mr. Warden James dealt with a number of applications for suspension of labour conditions, and several were granted. Some of the cases occupied a considerable amount of the time, notably that of the Black and White Syndicate, also that of the Wild Cherry Company for partial suspension.

In the case of the Black and White evidence was given that efforts were being made to locate a central and suitable site near the greatest body of ore for a battery. As soon as this was done full work would be at once resumed. The application of the Wild Cherry was opposed by a representative of the A.M.A. Mr. E. P. Johnson, giving evidence for the Cherry Company, stated that as soon as water was available the company would only be too pleased to resume work with a full number of hands, and under the partial suspension sought were prepared to employ up to 10 men. The objections brought forward were overruled by the Warden, who granted a partial suspension for three months.

At the Wild Cherry the northern drive at the 100 feet level is being pushed on. Boring operations were commenced on Saturday, the 13th, and at time of writing the bore is down 40 feet. Mr. Nolan expects to get to water in about five or six weeks' time. It is costing £5 a week to keep a supply of water up to the boring plant. At the Southern Cross the water will be exhausted next week.

VEGETABLE CREEK TIN MINING COMPANY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I notice that attention is being drawn to the unsatisfactory—from a shareholders' point of view—mine reports that are published. There are many things that might, from time to time be made known—that from market appearances, operators are aware of—that would save holders of shares parting with their interests through ignorance of. For instance, from what part of the mine is ore being raised, and what is the quantity of tin on hand? It would be an easy matter if report said, Seven tons for week, making 70 tons, as the case may be, on hand. On the street, report has it that it is the intention to muddle along until 100 tons are on hand—which quantity I am told could, without effort be raised per month. Fancy £12,500 of ore on hand—sufficient to pay a 2s dividend, and the shareholders in ignorance. Surely, with tin nearly £200 a ton, more energy should be applied.

I am, etc., DIVIDENDS.

BROKEN HILL MILL RETURN.

Sulphide Corporation, Central mine (weekly report).—Ore milled, 5342 tons; concentrates produced, 1074 tons; assay of concentrates, silver 33.7oz, lead 63.8 per cent., and zinc 8.6 per cent.

VULCAN TIN MINE.

The manager, reporting on March 1, says:—

1050ft Level, No. 2 Crosscut.—This face has reached a point 29ft from off the main drive, passing through tin-bearing material the whole distance. The best values appear to be going underfoot.

750ft Stope, S.E.—This stope has been opened up 8ft x 20ft. We are rising on this ore for the full width and length. Value approximately 2 per cent. for black tin.

550ft Stope.—This stope has improved in length and width, being now over 40ft in length and 3ft wide. The values are good.

Ore Treated.—During the month crushed 964 tons 2cwt 3qrs. of ore, producing 31 tons 11cwt 1qr 7lb. concentrates, which realised £2288/7/8.

ZINC CORPORATION, LIMITED.

No. 6 level: Rise 460ft, south; extended in country rock to a height of 104ft above the back of stope.

The despatches of leady concentrates to the Broken Hill Proprietary Company's Port Pirie works for the month totalled 2549 tons.

AUSTRAL-MALAY TIN, LIMITED.

The subjoined note has been circulated to shareholders in the above company by the secretary:—"Advices have been received from the managing director, stating that after careful examination of the Kulim area it has been decided not to continue prospecting that property, but several other areas are now receiving attention. With the approaching completion of the No. 1 dredge of the Kampong Company an active prospecting campaign is again being entered upon, and shareholders will be kept advised of the results obtained. The Kampong dredge will, it is expected, start before the end of this month, so that some definite dredging results for comparison with the prospectus estimates of that company should shortly be available. Kelly Maitland, whose resignation was accepted by the committee last month. Dr. Lang was for many years a breeder in the Corowa district, and also raced horses. He was secretary of the Corowa Racing Club for many years.

It was officially stated to-day that Mr. Lou Robertson, the owner of Saracen, had been fined £25 by the V.A.T.C. committee. Saracen was overlooked at the start of the South Yarra Handicap at Caulfield last Saturday, and the fine arises out of remarks alleged to have been made by Mr. Robertson after the race. The remarks were reported to the authorities by Mr. Rupert Greene, the starter.

The Lintie left for Sydney to-day to take part in the A.J.C. Autumn Meeting. De Gama will not be sent over.

The president congratulated the association in the matter of sending players to the front. Chatswood and Acme teams suffer most in this respect, as all the leading players have gone. Both clubs are in doubt about being able to get a team together this season. Mr. F. Stacey was elected president, Mr. S. Budnick secretary, and Mr. A. G. BOXING.

DEMLEN V LOUGHREY.

Henri Demlen, welterweight champion of Belgium, will appear at the stadium to-night, at 8.30, in a 20-round contest with Frank Loughrey (U.S.A.). Demlen is equal to any other man his weight in Europe, having beaten the French champion, Degand, and won and lost against the Swiss champion, Badoud. The brilliant English welter, Basham, proved too good for the Belgian. Loughrey is a tough and persistent assailant, who has earned great credit in his three battles with Pat. Bradley, Mick King, and Les. Darcy. There will be two six-round preliminaries, Herb. Sullivan v Herb. Williams, and Jack Mayne v Frank Lee. The first preliminary will begin at a quarter to 8.

OLYMPIA STADIUM.

At the Olympia Stadium to-night the two six-round contests will be between Ben Tracey and Charlie Liner, and Bob Foran and Arthur Farrell. In addition there will be four three-round bouts, as well as vaudeville items.

JEFF SMITH v LES DARCY.

It has been definitely arranged by Mr. Reg. L. Baker that Les Darcy and Jeff Smith meet on Easter Saturday, April 3, for the middleweight championship of the world.

HAROLD HARDWICK v MICK KING.

On Easter Monday, April 5, Harold Hardwick, who recently defeated Les O'Donnell in his first professional contest, will be opposed to Mick King. Both boxers are agreeing to the contest being at 11st 10lb at ringside.

The big contest at the Sydney Stadium next Saturday night will be between Walter Coffey, the American middle; and Albert Lloyd, the new middleweight discovery. It will be both men's first appearance in Sydney.

Herb M'Coy will oppose Young Abe Attell at Melbourne this evening. If M'Coy is successful he will meet Jimmy Coffey at the same arena on Easter Saturday.

To-night, in Brisbane, will see Reg Delaney (Regio) in opposition to Eugene Volaire, the hard-hitting Frenchman.

FIRE AT DARLINGHURST.

A fire was discovered in the cabinet-making factory and carpenters' shop of James O'Shea and Co., in Taylor and Chisholm streets, late last night, and before the flames were extinguished considerable damage was done. The building, which was of brick and iron, contained three floors. Apparently the fire started in the top story, for that floor, together with the whole of the contents, and the roof, was burnt out. The first and second floors, together with the contents, were severely damaged by fire and water. The cause of the outbreak is unknown.

STOLEN CARGO.

Alexander Flett, aged 32, a carpenter, employed by Messrs. Huddart, Parker, and Co., on the steamer Zealandia, yesterday pleaded guilty at the Water Police Court, before Mr. W. Clarke, S.M., to a charge of stealing 70lb (one bag) of sugar, while being loaded into the steamer at the Sussex-street wharf, on Thursday. It was stated that 40 bags of sugar were being lifted in a sling from a lighter into the steamer, when accused lifted one bag out of the sling, carried it to his locker, and locked the door. A representative of the company said Flett had been a trusted servant for many years. The magistrate was informed that a large quantity of sugar had been stolen from the vessel, extending over a lengthy period. Flett was fined £10, or in default three months' hard labour.

"NORMAN LINDSAY'S BOOK."

We have received from the publishers, the N.S.W. Bookstall Company, Ltd., a copy of "Norman Lindsay's Book, No. 2." In addition to short stories by Henry Lawson, Edward Dyson, Louis Stone, and others, including Mr. Lindsay himself, the book contains 75 drawings by this well-known artist. Of special interest are the half-dozen war cartoons, which Mr. Lindsay has included. The artists' hand has lost none of its cunning, and some of the line drawings are amongst the best things he has done.

Farmers of the United Kingdom are being asked to subscribe £100,000 for Red Cross work. It is hoped to provide two fever hospitals in Serbia, and to devote £80,000 to the work of the British Red Cross Society in England and on the Continent. The two hospitals in Serbia will be known as "The British Farmers' Hospitals for Serbians."

AMUSEMENTS.

HER MAJESTY'S—"CINDERELLA."

CLOSE OF "HIGH JINKS."

"High Jinks," which has crowded Her Majesty's Theatre throughout its run, came to an end last night amidst scenes of enthusiasm and floral presentations. Indeed, there can be no doubt that, but for the interruption of Easter, the American "musical jollity" would have held its place for weeks to come. The musical comedy provided plenty of good parts, and Messrs. Fisher, Workman, Rawlins, Plunkett, Misses Brunton, Glynn, Eaton, and Vie were all seen to advantage in it. The J. C. Williamson Company will introduce this piece in Melbourne next Saturday as the Easter attraction.

THEATRE ROYAL—"A ROYAL DIVORCE."

"A Royal Divorce" will be revived at 8 o'clock to-night at the Theatre Royal, with beautiful scenery, showing the Gardens of the Tuilleries, the Retreat from Moscow, the Advance, and the Rout at Waterloo, and the Exile at St. Helena. Bentley; Murat, James Hughes; Marshal Ney, Martin Lewis; Lord Keith, Lawrence Hardinge; Grimaud, Eardley Turner; Empress Josephine, Irene Browne; Empress Marie Louise, Dorothy Cumming; Stephanie de Beauharnais, Lizette Parkes; Nurse, Emma Temple; Angelique, Alma Phillips; Blanche, Bertha Ballinger; Madam de Campan, Stella Swifte; Little King of Rome, Baby Murray.

The Easter attraction will bring forward Mr. Knight in a new character in the new drama, "The Lifeguardsman" next Saturday evening.

CRITERION THEATRE.

"Bought and Paid For," George H. Broadhurst's new American comedy drama, is drawing large audiences at the Criterion Theatre, where the emotional strife between the millionaire and his wife, as strongly shown by Chas. Milward and Muriel Starr, is relieved by vivacious comedy passages. Dorothy Davies and William Harrigan cause much amusement in these scenes. There will be a matinee on Wednesday.

ADELPHI THEATRE.

"What Women will Do for Love," the last of the repertoire of Geo. Willoughby, Ltd.'s, entirely new dramatic company, is to be revived this afternoon at 2 o'clock. The list of works for the season will include a "Grand Messe des Morts" by Berlioz.

WIRTH'S CIRCUS.

Preparations for the opening of Wirth's Circus this evening at Prince Alfred Park are all in hand. The Sydney season should be a successful one, inasmuch as, with the addition of the new artists engaged by Mr. George Wirth during his recent visit to America, Great Britain, and France, the circus is stronger now than on any previous visit to Sydney. The transformations which take place during the story are of a nature to make one doubt one's eyes.

WHITE CITY.

Honest King Mirth continues to maintin his merry sway nightly at the White City, whither hundreds of his faithful subjects repair with wonderful regularity. The romance of treasure-hunting has proved an exceptional line this week, and the search for the "lucky spot," which will entitle the finder to sudden wealth, has proceeded fast and furiously. The three hair-raising and wirewalking Farokas disport themselves each evening in mid-air, causing a fearful joy in the hearts of all beholders. A fancy dress carnival has been arranged for Tuesday evening next.

Another big crowd thronged the White City last night in quest of the lucky spot, in which a piece of paper of a certain design, given to all who entered the grounds last night, would, when fitted into a particular spot located somewhere about the grounds, bring the lucky finder £25. The search commenced on Thursday, but no one was successful that night in finding the spot. £5 is added each night until the spot is found. Should it not have been claimed last night, the prize to the lucky finder to-night will be £30. The lucky spot is within view of all who enter the grounds, and within five feet of the ground, located in such a place that hundreds pass and repass it every night.

Another grand fancy dress carnival will be held next Thursday, when cash prizes, ranging in value from £1 to £10, will be awarded to the wearers of the best costumes in various classes, and to teams of six or more. All the amusements and entertainments of the park will be in full swing to-day from 2.30 to 11. The sensational aerial act of the Fearless Farokas, who perform on a 60ft high wire, will be given at 10.15 p.m., and continuous dancing in the ballroom from 8 to 11.

FEMALE EMPLOYEES.

DEMAND FOR DOMESTICS.

The monthly report which the Premier has received respecting the condition of the labour market makes interesting references to the employment of female labour.

Employers made 259 applications for labour during February, and 217 positions were filled. Several applications for employment were withdrawn early in the month, preference having been given by the employers to immigrants who had just arrived. "Many of the immigrants were typists and dressmakers," says the report, "yet many of our own girls finding employment difficult in these callings applied for domestic work."

Other passages read:—"Hotel work is most frequently asked for by domestic workers. The reasons are that the work is standardised, and living conditions much better than usually given in private employment. . . . Employment in the country is not viewed favourably—the wages offered do not compensate for the lack of city attractions. . . . Three unusual applications were received. Women well recommended, whose husbands are on service, wishing to augment their allowances, are willing to undertake the care of children daily—that is, during the absence of the mothers visiting, shopping, etc."

AMERICAN BEEF TRADE.

The Trade Commissioner in America, Mr. Niel Nielsen, has furnished the Premier with a report concerning the so-called Beef Trust. Facts about the trust, he says, it is impossible to establish. He makes a number of observations regarding what "seems to be" its methods, one being "the fixing of definite prices for stock of certain generally attained weights, and squeezing out any buyer who offers more or any seller who demands more."

GARBAGE REMOVAL.

The Chief Secretary, Mr. Black, stated yesterday that he had discovered that the Minister for Public Health, Mr. Flowers, was dealing with the question of the proper disposal by the civic and municipal authorities of garbage and refuse.

"However," said Mr. Black, "I intend to see if I cannot get the City Council to recognise that the dispersion of dirty paper and rags from the destructor at Moore Park, of which I spoke yesterday, is a very objectionable practice."

RED CROSS.

A very busy time is ahead of the women of New South Wales, who must be prepared to fit out with hospital comforts the troops who are now recruiting. Besides this regular supplies go to Mena, in Egypt, where continuous demands will be made on "our hospital." A dozen of everything is also sent to the field hospital at Liverpool every week to meet the inevitable casual ills among so many thousand men. Therefore, although the trying summer weather continues, the society asks for more helpers in sewing at the Town Hall to make up dark cambric and thin flannel. Plain upright collar bands are used on both shirts and pyjamas, and broad bands instead of the ordinary shirt cuff on shirts.

EASTERN PHILOSOPHY.

There is an immortal saying in the East, which says, "That more people die from worry than do of disease."

SO, WHY SHOULD WOMEN WORRY

any more over their blemishes and disfigurements when they have an expert of FIFTEEN YEARS' CITY EXPERIENCE working in the most central part of the city, giving every privacy, courtesy, and attention for a very small fee. I would like Ladies to particularly take note that I DO NOT CHARGE ONE GUINEA FOR EACH HAIR,

BUT REMOVE A CERTAIN

SPECIFIED NUMBER FOR ONE GUINEA.

I make mention of this, as so many ladies of late have remarked that they have been informed my fees were very high, and that has prevented them from coming to me. So don't stay away, but just come in and also have a few hairs removed permanently FREE OF CHARGE.

Then wait a month to convince yourself. And if you do come to me you can go home of all blemishes. No more worry, only a pleasant, smiling face, to greet husband, mother, sisters, or brothers on their return home after, possibly, a most trying day's work.

AND SEE REFLECTED IN YOUR MIRROR

FOR, A SMILE IS LIKE

SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS
OR MOLES

on any woman's face are a cause of discomfort, and ruin her appearance. Fortunately, there is no reason why she should remain so afflicted when a is available.

Electrolysis is the recognised treatment, and has proved its efficiency in thousands of cases. In fact, when the hair is removed by the hands of an expert it is nothing less than a certain and everlasting cure.

Its principal feature lies in the destruction and removal of the root of the hair, for if this is destroyed the hair cannot grow again.

I AM AN ELECTROLYSIS EXPERT, and am prepared to prove this to those ladies who will call for a

FREE TRIAL TREATMENT.

At this visit, which costs you nothing, I will demonstrate the process, and remove a few hairs, leaving the patient to say whether I am entitled to her confidence.

CALL AT ANY TIME

between the hours 10 and 5 p.m., or write making an appointment, so as to avoid waiting when you call, when my services, Free of charge, are at your disposal. I interview all patients personally. Absolute privacy is maintained by individual waiting rooms.

Note only address,
